Festival uncovers the unity behind the Tweed’s multicultural variety

Kim Cousins

The Tweed’s inaugural Unity Festival, held last Saturday, was such a success that organisers are planning to hold several similar events next year.

Coordinator Kerry Turner said the first Unity Festival was always going to be the hardest, but hundreds of people turned out for it, making it a ‘huge success’ and done on a budget of only $18,000.

‘It took a year of my life to plan,’ Kerry said. ‘If you want quality you’ve got to put work into it. You need to do a lot of community consultation, especially with something multicultural.’

Community services and government agencies were available on the day to give advice in an informal setting; African drumming was taught and Aboriginal games were played.

Kerry said what she enjoyed most of all was watching the interaction between festival goers.

‘Seeing all the happy children in the Kid’s Corner was wonderful. Entertainment was free, we will always do that. We did an evaluation of the festival and asked punters what they wanted more of. They said “culture”, she said.

Due to the big turnout at the festival, Kerry is now looking to hold four to five quality events each year in the Tweed.

‘These events can create jobs for young people. We just need really good planning and economy of scale,’ she said.

For 2010’s Unity Festival, Kerry is planning to hold the event for 12 hours, instead of seven. By the following year, she hopes to have it as a two-day event.

‘I want this event to become the Dreaming or Woodford Festival of the Tweed,’ Kerry said.

‘It’s been a vision of mine since I came to this town. I just can’t wait for the next one. But we’ll take little steps, and often. If you rush into these things they won’t work.’

People power kills ‘rail trails’ bill

Luis Feliu

Community groups on the Tweed and throughout the state have welcomed the government’s backdown on the controversial ‘rail trails’ bill, declaring it a win for people power.

The government last week withdrew its Transport Administration Amendment (Rail Trails) Bill, which could have seen the tracks from the closed-down Murwillumbah-Casino rail line ripped up and railway land sold off to developers.

Opposition parties, local councils, unions, farmers, environmental and other groups had united in a show of defiance culminating in a huge rally outside parliament house last month.

Trains On Our Tracks (TOOT) president Karin Kolbe said the government had realised its ‘folly’ of selling off railway lines which were needed in high-growth areas, rural areas ‘and are an important method of reducing carbon emissions.’

‘TOOT reminds our federal Labor representatives, particularly Justine Elliott, of the need to honour election promises to provide rail services,’ she said.

A real threat

Greens MP and transport spokesperson Lee Rhiannon said it was an important win for communities across NSW, which had seen the bill as a real threat to precious rail infrastructure.

‘The government’s so-called Rail Trail Bill was an irresponsible piece of legislation. If passed it could have resulted in the loss of valuable rail corridors and infrastructure by alienating it for profit-making purposes other than rail trails,’ Ms Rhiannon said.

‘The Greens are long term advocates for improved walking and cycling infrastructure. We have repeatedly told the government we are ready to support genuine rail trail plans, but this bill was a wolf in sheep’s clothing.’

‘The bill could not be supported because the community could see the government’s hidden agenda to not create rail trails but profit from the alternative management of the railway land and infrastructure.’

‘In earlier legislation the government was attempting to wind up the important Act passed over 100 years ago that sets out that rail lines can only be removed by an act of parliament, to allow the sale of rail land to developers.’

‘The government needs to face up to the reality that because of its appalling record on walking and cycleway infrastructure, no one trusts them when it comes to public transport plans,’ Ms Rhiannon said.

Vigilance needed

Tweed MP Geoff Provest said vigilance was needed in case the government attempted a ‘backdoor sale.’

‘We have had a big win with this backflip, but when it comes to rail, Labor has a record of breaking promises. They axed the line in May 2004 just weeks after promising it a 12-month reprieve and they are now so cash-strapped that another sale attempt would surprise no one.’

‘We now need to convince the Government not only to re-open the line, but to start planning its extension to Coolangatta to meet up with the two rail systems being built on the Gold Coast.’

‘The arguments for North Coast rail are rock solid in terms of the local economy, the environment, road safety, tourism and education,’ he said.

All-female fight set for federal seat

Ken Sapwell

The fight for the federal seat of Richmond is shaping up as a three-way all-female contest after Pottsville businesswoman Tania Murdock (pictured) threw her hat into the ring this week.

The 40-year-old mother of three is a front-runner for National Party pre-selection to contest the seat held by Labor MP and Minister for Ageing, Justine Elliot, since 2004.

Ms Murdock is expected to be joined in the three-way contest by former Tweed mayor and sitting councillor Joan van Lieshout who is seeking Liberal Party pre-selection.

Tweed Nationals electoral council chairman Murray Lees said this week he was ‘very excited’ about Ms Murdock’s nomination.

‘It’s fantastic news. She is an outstanding candidate,’ said Mr Lees, who will be overseeing the pre-selection process scheduled for December 6.

Ms Murdock, who narrowly failed when she stood as an independent at the last council elections, said she became a National Party convert after being approached months ago to consider standing.

‘Since then I have had numerous meetings with the Nationals and after much serious consideration, it is clear to me that the Nationals are by far the party most closely aligned with the values of family, she said.

‘This includes standing up for regional Australia, putting small business ahead of big business, understanding the importance of good economic management and standing firm on traditional family values.’

She said as Pottsville Beach Business Association president for the past three years she had worked hard to achieve the right balance between the preservation of the environmental amenity and the need to encourage economic and social goals.

‘I believe that my experience, qualifications and enthusiasm can offer residents an effective alternative and a better deal for the Richmond electorate, she said.

‘There needs to be more employment and educational opportunities, better health and community support services and a better deal when it comes to our infrastructure needs, particularly in relation to public transport.

‘We have seen a steady decline in these services to our area, despite commitments that were given by the Rudd Labor government in the context of the last Federal election.’

Ms Murdock and Cr van Lieshout face an uphill battle to wrest the seat from Ms Elliot who held onto it at last year’s election, increasing her winning margin by almost nine per cent on the back of voter dissatisfaction with former Liberal PM John Howard.

Ms Elliot narrowly won the seat from the National Party MP and Minister for Youth Affairs, Larry Anthony, amid claims of campaign skulduggery.

The seat, which for decades had been the natural preserve of the Nationals, was first won by Labor when Mullumbimby school teacher Neville Newell emerged from obscurity to defeat the uninspiring former Nationals’ leader Charles Blunt in 1990.

How You Can Buy Bargain US Properties for under $100,000

Once in a Lifetime Opportunity with Aussie Dollar at Record High

The US recession is coming to an end and global investors are now pouncing on undervalued US property. Property prices in the US have returned to 1980 levels due to mortgage sales, but rents are still at 2009 levels. Properties that sold in 2007 for $312,000 are being bought for $119,000 and renting for $300 per week, giving a massive 13% annual return on investment, unheard of in Australian property at the moment.

An Australian company, US Properties, is now buying American homes for Aussie investors in Los Vegas and Miami, where house prices are expected to recover more rapidly. They inspect and buy the best properties from US banks, renovate them for rental and manage them on behalf of Australian investors. Each property is held in its own trust to minimise taxes and make ownership easy.

As the US economy recovers and mortgage finance becomes available, property prices will rise quickly. Rents are paid in US dollars, so when the Australian dollar returns to lower levels, the rent will go up, increasing profits.

There has never been an opportunity like this before. 888 Wealth Creation in Byron Bay are your local agents for US Property. Call us or visit the website to find out more.

Disability proves no bar to success

Kim Cousins

Camilla Connolly (pictured) wants people to know that some disabilities are invisible.

The Murwillumbah mother and artist is an ambassador for the 2009 Don’t DIS my ABILITY campaign, a government initiative to showcase the diversity of people with disabilities in our local communities.

