'Byron Council contributes greatly to the funding of works programs on the beaches and reserves but cannot proceed with works without state approval. Funding from the state is sought to contribute to the maintenance of these public areas and the provision of surf lifesaving services. Chopper doorknock needs volunteers

The Westpac Life Saver Rescue Helicopter (WLSRH) needs more volunteers to assist with its annual Doorknock Day appeal, announced general manager Perry Wells today at the official launch of Helicopter Awareness Week (August 21-27). 'Helicopter Awareness Week is all about raising awareness of the vital role the Westpac Life Saver Rescue Helicopter plays in the Northern region, and how people can support the service in any number of different ways,' said Mr Wells.

'One of these ways is through volunteering, and this Sunday we need as many people as possible to hit the streets in support of our service. It only takes a couple of hours, and yet it will make such a huge difference. People should call us on 6627 4444 if they want to help.'

The Westpac Life Saver Robin Duff from Westpac and Phil Gibson of Westpac Rescue Heli-Rescue Helicopter Annual copters are ready to receive donations this Sunday August 27. 'Running an aero medical rescue service is an expensive business,' said Mr Wells. 'Annual operating costs for the service are $3.5 million, half of which we need to raise from the community, year in, year out. Which is why events like Doorknock Day are so vital.'

'We are encouraging people to please support their rescue helicopter during Awareness Week,' said Mr Wells. Perrows find future in Tiny People

Alex McAuley

While Kieren Perrow is working hard to win his way back into the World Championship Tour of professional surfing, his wife Danielle is working equally hard back home in Byron Bay to create a business that will carry them into the future when Kieren's surfing career comes to an end.

Originally from Sydney, Danielle's background is in retail and marketing in the fashion industry, a career she relinquished when she met Kieren in order to travel with him on the world tour. Since the birth of the couple's first son two years ago, Danielle's keen business sense, coupled with good old fashioned common sense, identified a gap in the Byron retail market that she and her sister Vanessa have set about filling.

'Vanessa and I are also working on designing our own label which will focus on unisex, single colour pieces for nought to two year olds which can be mixed and matched and, most importantly, handed down to subsequent children regardless of their sex.'

Danielle hopes to build a small chain of these boutique stores to include one on the Gold Coast and one in Brisbane. In fact, she is already attracting customers from the Gold Coast who travel to Byron specifically to shop in

New faces in Mullum preschool care

Alex McAuley

With all the recent debate about the importance of preschool and the shortage of centres offering good quality early childhood education, it is reassuring for parents in Mullumbimby that Cobbers is now under new management and its new owners will be focusing on preschool education and preparation for school.

Sharon Wearne grew up in Myocum and was educated in Mullumbimby before leaving for university in Brisbane. It was while she was in Brisbane that she met her husband Tim who was teaching in preschools and infants schools at the time. After spending time living in both Melbourne, where Tim was director of a preschool for seven years, and Sydney where both their children were born, Tim and Sharon opportunity to return to the far north coast came up in sale that was the opportunity for the transition to school.' the shape of one of Tim's lifelong dreams: to own and run his own preschool.

A fair Australia

The Australian Council of Social Services (www.acoss.org.au), the peak lobby group for the community services and welfare sector, is asking Australians to consider what constitutes a fair society. Given that Advance Australia Fair is our anthem – why we didn't choose a song by one of our national bards about a vagrant stealing a sheep and then drowning himself is another issue - it seems appropriate to wonder if we live up to the words.

It is all too easy to believe the stereotype portrayed in tourism ads for overseas consumption. We are a friendly multicultural nation, madly interested in outdoor sports, and laidback in our personal philosophy (while still working hard enough to keep the economy growing).

However, the truth can sometimes be we respond in an angry kneejerk fashion to racist urging, we demonise minorities, we sit in front of the television while our children grow fat. We work hard because we are scared of losing our jobs or give in altogether and become another soldier in the army of the depressed. Which image is true, if either?

Beyond the image, there is the reality. According to ACOSS, right now 'there are two million Australians who do not have an acceptable standard of living and go without the bare necessities: housing, work, education, health care and community services. Their daily struggle to make ends meet takes its toll on their health and life chances.

'It is unfair that:

- Children in jobless families are less likely to complete high school. Currently 11.3% of people who have not done Year 12 are unemployed compared to just 3% of people who have done a bachelor degree.
- Children in the poorest of families live shorter lives than those born in the richest families. For example Indigenous Australians have a life expectancy that is 17 years less than other Australians.

'A fair decision is one that is considered valid because it meets contemporary community perceptions of what is a legitimate decision. Australia has inherited several institutions charged with upholding fairness such as democratically-elected Parliament, Constitution and the courts. However, it has frequently been groups of active citizens that have redefined our perceptions of fairness.