Camilla was formally diagnosed with Asperger syndrome, a developmental disability related to autism, only a few years ago.

‘It was a surprise to others but I wasn’t surprised and neither was my family,’ she said.

The diagnosis explained a lot to Camilla and those who knew her well. As a child, Camilla was very intelligent but childhood was a tough time.

‘School was hell for me, terrifying all the way through,’ she said. ‘It really got bad around age nine relating to other girls.’

Her teenage years weren’t much better and as a young adult Camilla found herself at The Buttery rehabilitation centre near Bangalow, which she is also an ambassador for.

‘I can come across as quite normal at times,’ she said. ‘I’ve learnt to manage. Most people are ignorant of disabilities.’

Camilla joins 15 other ambassadors from across NSW in promoting awareness of disabilities and on December 5, she will address Kingscliff High School students. She will also give lectures in Sydney as part of her ambassador duties.

‘I can give people an insight into the generic nature of disabilities,’ she said.

‘Mine is invisible. When I came out with the diagnosis people said it was ridiculous, I’m hyper verbal and a successful artist. But I struggle with paying bills and mundane stuff.’

Asperger syndrome is an autism spectrum disorder where people have significant difficulties in social interaction, along with restricted and repetitive patterns of behaviour and interests.

Cr Holdom's gallery ban 'over the top'

Ken Sapwell

Tweed Shire Council has decided to bring down the curtain on public gallery theatrics by banning placards and colourful costume masks.

Community councillor Dot Holdom managed to win narrow support for the controversial move after a fiery debate on Tuesday night.

She told the meeting that she had been horrified by some of the placards and believed that masks worn by some people were inappropriate.

'I find the room is not given the level of respect that it needs,' she said as a handful of people in the public gallery sat silently shaking their heads.

The move was strongly opposed by fellow community councillor Barry Longland, former Mayor Joan van Lieshout and Greens councillor Katie Milne who accused her of trying to impose a dress code on the public.

Cr Milne said the masks and costumes donned by some gallery watchers were meant to represent some of the endangered animals which didn't have a voice.

Cr Longland said the bans were 'over the top' and sent a message about how open the council was in recognising different points of view.

He suggested that the rules could be changed to empower

Cr Holdom's radical rule change follows a meeting last month when a packed public gallery held signs supporting Tweed's dwindling koala population which planners warned faced further threats unless plans for the massive Kings Forest development were changed.

But while she won backing

Councillors uncomfortable with placards, masks and shows of disrespect have banned them from the public gallery.

the mayor to order the removal of any signs considered offensive.

He was supported by Cr van Lieshout who said she had never found any of the signs offensive and believed they should be allowed as part of a free democratic society.

But deputy mayor Phil Youngblutt said the public gallery should not be a 'venue for protests' while factional mate Kevin Skinner said he personally found some of the signs offensive.

for signs and masks to be left in a designated space outside the Murwillumbah civic centre she could only rally the support of mayor Warren Polglase in trying to prevent the public from speaking about upcoming agenda items.

They unsuccessfully opposed a move by Cr van Lieshout to reinstate community access sessions to coincide with council meetings to allow residents the opportunity to address them before making decisions on matters before them.

The former mayor sought the change after residents complained that a recent council decision to hold the access sessions a week before the actual council meeting meant they had no knowledge of any issues to be dealt with because they had no prior access to a council agenda.

'People should be allowed to have a say on important issues but they need to have access to the business paper so they know what's coming up. It's only democratic,' she said.

The council initially voted 5-2 to hold community access on the day before the Tuesday meeting but it came close to a debacle when Cr Youngblutt said he couldn't attend and Cr Skinner then indicated he wanted to withdraw his support.

Cr Polglase was then forced to adjourn the meeting while a rescission motion was prepared to ditch the arrangement before the debate resumed, with the council finally deciding to hold the access sessions just hours before the start of the normal council meetings.

Crs Holdom and Polglase claimed that community access was never intended to give the public a chance to lobby them about matters on the agenda but an opportunity to voice their views on 'general issues.'

Mapping program scores grant

Walking up and down riverbanks counting plants all day isn't everyone's idea of fun but environmental scientists Chris Wellington and Natasha Lakaev have made life a little easier with the development of a mapping program.

Their Burringbar company Earth Sense Pty Ltd succeeded in getting a $70,400 federal government grant through the Commercialising Emerging Technologies (COMET) program, announced by Richmond MP Justine Elliot recently.

Chris joined forces with Campbell Dunstan of IT business Exhalt to come up with the software for handheld GPS devices that maps land and water areas at the touch of a button.

Chris said it could be used for a range of mapping purposes, from identifying bushfire hazard areas and erosion hotspots to weed and catchment management.

'Say you're in a boat on a river and want to map all the camphor laurel,' Chris said.

'Every few seconds it records the location and puts the data into a spreadsheet. It can be edited to make each button a particular species or vegetation type. We can also integrate the screen to allow sketches, video and photos to be taken and dumped in the spreadsheet.'

'On screen you could map different species, jetties and erosion zones all at once.'

Chris and Campbell have been working on the software since April last year to make a prototype presentable to the government.

'It's not just for environmental uses, councils can use it for public asset mapping as well,' Chris said. 'I'm sure there are many applications we haven't even thought of yet.'

The grant will help out with the packaging and marketing of the software to take it to the point of being commercially viable,' Chris said. 'We've had contact from local councils and requests from South Australia and Queensland as well as from overseas. The next step is to take it to the international market.'

Ms Elliot said COMET is administered by AusIndustry which is responsible for more than 30 programs to help Australian businesses. Programs include: innovation grants, tax and duty concessions, small business development and venture capital. For more info, visit the AusIndustry website, call the hotline on 13 28 46 or email hotline@ausindustry.gov.au

Advice from the Chief Product Tester

Dear Chief Tester
Are the questions you get from real people or do you make up the questions?
Jimmy

Are you questioning my integrity? I'm almost insulted Jimmy! But it's OK, because by now you must know the answer - because right now you're reading my answer to you here in the Echo newspaper. Do you like my photo?

But then again - perhaps this is a fictitious question and I'm sending a fictitious answer to a fictitious person. Perhaps this is one step up from talking to yourself.

Funny about that, because the other day I said to myself 'Tony (that's me) are you going to take up that high paying job offer in Italy to model silk shirts and tight pants?' Then I replied, 'Tony, how could you even consider that job when people throughout Australia and overseas rely on you to help them get a new lease on life as a result of visiting your humble shop in downtown Murwillumbah?'

'No, I can't be selfish,' I said to myself. 'Who needs the fame and adulation - my true calling is to inspire human beings to experience nature, to travel, to see new places, to experience new adventures (and to show their gratitude with donations to our cash register).'

Does that answer your question Jimmy?

Your mate

Youngblutt escapes penalty for jibe

Ken Sapwell

Deputy mayor Phil Youngblutt has escaped unscathed for describing Tweed voters as morons after colleagues scotched a bid to send him to a re-education camp.

Councillors voted 5-1 to defeat a move by Greens councillor Katie Milne to train him the art of 'respectful communication' after a conduct review panel upheld several complaints against him.

Panel chairman John Hawkins found he had breached four separate sections of the council's code of conduct when describing some Tweed voters, anti-rally protestors and 'greenies' as morons in radio and newspaper interviews in September.

Cr Milne said the deputy mayor had a problem with the language he used, once referring to anti-rally protestors as having two heads.

'I think this is a bit more serious than accepting an apology,' she said.

Cr Longland agreed but said he was against punitive action.

'He makes unsubstantiated claims and expects people to sit back and cop it,' said Cr Longland, who had earlier failed to force Cr Youngblutt to retract claims that he was a member of the Labor Party.

It's a serious matter and it should serve as a lesson that we don't want any more examples of him blustering his way about.'

Cr Dot Holdom said she'd spoken to Cr Youngblutt about his jibe and he had apologised.

'There is not one of us that can cast the first stone,' she said.

Complaints about his comments were made by ratepayers and not by fellow councillors who had previously reported former mayor Joan van Lieshout and Greens councillor Katie Milne to the panel for alleged breaches of the code of conduct.

Those complaints were either dismissed or found not to warrant any disciplinary action.

It was the first time since the council's new complaints handling process was activated in June that councillors had been called on to consider a possible penalty, which could range from a reprimand to a direction to undergo counselling.

One of the complainants, Jerry Cornford, said the failure to act proved what 'a complete farce' the panel review process was.

'Dot Holdom was quick to cite Crs Milne and van Lieshout; complaints which ultimately failed. But when the first complaint against a councillor is upheld, she suddenly has moral qualms about "casting the first stone", Mr Cornford, who is also a spokesman for community watchdog group Tweed Monitor, said.

'This is administrative hypocrisy at its worst. It appears we now have a self-regulating state government, a self-regulating council; perhaps it's time for a self-regulating electorate.'

Social club with a conscience

They are a remarkable and largely unsung group of local heroes, but the 60-plus members of the First Friday of Every Month (FFEM) Social Club are quite clear about their aim.

Made up mostly of women from all walks of life, the group formed two years ago with a mission statement simply 'to provide care and support for the less fortunate children and their families in our area' and they raise money through their regular lunches held on the first Friday of the month.

'We've provided school uniforms, shoes, wheelchairs, gifts and clothing, 100 per cent of our funds go to the children and their families,' president Debbie Conti said.

The club's scrap book is testimony to how much some of these families appreciate the club's work with one writing to thank them 'so much for your assistance in getting the kids back to school'.

Debbie said the group donated Christmas hampers and presents to disadvantaged families - 'those doing it tough' - as well as helping organisations such as On Track Community Programs, which provides housing and other services to people experiencing mental illness, disability or homelessness.

'The girls also bring in non-perishable food which we give to the homeless,' she said.

'We recently helped a family which lost everything in a fire, we gave them a food voucher for $400, we also helped buy a car with a wheelchair hoist for one family.

'We find out from local schools who may need our help so we can provide food vouchers and Christmas presents or school uniforms to those families.

'It breaks your heart sometimes to see how normal things that we take for granted are so much appreciated by those in need, to see a new school uniform lovingly hung on a Christmas tree by a girl who received one really brings it home to you.

'We also go to the K-Mart Christmas wishing tree and get the names of kids and their ages so we can buy presents for them, as there's always a few left with nothing there for them. We all have kids of our own so we don't like seeing a local child's name on the tree without something.

'I just think I've been lucky in my life and that anyone can fall on hard times very quickly, so I'd like to think there's someone there for my family.'

Recently, Tweed MP Geoff Provest, whose wife Aune is a member, praised the FFEM club in a speech to parliament, saying members anonymously donated money and had 'no want of their own but to look after less fortunate people in the community.'

Council drops iBar case

Ken Sapwell

Tweed Shire Council has backed away from prosecuting colourful iBar owner Warren Armstrong after being told legal action could fail.

Councillors decided five months ago to throw the book at Mr Armstrong after he converted the former steakhouse restaurant to a raunchy lap-dance venue which they feared could deter visitors to a new tourist information centre since built next door.

They accused him of unauthorised building work, using his premises in a different manner to the original restaurant approval and non-payment of more than $30,000 in fees.

But after considering a report from chief planner Vince Connell and confidential legal advice pointing out the fragility of their case, they decided unanimously at a closed-door meeting on Tuesday night to drop the case.

Mr Connell said Mr Armstrong had since removed lap dancers from the menu even though new guidelines allowed restaurants to provide live entertainment without the need for any development consent.

He also said the unauthorised building work 'had given the ageing building an uplift which had resulted in a much better development overall' and could be approved retrospectively if a development application was lodged.

Mr Connell also poured cold water on moves to seek payment of outstanding fees, saying 'legal advice clearly indicates the council is not guaranteed a positive outcome and would likely be up for court costs.'

'In this regard it is recommended that court action not proceed. Rather, the site would only have a credit for the contributions paid to date.'

Backflip to end stoush

The backflip is expected to bring the curtain down on a high-profile public stoush between Mr Armstrong and councillors after the adult entertainment specialist hired lap dancers to perform at his venue earlier this year.

The move sparked moral outrage and a war of words between both sides, with Mr Anderson erecting billboards describing councillors as 'a pack of wankers' and portraying then mayor Joan van Lieshout in a sexual pose.

The decision to prosecute the owner of what was then billed as Australia's only adult restaurant was passed 4-3 after it was considered behind closed doors at the instigation of Cr Dot Holdom.

As a result councillors are gagged from saying whether their original decision stemmed from the moral outrage of some residents and councillors rather than any breaches of planning laws.

Mr Armstrong claims an adult restaurant is not out of character with Tweed Heads run-down central business district, located within 200 metres of three adult bookshops and across the road from the town's oldest brothel.

His solicitor Ken Lee had earlier predicted the council would be wasting its money if it pursued his client through the courts for using the premises in a different manner to the original restaurant consent.

Mr Lee said other issues such as the alleged construction of an illegal deck and unpaid fees could be settled at a council level.

'Any attempt by councillors to use planning laws to enforce a moral viewpoint is misguided and a misuse of those laws,' warned Mr Lee, who is also chairman of the Tweed's Economic Development Corporation.

Living book draws on experiences

Kim Cousins

Jhana Bowen (pictured) had a childhood slightly different to most children.

The Murwillumbah-based artist spent six years living in India and will draw on his experiences as a Living Library book.

'My story is basically my work with my art and growing up in far northern India,' he said. 'I feel compelled to share my story with people and give them a feeling of the cultural differences.'

Jhana went to a school where the Dalai Lama's sister was principal and his mum was a nun. He is fluent in the native language and looks to the Tibetan culture for inspiration in his work.

'I'm orientated around teasing it out in my art,' he said.

'I've been back to where I grew up and noticed changes in the Tibetan culture, the people have adjusted to the new industrial revolution,' he said. 'It's interesting to see how they respond with their art, culture and language.' 'There is a sense of displacement, having lost their land and their country.'

Jhana now works with disabled and the elderly, teaching art.

'The ways of communicating and expressing themselves through art is incredible,' he said.

Borrowers of the Living Library have a chance to hear stories and ask questions of a selection of living books. The next borrowing day (you don't really take them anywhere) is Friday, November 27, at Coolamon Cultural Centre.

Ukitopia Festival

The second annual Ukitopia Festival at Uki drew hundreds of people to the village for the two-day event.

Ukitopia celebrated all aspects of the colourful Uki community including art, culture and sustainable living.

Magic shows, craft workshops and live music kept kids entertained while the Buttery Bazaar markets and the Eco Expo at Uki Public School, both drew big crowds.

Organiser Natascha Wernick said the event, which this year ran for two days instead of one, was well received by the local community.

Solar pays off

At last, something positive to say about the state government! Its introduction of a gross feed-in tariff for power generation means that solar households will be paid 60 cents per kilowatt hour for the clean energy they generate on systems up to 10kw. The scheme begins on January 1 next year, is expected to run for seven years and also applies to micro-wind systems. It's a significant move towards stimulating household investment in renewable energy.

Many Tweed homes already fitted out with panels are likely to benefit from the tariff to the tune of hundreds of dollars a year, once service charges are subtracted. It still means it will take several years to recoup the initial outlay on panels, but in the meantime those households will be enjoying clean energy delivered free from 150 million kilometres away.