ACOSS's definition of a 'legitimate decision' could be found specious considering the nature of some 'contemporary community perceptions' - were the contemporary Taliban ruling fairly, did George W Bush really get more votes? - but its examples of the poor/rich divide and Indigenous inequalities shoot holes in the dream of Australia as a fair nation.

ACOSS invites us to comment on the nature of fairness after taking 'a minute to think about a time you were down on your luck'. Maybe that's the problem at the top while most of us have struggled to buy food and pay the rent at some time or another, our politicians never had to or forgot their working class roots. Many years ago an ABC current affairs program arranged for a Liberal minister to spend a week on the dole, and he found out firsthand how difficult it was to make ends meet. Perhaps it should be an entry requirement for the job of MP; then at least our representatives would think more closely on the ideal of fairness.

Until that job requirement is part of the parliamentary workplace agreement, visit the ACOSS website and tak challenge. Fair enough?

More pollution

Your lead article regarding a review of the RTA's pollution licence supposedly supported by the Byron Shire Council certainly raises some issues.

An issue concerning a huge number of Shire residents is the enormous amount of pollution caused by the lack of maintenance and improvements to the Brunswick Heads Boat Ramp Road.

For decades, every time it rains, huge amounts of mud run down the ramp into our river.

Council has ignored dozens of letters pointing out the pollution problem and now they have suddenly noticed another problem that has received and is receiving every possible effort and remedy to combat what A mature approach nature is dishing out.

And if you are still wondering, what is so special about core of the current Arab/ The problem is that Israel the Israel/Palestine issue, then please consider this:

So the debate on Israel has degenerated into an unwarranted and vitriolic attack on ence once a Palestinian state Judaism by Matt Jackson (Letters, August 15), who listed the Jews' alleged 'major infringements' against G-d. I'm not sure what planet or century Mr Jackson lives in, or what bible he reads, but he seems to believe that the greatest crime of the Jews is in not accepting Jesus, and therefore should have remained as stateless pariahs wandering the world and subject to the whims and persecution of the Christian authorities. I suggest Mr Jackson, your attitude to the Jewish people is unhealthy, to say the least.

Regardless of any religious the land of Israel is the ancestral and spiritual home of the Jewish people, and Jews have lived there continuously for thousands of years.

To claim, as John Weiley does, that Howard, Downer, Beazley, Rudd are determining their policies on the Israeli/Hezbollah conflict in order to capture/retain the Iewish vote is nonsense. The so-called 'Jewish vote' is highly overrated. Jews comprise 0.5% of the Australian population, some 100,000 people. This winter, saving energy means saving money.

Start saving money on your energy account by using energy wisely in your home. Here's a few tips:

- Draw the curtains at night to keep warm air in and cold air out
- Use draught 'snakes' along doors to keep out cold air
- Turn off heaters when you don't need them or are not at home
- Insulate the first couple of metres of outlet pipes from your hot water system
- Make sure your heater is an adequate size for your room
- When alone, use a personal heater instead of heating the entire room.
- Try to keep warmer by wearing more clothes instead of turning up the heat
- Don't leave an electric blanket on when no-one is home

Agri 2006

White: Z Lin

From its beginnings in the years later, the World Youth (U/16) Olympiad has featured Australia as a regular participant. The only international team tournament for juniors, the Youth Olympiad has been strangely neglected by many strong European countries, including Russia, leaving the way clear for junior powerhouses China and the Ukraine to share the spoils in most

At the 2006 Youth Olympiad played at the foot of Mount Ararat in Agri, Turkey, Hungary was unexpectedly the top seed but the Ukrainians dominated as usual. Ukraine, the country which has produced 12year-old grandmasters Sergey Karjakin and Katerina Lahno, arrived in Agri with a team of relative unknowns but, after a stumble in the second round against Georgia, won against all their major rivals to cruise to the gold medals.

With Moulthun Ly, Junta Ikeda and the Song siblings all unavailable, the unfunded second-string Australian team remarkably won five of their matches but were outclassed 0-4 in their contests against the top three seeds, Hungary, the Ukraine and Georgia. Australia's star performer in Agri was Zhigen Lin, playing on top board. The Victorian youngster scored 6.5/10 and a win (rather than a loss) in his final game would have seen Lin take a bronze medal home.

Lin was also a victim of one of the tournament's best com-1970s and its revival 20 binations in his eighth round game against Hungarian International Master David

Six local young people have spent the past eight weeks learning about business and developing their passions and ideas into potential enterprises. Having completed the first Trail Blazers program with Byron Youth Service, they are now wiser about what it takes to develop a real business.