Most folks, from the Alternative Technology Association (ATA) to the National Electrical and Communications Association NECA, have welcomed the NSW government's move, though the Nationals' Senator Ron Boswell reckons the tariff will have the paradoxical effect of reducing the viability of large scale renewable energy projects, such as the Condong sugar mill cogeneration plant. 'Further subsidising households to go solar will increase the oversupply of Renewable Energy Certificates (RECs) through the Solar Credits multiplier which would lower the price of RECs,' he said. 'This is a disincentive for companies to invest in large renewable energy projects.'

'Before the NSW government announced their scheme... there was already a flood of solar RECs hitting the market and lowering the price. The viability of renewable energy projects such as NSW Sugar's cogeneration project will be further threatened.'

'A low price [for RECs] means there is no point in investing. REC prices have already dropped from over $50 to $28 before the Rees decision on gross feed-in tariffs.'

Supposing Senator Boswell is right, it points out the folly of tying energy needs to trading systems which mimic commodities markets. We don't need the drive to sustainability stuffed up by speculative pressures. Nevertheless, anything which encourages the householder to invest in clean energy is a good thing, and is bound to generate more green-collar jobs.

The ATA sees the investment coming in small-scale solar and has urged the Rudd government to 'harmonise the nation's feed-in tariffs to a single, gross feed-in tariff scheme that will make conversion to solar simpler for installers, households and electricity retailers.'

Despite Senator Boswell's fears, there is historical precedent for the positive value of a feed-in tariff. Since the introduction of the Electricity Feed Act in Germany in 1991, there has been dramatic growth in that nation's renewable energy market. From 2000 to the end of 2005 the electricity fed into the German grid rose from about 215 megawatts to over 1,500 megawatts. By comparison Australia produced about 7 megawatts of grid-connected solar power in the same period. And us, with all that sun!

Unity is strength

Tweed Shire's motto as 'the valley of contrasts' rang wonderfully true last Saturday afternoon at Murwillumbah Showground where the inaugural Unity Festival which celebrates our diversity was held. Organisers, participants and patrons had hundreds of reasons to smile and should congratulate themselves for being part of such an uplifting and positive event.

Where many other regional festivals are becoming a little jaded as people tire of the same old thing year after year, the Unity Festival seemed to bring some real zest to the mix. Here is an event the whole shire can be proud of and which our council and tourism honchos should get behind. Smiles were everywhere as people enjoyed a great cultural feast of dance, music, storytelling, food and information stalls.

Liberals rave on in a climate of denial

The most depressing statistic of modern times is the one that tells us that well over 50 percent of adult Americans do not believe in evolution.

Or at least it was until last week, when Senator Nick Minchin, the Liberal leader in the senate, told Four Corners that a majority of his party room did not accept the reality of man-made climate change.

At least the Americans - well, some of them, anyway - have an excuse for their ignorance and perversity. In a great many places education standards are low and the general environment is bigoted and provincial. The evolution denialists can reasonably claim that they don't know any better.

But Liberal members of the Australian federal parliament are among the most privileged groups in the world, with access to the best education money can buy. That a majority can comprehensively reject a scientific consensus that has been confirmed over more than two decades is almost beyond belief - until you remember that these people are first and foremost politicians for whom the truth has always been an optional extra.

What concerns them is political advantage, and rightly or wrongly they perceive their current advantage lies in opposing the government's emissions trading scheme. They could of course argue about the detail and seek to amend it, which is what the more rational members of the party are doing. But it is far easier just to reject the lot, to say it's all a left wing conspiracy and a fraud cooked up by communist greenies intent on destroying the Australian way of life.

They take their cue from the right-wing commentariat headed by Andrew Bolt, Janet Albrechtsen and Miranda Devine, none of whom is inclined to let the facts get in the way of a good diatribe. Their loathing for the left in general and the Greens in particular is so obsessive that the mere suggestion that the Greens might support a position is sufficient for them to condemn it out of hand.

So in pursuing their vendetta against the reality of man-there with the law of gravity. Of course there is still debate about the details, but no serious student of the literature questions the role played by carbon emissions in accelerating global warming or the catastrophic consequences which will flow from it unless action is taken.

Those who pretend otherwise can no longer plead ignorance, so their perversity must be whatever course of action is determined at Copenhagen next month. And if Copenhagen is a flop, Minchin and his troops will undoubtedly claim the failure as a justification for their do-nothing stance, and even as some sort of political victory. Those whom the gods seek to destroy, they first make mad.

Malcolm Turnbull is sane on climate change but when it comes to asylum seekers he appears just as unhinged as everyone else. His solution to the non-existent crisis is the reintroduction of some form of temporary protection visas - refugees who arrive by boat are to be given shelter for three years rather than permanent asylum.

This is silly on two levels. For starters, almost all of them eventually qualify for residency anyway - the waiting period is both cruel and pointless. But more importantly it just doesn't work; when the Howard government introduced TPVs the boat numbers actually increased.

Still, it must be admitted that the Rudd government's approach to the issue hasn't been all that brilliant either. It now appears that face will be saved; the recalcitrants on the Oceanic Viking are beginning to trickle ashore in Indonesia, having been enticed, bribed, suborned and conned by promises of privileged five star treatment which Rudd assures us that they won't get.

Some are still holding out for a better offer, which will surely be forthcoming. What about a Christmas hamper, a Kevin 07 T-shirt and an autographed pinup of Julia Gillard or Wayne Swan, according to orientation and preference? That should get them moving, one way or another.

The basic fact of man-made climate change is accepted by all but the fruitloops - and it would appear that Australians are among them.

by Mungo MacCallum

made climate change they are prepared to give aid and comfort, and most importantly media space, to every maverick dissenter who emerges from the woodwork. This utterly unmerited exposure is calculated to make it appear that the argument is still unsettled, there is still a sizeable and respectable body of scientists who doubt the validity of the climate change thesis.

There isn't: the basic fact of man-made climate change is accepted by all but the fruitloops - and it would appear that Australians are among them. Britain's new High Commissioner to Australia, Baroness Valerie Amos, commented rather tactlessly last week that she was surprised to find there was still debate about it in her new posting. She refrained from suggesting that she felt herself surrounded by slow learners, even primitives, but the point was clear.

Throughout the civilised world, man-made climate change is a scientific fact, up be put down either to cynical self-interest or to sheer bloody-mindedness. In the case of the recalcitrants in the Liberal Party room it is probably a combination of the two. So Kevin Rudd is perfectly entitled to excoriate them in the strongest possible terms, as he finally did in his Lowy lecture.

The pity is that he has left it so long. For most of the last two years the government has virtually ignored the debate on climate change in favour of pursuing its agenda on the Global Financial Crisis. This is understandable in the circumstances, but it has left a political vacuum to be filled by the denialists and as a result public opinion, once red hot for action on climate change, is now at best lukewarm. There is confusion over just what the government's emissions trading scheme entails and doubts over its efficacy.

Rudd is now attempting to revive the sense of urgency which prevailed at the start of his term. But it may be too lit-

Koala unacknowledged

The current controversy over koala habitat has led me to an interesting observation. The koala has never been depicted on either our pre-decimal or post-decimal currencies.

We've had the possum, frilled-neck lizard, echidna, lyre bird and the platypus. The coat of arms (50c) depicts a kangaroo and emu, and more kangaroos on the dollar coin. The two dollar coin depicts, fairly enough, an indigenous person.

Our pre-decimal coinage was pretty boring with sheaves of wheat, sheep and, yes, more kangaroos.

Has our 'Blinky Bill' ever been depicted? Well, yes. It was struck last year as an uncirculated $1 coin by the Perth Mint. Yes, uncirculated pretty well means that.

Is it any wonder that our so-called ambassador is ignored by developers, councils and a seemingly large proportion of Australian society?

Maybe our Commonwealth Mint should start pulling its finger out and finally include a depiction of our unique 'bear' on our common currency.

Interchange 'stunt'

I attended last Saturday's Banora point Upgrade Alliance Workshop and advised my approval for the new northern roundabout design which reduces travel time and improved traffic flow to the South Tweed business district from both the north and south.

When the presentation was over Rory Curtis pushed his Kirkwood Road interchange construction and was told by the RTA representative that it was yet to be designed and funded and was planned for construction by 2015.

I am advised that the Tweed Shire Council has over $60m of its investments earmarked for the complete lower Tweed and Pacific Highway master plan which includes the local roads for the Kirkwood Road interchanges which has been agreed since 2006.

I suggested to Rory he start acting like the businessman he is, and stop telling people south of the river to bypass the Tweed commercial district and travel the extra 20km and 100km return to the Palms or Robina to shop.

The reality is that without a Kirkwood Road interchange during construction South Tweed businesses should be concentrating on telling their customers it is only an extra 3.7km further to exit at Kennedy Drive and approach their businesses from the north and shop between 9.30am and 3pm. A temporary Kirkwood Road interchange is little more than a National Party political stunt and negative advertising for South Tweed businesses.

Heritage worthy

The Bilambil Heights area is a designated scenic escarpment ridge line, and is highly visible from a large area. It is also a designated conservation area in Tweed Shire Council reports. There are also koalas existing in the area.

For the last decade and longer, developers have been proposing extensive multi-storey intensive development on this area, and have repeatedly had protected and endangered vegetation cleared. Large fines have been imposed for clearing protected native vegetation.

This area is too important for future environment and community needs to have developers quickly prosper by destroying the area and covering it with multi-storey buildings. It is time that the Government realised that the Tweed Heritage is not there to be destroyed by developers for quick profits.

This highly visible Bilambil Heights area should now be declared a 'National Heritage Conservation Park' for people of the Tweed and Gold Coast and future generations of Australians. Even in a city as large as Sydney the founding fathers had the foresight to set aside large areas of land for the use and welfare of the people.

Laughed no end

I received my new recycling apparatus last week along with an envelope full of instructions. The envelope also included a sticker with a colourful image, which I think may be a self-portrait, painted by Master Young Butt, of himself and his friends dancing in a garden beneath a naïve sun.

Though he didn't sign or title the picture I don't think it is modesty that holds him back from adding his name, for after all this is a nude self-portrait, but rather, as he has had to publicly confess, he is not adept with language use. This lack doesn't need to hamper a visual artist though, for he or she is one who makes use of visual language to convey the meaning.

The sticker was a revelation to me, confirming my view of what and who is now running council affairs and I offer a title to Master Phil for this work; not the most obvious 'Three Bins' but the more whimsical and poetic 'Fore Skins', to describe the bold depiction of three dancing penises.

'The Emperor's New Clothes' is truly a tale for modern times and in this current version of the tale, a chain of council staff and printers have approved this image for publication. I laughed a lot at this hilarious portrayal of political affairs in the Caldera.

I have laughed no end at the bare-arsed audacity of Master Young Butt's painting. I am truly, truly amazed that this should go unnoticed, or unedited by all the council staff who must have approved this image for publication, for each and every one is made foolish by this boyish blindness. It proves that old tales are timeless and enduring.

Can he do that?

Keith Noble, the owner of Noble Lakeside Park which is managed by mayor Warren Polglase, told the residents of this over-50s village that he will not carry out promised improvements unless they defy an order of the Residential Tenants Tribunal.

The Tribunal ruled that an $8 per week site fee increase imposed on residents effective from July 1 was excessive, and reduced it to $6. The owner says they must pay the higher amount 'regardless of the Tribunal's ruling' if they want the improvements.

The owner's demands were forwarded by fax to the parks committee who called a meeting of residents last Sunday November 15. The residents' meeting refused to deal with a motion to accept the demands and instead instructed the committee to send a letter to the owner stating that they expected him to carry out the improvements as promised.

Although the current site fee revenue equates to more than $1,600,000 per year, residents claim that many of the park's facilities are in dire need of upgrade and repairs.

The owner also stated as a further condition of the improvements, that no objections be lodged against a proposed controversial development of an environmentally sensitive area on the northern bank of the lake.

And all the above is still subject to this development being approved by the consent authority.

The Residents' Committee has previously expressed support for the development despite the objections of about 100 residents. Some objectors believe that the committee's support is a desperate attempt to grab the only option available to achieve these improvements, which they have pursued so far without success.

Question is, if you give in to this type of blackmail, where does it stop!

The objections to the development will be vigorously pursued if and when the application is lodged.

Rodeo disgust

I have been a loyal customer of a Murwillumbah credit union for many years and I was greatly disappointed and horrified to learn that it sponsored a rodeo/bronco at the Murwillumbah showgrounds on November 6.

As an animal lover, I am appalled at the cruelty involved in this 'sport' as I have been behind the scenes and seen the terror that these animals feel as the ropes are pulled very tight around their testicles causing acute pain (which is obviously why they buck). These animals are usually trucked from rodeo to rodeo and have a miserable life. Many of them die in the rodeo ring, whether it's calf-roping, bull-riding or regular rodeo. See <http://sharkonline.org>.

This is no way to treat a sentient being who is basically a gentle animal, happy to graze on grass in the countryside its whole life in the sun. Instead we put them through hell and think it's amusing - well, it's not for them.

There is no way I want the money I keep in my account that this bank profits from being used to fund this obscenity so I have decided to close my account with them and unless they change their stance I will never be a customer again.

This is an extreme inconvenience for me as I must unravel all the places where my visa debit card is stored and let all the businesses know my new card number. In the process I will probably forget some and incur non-payment of bill fees. However, due to my ethical stance I have no choice but to do this.

It would be wise of local businesses to understand that they can't mix business and controversial political/ethical issues without a price to their customer base.

Water options

The Tweed Shire Council has recently released to the public a pamphlet entitled 'Tweed District Water Supply Augmentation Options Community Consultation'. The pamphlet contains a number of very concerning, unsubstantiated statements and fails to alert us to the full range of options available for water management in this shire.

For example, it is stated that 'Within the next 25 years the population of the Tweed Shire is expected to double.' Expecting the Tweed community to accept this statement as the basis of responsible management of this shire is as reasonable as expecting us to accept an announcement from a senior Canberra public servant that 'Within the next 25 years the population of the Australia is expected to double.'

The days are long gone when the community is no longer aware of and concerned about the major resource management issues confronting this nation and how they need to be considered when managing this shire. Just think of how many people expected the federal government to do something about climate change when they voted at the last federal election.

It is stated in council's pamphlet that council is 'seeking advice from the community'. If this is to be done in a meaningful manner, then council cannot expect us to limit our thinking on these important subjects to the very limited range of three 'options' that are presented in this pamphlet.

Council needs to prepare an integrated approach to population planning, where due regard is given to the carrying capacity and best use of resources in this bioregion, including water.

No one doubts that council faces many challenges in the legal context in which it can handle these matters, or that there is a strong demand for low cost water to be made available to industry in south-east Queensland and northern New South Wales at taxpayer expense, or that the community of the Tweed will come under increasing pressure from external private enterprise and government stakeholders who wish to acquire control of water resources located in the Tweed Shire.

However, I urge council to adopt the above considerations as part of a comprehensive and responsible community engagement and management approach to these issues.

ARIES: During this challenging week it pays to stay real and be humble rather than bluster. Resist falling into the trap of blaming outside circumstances, look for the hidden gift in a difficult situation – it's there waiting for you to find and use.