The three participants about to launch their businesses include Dee Anand, 20, an artist who hopes to eventually open a youth art gallery, and has launched her own business Deeformed Artistry; Katie Watts, 25, is fast developing her skills in managing many elements of the music industry and her business Changing Seasons Entertainment is developing the Get Rocked festival for young people to be held in Byron Bay in January 2007; and Dyani 'DY' Bevins, 24, who has been developing her hip-hop clothing label Gage

Enterprise Coordinator at Byron Youth Service, Di Mahoney said, 'The participants in our first Trail Blazers program are a great inspiration. They are all very creative young people, and the three businesses developed reflect that. I have no doubt that they will all go on and do the hard work required to achieve success.'

The Trail Blazers were trained and supported by local business mentors including Leah Robinson, Simeon Michaels, Liz Atkinson, Antar Douadi and Saul Goodwin.

Trail Blazers is part of the Byron Youth Enterprise Strategy, aimed at developing a culture of enterprise among young people in our region. It was funded by DEST's Enterprise Learning for the 21st Century program and FACSIA.

Nu ready to share carving skills

Nu Akpol Rojasajja is carving this totem pole at the Island Quarry and would love to show others interested in learning the craft what its all about. Recently returned from a stint carving a totem for the Root Gallery in New York City, Nu said, 'I receive "John Howard's arts grant" and I want to give back to the community. If I can teach some young people how to bring life back to these dead camphors, I'd love that.' Anyone wishing to take up Nu's offer just needs to come along to the Island Quarry in Ewingsdale Road, Tuesday to Friday 9am-12pm with a small donation towards tools.

Creating the Garden of Transformation at IQ

For over three months, a group of creative and energetic young artists and landscapers have met each week to work on an exciting new project, the results of which were unveiled a couple of weeks ago at the launch of the Garden of Transformation at Byron's Island Ouarry.

This group of local young men gave their time, energy and commitment to transform an overgrown garden and revamp one of the original sculptures of the Quarry which had disappeared under weeds and vines, in a project supported by The Buttery as part of Island Quarry.

One of the young artists said that creating the garden was a way of keeping his mind and body, active and busy: 'It was a good joint project.'

Another member of the group said that he was hoping that the fluoro colours of the lotus petals (of the sculpture) would have a transformative effect on all viewers.

The project has definitely been a team effort and an experience I will always cherish,' said Diana Marshall, one of the organisers of the project. 'The raw energy and humour of the group has really touched me and I feel honoured to have made friendships with these inspirational young men of

This was a true partnerships of hands Club Momentum and in partnership with working together to transform the old into North Coast Area Health Service and the the new,' said Catherine Job, the support coordinator.

> 'As we worked together, inner transformations and bonds of friendship also grew and blossomed. I am also proud to be part of such a positive community project.'

Law Society slams Ruddock on odious comparison

Three years ago local musician Colin George was inspired to create The Fatherhood Festival, a unique event that focuses on who our fathers are, where our fathers are going and how to get them back on track. With a patron like John Butler who's performing at the opening event on Friday 1 September at the A&I Hall, one of the Festival's aims is to create positive stories and images for the wider community.

I asked Colin why he wanted to create a Fatherhood Festival. He simply said: 'I don't know.

'What keeps me doing it is that we still get letters and emails from men saying things like: I went to the Festival and I realised I haven't spoken to my son or daughter for 10 years and I called them up and had a coffee and they broke down and told them they loved me. Those are the little changes that keep us going.'

Why have men felt such loss or alienation from their roles as fathers?

'There is a basic confusion for men around their roles. The economic signals say they need to go out to work. Aussie fathers are working a lot longer hours then their fathers did. The average dad now works 45 - 50 hours per week. The basis of the difficulty is that you have the changing family models which have an impact on how fathers can stay connected with their children, fathers working more hours, and a culture that promotes more work and fathers saying they'd like more time with their kids and family.

'There is more pressure on men to work longer hours and be loving engaged fathers that spend heaps of time with their kids - so there is an immediate conflict. Add to that the change in models of family, now there are more non-traditional than traditional, more blended, step, lone, adopted, gay families. All of those make the majority now and no one is addressing those issues. It's another aspect that influences men's connection with their children.' According to Colin, it's more than time with the kids, it's about what our priorities are when we aren't working.'There's lots of little things we can do. We had a guy called Dr Bruce Robinson last year. He's a lung specialist. Every day in his surgery he has to tell men they are going to die that they have three months to live. Everyone of them wished they'd spent more time with their kids. It's all about spending more quality time - and being consciously aware of that.

So how does something like a Fatherhood Festival have a hope in addressing issues of inbalance? Can just attending an event effect real change?