TAURUS: Listening without engaging is the least stressful way of keeping this week's peace. Just don't let others think they're being ignored – assure them their concerns are valid. While not an auspicious time for the let's-sort-it talk, there's still the possibility of a financial windfall.

GEMINI: If others are grumpy this week you'll rightly assume that's their business and get on with yours, which is channeling your planetary ruler in the sign of motormouths into communicating your ideas clearly and smart-marketing them in new ways to a broader customer base.

CANCER: A week when tempers erupt, accidents

LIBRA: If certain cunningly disguised Libran traits show their face this week, you'll know Saturn's trotting out the first of its spine-stiffening lessons via a hefty square to Pluto, planet of unfinished business. Deal with this and the rest of the year will be a breeze...

SCORPIO: Tuesday's Scorpio new moon is this year's prime time for long-term goal setting. The rest of the week is surprisingly volatile and could erupt suddenly in encounters with stubborn others who refuse to back down. Walk away from power plays and no-win situations.

SAGITTARIUS: This week needs you reflective and centred rather than reaching boiling point in zero seconds flat. So be cool, be smart, restrain your heart and postpone big decisions till next week when the dust settles and cosmic constellations are more Sag-friendly.

CAPRICORN: Major planetary shakeups are under way at the moment, during which control and micro-management are less effective than spontaneously surfing the waves of change. Assist others in their transitions this week – one of the rare times when mixing business and pleasure isn't recommended.

AQUARIUS: This week Aquarians have their travelling shoes on – if not physically, then in the universe of out-there ideas. Right now the people you meet, conversations you have, information you receive and choices you make will all have significant bearing on the immediate future.

PISCES: This week suggests reducing commitments and socializing, for three reasons: Because small things could feel more upsetting than usual. Because citizens are in lecturing, criticizing, blaming mode. And because a big realization you've resisted for a long time is about to catch up with you.

CHESS by Ian Rogers

Play at Seagulls Club, Thurs 6-10pm to play until February!) However, Danailov, the man most responsible for the 2006 Topalov v Kramnik world title match in Elista sinking in scandal, continued to put the boot in, explaining that Anand was preparing to use every trick in the book to destabilise Topalov. 'In the next six months Anand's team will do everything possible to create unfulfillable conditions during the negotiations for the match, in order to make us nervous. The main thing for him is to keep the title, as it gives him privileges. However, we have gone through Elista so we are ready. We will have a doctor, psychologist, nutritionist, fitness instructor...'

Danailov makes great play of Topalov's world number one ranking, neglecting to mention that it was maintained (a few points ahead of Carlsen) primarily by Topalov leaving the Bulgarian team stranded halfway through the recent European Team Championship when he was leaking ranking points.

Meanwhile, Anand has let his pieces do the talking in Moscow, winning the following fine game against Peter Svidler.

Moscow 2009
White: V Anand
Black: P Svidler
Opening: Grunfeld
1.d4 Nf6 2.c4 g6 3.Nc3 d5 4.cxd5 Nxd5 5.Bd2!
A rare sideline, avoiding Svidler's amazing knowledge of the main lines of the Grunfeld Defence.
5...Bg7 6.e4 Nb6 7.Be3 0-0 8.h3 e5 9.Nf3 exd4 10.Bxd4 Bxd4 11.Qxd4 Qe7 12.Qe3 Nc6 13.Bb5 Nb4!
Svidler's feel for this opening is second to none. Previously 13...f5 had been played, but Black had been left struggling after 14.Bxc6 bxc6 15.exf5.

14.Rc1 Be6 15.b3 a6 16.Be2 Nc6 17.0-0 f6 18.Rfe1 Rad8 19.Bf1 Bf7 20.Nh2 Be6 21.f4 Nd4?
Allowing a quick-fire assault. After 21... Rfe8, Black is slightly cramped but should have little to fear.
22.f5! Bf7 23.Ng4 gxf5 24.Nh6+ Kh8 25.Qf2! fxe4?
Panic – 25...f4 was the best chance.
26.Rxe4 Qd6 27.Rd1 c5 28.Nxf7+ Rxf7 (See diagram) 29.b4!!
The move Svidler had missed; Black's knight is now destabilised and lost.

BIOLYTIX WATER NATURALLY WASTEWATER SYSTEM COPIES NATURE

After 2.1 billion years of research and development, nature has got it right. Nature knows what works best.

The Biolytix Research and Development team spent 11 years and $4 million to engineer a sewage system that copied nature. They studied how nature broke down waste on the river edge and copied this into their household 'ecosystem in a tank'.

Inside every BioPod, the hardworking ecosystem recycles sewage into irrigation water – without chemicals, odours and noise. It uses the Biolytic Process: the efficient decomposition of waste by a complex range of living organisms, including worms.

As the BioPod uses nature to do the work, it doesn't need high-energy machines to treat the sewage. This cuts energy use around 90% – about the same amount as someone watching TV 10 hours every day. No large machines also means far less moving parts (besides those worms), and so no ongoing maintenance and replacement costs. The ecosystem doesn't need us – it naturally replenishes itself.

As Charles Darwin said: 'It may be doubted whether there are many other animals which have played so important a part in the history of the world than the worm.'

The BioPod employs nature to work for us. Like solar power, nature offers us many benefits. It is just up to us to use them.

Television Guide

1. Clint Eastwood is in fine directorial and acting form in Unforgiven (NBN, Friday, 12am), a dark essay on injustice and revenge set in a very nasty Wild West.

2. Criminal misdemeanours in the slums of Rio are only part of the plot in City Of God (SBS2, Saturday, 9.35pm), which burns with a relentless energy unfamiliar to Hollywood executives.

3. For those unable to get ABC2, ABC1 is rerunning The Magic Of Audrey at 3pm on Sunday arvo. The Audrey in question is of course the incomparable Audrey Hepburn, who lived fast, died young and left a beautiful corpse after working hard for the world's underprivileged children.

John Morrison, John Hoffman and Jacki Cooper in concert

Local music teacher Andrew Best is very excited to announce that he has been able to organise a very special day on Thursday November 19 (tonight) commencing at 3.30pm at the Lakeside Christian Centre in Tweed Heads. The day will involve a two hour workshop involving the very talented trio of John Morrison, John Hoffman and Jacki Cooper. There will also be a concert in the evening, backed by the Australian Army Brisbane Big Band, starting at 7pm. Children are also welcome. John Morrison has spent much of his musical life playing and recording with his younger brother, world-renowned trumpeter, James Morrison. Together they have toured the world, performing at the North Sea Jazz Festival, Montreaux Jazz Festival, Royal Albert Hall, Ronnie Scott's Jazz Club in London, and many more. Performing with his small group, he also conducted a specially formed Chinese swing orchestra in Beijing. As the driving force behind Swing City, John, who was voted Australia's best big band drummer, led the big band in a career highlight – performing at the opening of the Sydney Olympic Games in 2000. In Australia, John is a well respected and highly sought after musician, recording artist, producer, jazz educator, and band leader. John Hoffman toured and recorded for six years with the Big Bands of Glenn Miller/ Buddy de Franco, Buddy Rich, Woody Herman and Harry James before settling in Australia in 1977. Artists John has performed with include Frank Sinatra, Sammy Davis Jnr, Shirley MacLaine, Peter Allen, Ella Fitzgerald, Sarah Vaughan, Ray Charles, Mel Torme, Tony Bennett and Joe Williams. Since 1990 he has lived in Byron Bay, and currently teaches trumpet and directs the large ensembles in the jazz department at Queensland Conservatorium, Griffith University. Recent recordings include the soundtrack to the films Moulin Rouge and South Pacific featuring Harry Connick Jnr. Jacki Cooper's career highlights include performing with international jazz greats Mark Murphy, John Clayton, Madeline Eastman and Jim Cullum. In 1994, Jacki was invited to teach jazz voice for the Stanford Jazz Workshop in California. She has sung with jazz luminaries in the USA, and performed with jazz stars in Vietnam and China. In July 2007, John and Jacki toured to Shanghai, China to perform with the Shanghai Symphony Big Band at the Oriental Arts Centre.

The workshops will give children an opportunity to hear some fabulous music and will be run in the form of a fun, learning environment where the musicians will discuss and demonstrate the beginning stages of being part of a swing, jazz style band, using certain methods that can be taken home and used to improve and create early stages of improvisation (solo playing). The band will be performing a concert in the evening commencing at 7pm (the children are welcome to attend as well) and you will also get to hear some of the talented youth of the Tweed and Gold Coast performing with the Toe Jam'n Youth Big Band and the Gold Coast Youth Big Band. Tickets can be pre booked by calling 0439 110 255 and then paid on the day. Adults $20, children/pensioners $10, family ticket (2 adults/3 children, and/or mix of children and pensioners) $50. Some funds will go towards the assistance of helping further develop music in the local area.

Body in a jar

For over a decade Bodyjar have experienced the complete gamut of rock; from playing to three people at the humble Tote Hotel, Collingwood, to playing in front of 45,000 punters in Korea and selling out shows in Japan. Now they are calling it a day. 'It's been amazing,' says frontman Cam. 'We've done so much stuff as a band... way more than we ever thought we would. As far as we're concerned the last studio album Bodyjar made, our self-titled album, was the best of our career. It might not have sold the most copies, but it was brutally honest and it covered a lot of territory, musically and emotionally. It just feels like a good time to put a full-stop on it all. We wanna go out on our own terms. What better way to finish up than with a national tour where we crank out some old tunes one last time and say thanks to all the folks who have supported us over the years.' And so, one last tour is happening. Bodyjar – the final tour: Coolangatta Hotel, Friday November 20.

The Screaming Jets and The Poor

Two of Australia's finest pub rock bands team up for one classic night of party music. The Poor's legacy was made famous with four rockin' words, 'More Wine Waiter Please' and now The Poor are baaack! The Poor started out playing the pub circuit in Darwin nearly two decades ago. The plan was simple, hard rockin' hard drinkin' and world domina-

In 1992 the band cut their debut release, the EP Rude, Crude & Tattooed, produced by Rick Brewster and Bob Spencer from The Angels and from the opening line you knew it was going to be something great – Aussie pub rock, in your face, no bullshit, straight to the point, rock'n'roll. Black Market Rhythm Co and Rapids

Critics have compared them to Powderfinger, The Shins and The Clash, but their melodies have the hallmarks of classic 60s pop and the impossible-to-pigeon-hole grooves of a group of musicians who've drawn their influences from 19-30 years spent in indie record stores and the bottom drawers of their parents vinyl collections. With their first Soundlounge appearance since a sell-out show earlier in the year, BMRCo will be releasing their tasty new single from the upcoming album with a hell of a party. Watch this space for a sneak peak of the track in the lead up to November. 'As fresh as newly-baked bread and just as easy to devour...' The Australian 4/5* Album Review. Black Market Rhythm Co & Rapids, Soundlounge, Currumbin RSL, November 20.

Kid Kenobi

Countless accolades, awards, records, and firsts have been the hallmark of Kid Kenobi's illustrious 13-year DJing career. It's almost become a cliché to say that there isn't much left for him to do. And yet perhaps the Kid's greatest triumph of all is his ability to keep on evolving and growing as an artist. Music trends come and go, clubbers retire, scenes change, and awards gather dust but Kid Kenobi, it seems, is here to stay. It's little wonder then that 2009 is shaping up to be Kid Kenobi's biggest year yet. Fed up and disillusioned with the direction of dance music in 2007, Kid Kenobi realised his only salvation would come from taking responsibility for his own artistic journey and creating for himself the music he needed to hear. It was a great time of transition. Friends and family were replaced with solitude in the studio, partying was replaced with the gym and early morning starts in the studio, disappointment was replaced with inspiration, and a new chapter in the Kid's career was born. Out of this transition was born Two Fresh – a new collaboration with his brother Hugga Thugg. Having achieved so much already, one seems a fool to expect anything less from the next phase of his artistic journey. Neverland Bar, Coolangatta Kid Kenobi Sunday November 22.

in life. Yet 2009 is earning him a solid reputation as the East Coast's latest 'star on the rise'. American music legend Seymour Stein compared Dan's talent to one of the most influential songwriters of the 20th century, Hank Williams Sr. Reviewers have likened his stage energy to a young Billy Thorpe and INXS rocker Kirk Pengilly reckons he has found his forte in the Blues & Roots genre calling Dan 'a great songwriter with a voice suited to the blues'. Despite the flattery Dan is not one to be pigeonholed and pursues a sound that will capture the heart of a generation. His songs are raw, challenging and refreshingly real with true heart and soul. Combining his coastal country locale with rootsy flair of acoustic guitars, bottleneck slide, jaw harp and a backyard built stomp box. He has travelled his passionate performances extensively from coastal Australia across out-back country and even to the historic city of Bath in the UK. The prolific singer songwriter has been working hard in the past few years on getting his music heard and it seems people are definitely taking notice. See him at the Ivory Tavern, Tweed Heads on Saturday.

Their first CD Harp Fusion, released in 2006, consisting of popular classics and their second CD Scenes of Childhood, consisting of solos and duos by John Thomas, released internationally for the Naxos label in late 2007, has been featured on Australian radio stations as well as on 53 major radio station networks in 15 countries. In March of 2009, they embarked on their first world tour, performing to great acclaim, in Tokyo, Paris, Cairo, Washington DC, Toronto, and Salt Lake City. In early 2009, they released their third CD entitled Arpeggio for the Harmonious Resonance label. In July-August 2009, they performed for the Australian Festival of Chamber Music. November 24, 11am Tweed River Art Gallery.

A smaller version of Broadfoot – one guitarist less, will be making music at the Riverview Hotel in Murwillumbah, from 2pm Sunday afternoon. ART AND CULTURE

Wonders of Women (WOW)

The Wonders of Women (WOW) 2010 Calendar and Art Show will showcase the creative female talent in the region and will launch this week. The works include jewellery, sculpture, photography and all forms of painting. The official launch is this Tuesday November 24 at 5pm and Maggie Ann Leybourne will be the MC for the launch. All art lovers are invited. A donation to cover the costs will be appreciated. The goal of WOW is to increase the profile, safety and well being of women and children in our community, and to celebrate and nurture the achievements of women in the Tweed. It also aims to affect positive change for women and children. The Art Exhibition is open to all women artists in the Tweed and surrounding districts. The Tweed Shire Women's Service is a community managed not-for-profit organisation, providing a range of services and programs to women and children living in the Tweed Shire. Since 1987 the Tweed Shire Women's Service has sought to work with women and children affected by domestic violence by providing early intervention education, crisis support and crisis accommodation. For over 15 years the Tweed Shire Women's Service has maintained a strong presence in Murwillumbah providing a range of services to local residents. The exhibit is being held at Tweed Ultima Resort from Wednesday November 25 to Friday November 27. Opening hours are 9am to 4pm Wednesday and Thursday, and 9am to 3pm Friday.

Land Surfing

Surf World Gold Coast is a museum dedicated to celebrating the history and culture of surfing. Established in 2009, the museum has an impressive array of surfing memorabilia including rare surfboards, photos, books and clothing.

Surf World will host a land-based surfing contest on-Saturday November 28 from 7.00pm.

More than a dozen teams are expected to battle for the honour of being crowned the inaugural Surf World Trivia Challenge champions.

Questions categories will include surf movies, surf music, Aussie world champions, Gold Coast surf legends and more.

‘Most surfers think they know a lot about the sport so this event will be a chance to see who the real surfing experts are,’ said Surf World Gold Coast chairman Mal Sutherland. ‘The night will feature lots of fun, prizes and music as Gold Coast surfing buffs put their surfing knowledge to the test.

Tickets cost $20 per person or $120 for a table of eight and are available by visiting Surf World Gold Coast at Tomewin Street, Currumbin or by phoning 07 5525 6380.

Rip Curl Girls Go Surfing Day

The Rip Curl Girls Go Surfing Day dates have been officially announced and will be run by Surfing Australia Surf Schools on the weekend of November 28-29 at over 60 beaches around Australia. Now in its World champion surfer, Steph Gilmore believes that the RCGSD is intrumental in raising awareness of female surfing and getting girls in the water.

19th year of operation, the program is a huge weekend on the surfing calendar, and provides an opportunity for females to take part in a professional surf lesson with accredited Surfing Australia instructors in the lead-up to summer.

‘Surfing Australia is proud to be involved in such a long running and successful all-girl surfing event which is active, healthy, and fun and appeals to all ages,’ said Surfing Australia’s Sports Development Manager, Chris Symington.

With ambassadors such as two-time ASP Women’s World Champion Stephanie Gilmore taking part, the Rip Curl Girls Go Surfing Day is a great initiative in promoting women’s surfing. ‘The Rip Curl’s Girls Go Surfing Day is a really positive program, it’s important for raising awareness of female surfing and getting girls in the water,’ said Gilmore. ‘It’s also a good chance for you to have a fun day at the beach with your mates and to hit the surf in a safe environment.’

Surfing is one of the healthiest, most fun and rewarding ways to keep fit, and an important part of the Australian culture. Lesson price for the event is $50, which includes a learn-to-surf lesson delivered through the Surfing Australia Surf School network plus each participant will receive an event showbag from Rip Curl.

Walkin’ On Water Surf School is the local Surf School running the event again in Coolangatta. Their professional fully qualified Surf Instructors can’t wait for the weekend to get girls and ladies of all ages and abilities out in the water for a fun filled surf lesson.

To book your lesson, or for more information on local lesson times and locations, contact the Walkin’ On Water Surf School on 0418 780 311 or 07 5534 1886 or emailsurfing@walkinonwater.com, or visit the website: www.walkinonwater.com.

Khaney rows for Qld

Twenty year old Khaney Lakaev of Burringbar, has made it into the preliminary selection for the Queensland State Rowing Team for the Eight, after winning three of his races at the recent Murwillumbah Rowing Club Regatta.

Khaney was a clear winner coming first in the Division 2 Men’s Single Skull, first in the Division 1 Men’s Quad, first in the Division 1 Men’s Eight, and second in the Division 1 Men’s Four race.

He returned to Brisbane where he is studying at university, a very happy young man.

Khaney who attended Burr-ingbar Public School and Wol-lumbin High School trains intensely at Toowong Rowing Club twice a day and on the weekend he trains rigorously for six hours each day.

Khaney’s ambition is to compete for Australia in the World Championships and he is extremely dedicated, having made the decision to travel to Brisbane for university so that he could study and train at the same time.

‘I’m looking forward to one day succeeding in the World Championships,’ says Khaney. ‘I’d like to put ‘Burringbar’ on the World Map.’

McCartney, Rohan Small, team coach, Ken Small and Manager and Harry Klouzal.

The team were selected at the conclusion of the carnival at Evans Head last Sunday in which the club was placed 3rd in the point score behind Byron Bay and Lennox Head.

Callum Smith who was unlucky to miss selection won the 17 Surf and Iron Man, Nathan Smith the Sprint and flags, Ben James – 19 Board riding, flags, open board riding and Dylan Klein the board rescue and surf teams with Callum Smith and Michael Ross.

The open team won the surf teams and ski relay ahead of the strong Tugun side.

Next Sunday we will hold our annual carnival Board riding competitors meet at 6am. First carnival event 8.45am with surf belt races. Club members are asked to report at 6am to set up the water event courses and beach arena. IRB drivers are especially asked to assist.

Telecommunications giant Optus will be told to consult with the community before the council considers its application to erect a mobile phone tower near Uki. At Tuesday's council meeting Barry Longland won support to defer consideration of the matter until the company reported back on the outcome. Council staff had recommended approval of the 30-metre high tower, saying visual impacts would be minimised by vegetation and steep terrain and the electromagnetic emissions were well within safety guidelines. The council received 34 submissions opposing the tower and six in favour.

Council will spend $120,000 replacing the lids on 9,000 organic waste bins to change the colour from light green to lime green to comply with Australian bin standards. The money for the project was provided by the NSW Department of the Environment after the council met waste and sustainability benchmarks. A move by Greens councillor Katie Milne to spend the money on riverbank clean-ups or solar panels was defeated after council staff said the projects may be contrary to the department's guidelines.

A dinner in aid of the family of the late Tweed firefighter Andrew (Packy) Turnbull, who died after helping to put out a grass fire at Fingal Head last month, will be held on Friday, November 27, at Cudgen Leagues Club from 6.30pm, for a 7pm start. Cost is $50 per head and includes a two-course dinner and entertainment. Guests include cricketer Greg Richie, golfer Rachael Hetherington and NRL players Scott Sattler, Graeme Jackson and Graeme Eadie. Tickets available from Cudgen Leagues Club (6674 1888), Kingscliff Beach Hotel (6674 1406), Cudgen Primary School (6674 1287) or Jenny Jones (6674 3426 or 0407 743 426). Up for auction and raffle

A little bit of ancient China will come to Jack Evans Boat Harbour this Sunday with the annual Kids in Need Dragon Boat Festival. Thirty six school, sporting and business teams are signed up for the 300-metre race and the fun starts at 8am (DST) and wraps up at 4pm. Kids in Need has been helping kids for 28 years and all money raised from the day goes towards medical bills and equipment for kids in the Tweed.

NSW Police are keeping up with the cool kids by using online networking to promote their presence. They now have their own YouTube channel and Twitter page, the latter with around 4,000 followers. If you want to see them in person, Tweed Heads police are having a white tie charity ball November 27 at Twin Towns Services Club, starting 7.30pm (DST) where money raised will go toward the elimination of domestic violence against women. We were overwhelmed with letters this week. We will try to catch up or acknowledge in our next issue.

World rally opponents are probably feeling a sense of schadenfreude with the news this week that two of the event's biggest patrons, Repco Rally Australia director and organising committee chairman Garry Connelly and state development/primary industries minister Ian Macdonald, known in Sydney circles as 'Sir Lunchalot' for his excessive expense account, are no longer connected to the controversial rally. Sir Lunchalot, who forced the rally on the shire with 'special legislation', has been sacked by the premier and, according to online media reports, Connelly has resigned from his position. The report said Connelly always intended to stand down after the running of the rally here.

In our editorial of November 5 we stated that councillors were 'unexpectedly' given a second chance to endorse a report on the Kings Forest development. Cr Holdom points out that as she knew the matter would return to council, the editorial requires a correction. We accept that 'unexpectedly' is inaccurate and apologise for its reckless use. However, another 607 words of justifiable criticism remain. Readers may judge for themselves at www.tweedecho.com.au (go to print archives and click through to issue 2_10, page 8).

Anyone waiting for bright ideas, like limiting population growth or forcing new estates to supply their own water and (and for all homes to have water tanks), to be discussed in the new 'Community Working Group' on water, will be waiting a long time. A reader has discovered that to apply to be on the working group, you have to sign a statement that you support one of the four models offered by Tweed Shire Council (such as building a new dam at Byrrill Creek). If you have any ideas that are not pre-approved, don't bother applying. So much for community consultation.