'The Fatherhood Festival is an awakening for many Dads and many other men. I remember a politican came to our first Fatherhood Festival and he said: 'I have five children and this is the first time I realised that I am important to them.'

'The challenge for men in the next 10 to 20 years

The Fatherhood Festival is on in Bangalow, Friday to Sunday 1 - 3 September. With tickets to the Friday evening John Butler concert virtually sold out and the closing event at the A&I Hall with Pete Murray on Sunday selling fast, there is an event for everyone. A key forum will be the Future of Families at 3pm on Saturday with Kali Wendorf and Greg Telford and many others discussing what impacts new family models have on our children. There's an art exhibition, a short film night on Saturday and also a discussion on alternative sexual health for men. All events are individually ticketed, but the outside events on Sunday are free. Tickets are at Barebones, The Urban and all Southern Cross Credit Unions.

is to become more communicative and more expressive and part of that is to be more authentic about how they feel. It doesn't matter if anyone is listening or not – it's very empowering just knowing.' Men parent differently to women, but according to studies, apart from breastfeeding, there's no difference in the quality of care provided by either gender. If this is the case, then how do men leave their children?

'There is no simple answer and I can only speak from my own experience.'

Colin is father to five children, but the first two saw him take flight.

'As soon as I learnt my partner was pregnant I was racked with fear. I had never seen it as a long term relationship and it was a bit of a shock. My dad died when I was seven and it was like I thought I was going to die. It was fear and shame and I went into a denial, and once you're in that you run away and try not to feel anything. It took me two years to try and come to my senses. Women don't particularly like that. It took me a long time to repair that relationship – that's why we are trying to set up expectant father programs and get into high schools to teach consensual parenting and help young people find out what that means.'

As society becomes less village focused, we work longer hours and live long distances from our families, support networks diminish for families. This is a real threat to the family groups who need the familial and community support.

'Isolation I think is the most dangerous thing around parenting – the ethos is to bring community together to celebrate fathers and to create mentors to support fathers. You need to have some sort of antidote to the concept of globalisiation – so if we don't have that we have to create it and that's the great thing the Northern Rivers has, a sense of community, and the sense that basically we can create an extended family through our community.'

So where are the positive images of fathering in our media? Every advertisement that features a child with the flu pictures a caring mother tending to the ailing child with cough mixture. So where is dad? And why is it always a nice white mum? Why isn't it a gay dad or a lesbian or a black mother?

'We want to promote positive images of fathers so that fathers themselves start to see themselves in that role. We are usually only seen as the absent father or the bumbling father.'

My husband is a wonderful father. We share child care, housework. He does all the cooking. I do the washing. Everyone remarks how extraordinary he is. Isn't it ironic that a functional participating father is seen as unusual?

Colin added: 'Fatherhood is the last major barrier towards equality – what's happening now is helping real equality between men and women – it offers men and women the opportunity to be the kind of parents they want to be.'

MARTY BREEN'S DEBUT ALBUM, ORIGIN, OUT NOW www.martybreen.com

According to my stars today's lucky colour is ginger. What a coincidence. There I was in my room this morning agonising over what I was going to wear, and I thought damn it, if I cut some sleeve holes in my cat I'll have a fluffy vest. My furry friend just happens to be ginger. Oh Lucky Day! Luck is relative to circumstance. I've never won a frozen chook, but I am not a mother of three living in Lebanon. So, one would say, with or without the assistance of an orange puss I am pretty damn lucky. Jesus, would you even bother to read your stars in a war torn country? Libra, today your building will be blown up. Beware of flying debris that may result from unresolved issues. Lucky colour: none. Run. The other day I backed into someone's car. What I had perceived as a tiny ding, resulted in $450 damage to the front of some poor woman's car. Not so lucky. Turns out she lives in her vehicle, so in fact I had damaged her home. Geez, on the guilt stakes, that's like running over a turtle. While investigating remuneration for repairs I discovered the woman was a psychic. Hmm, how ironic, cynical comic crashes into psychic. I couldn't help but question: if you're psychic, why did you park behind me? Unlucky I guess. Luck is something we just don't understand. It falls into the 'shit happens' category. In my attempt at helping my kids to build resilience to cope with life's ups and downs I was explaining to my daughter how sometimes you can just miss out. She had experienced the hardship of not being picked for a game. I said: It's not personal. It's just bad luck. She looked at me in tears and said: 'But when bad luck happens it means that God doesn't love me.' I was speechless. We don't believe in God. My seven year old daughter had completely summed up just what it feels like when something awful and unfair happens. My 'don't worry, it's just bad luck' seemed downright patronising. I decided to share one of my life tips with her. 'Well, maybe it happened because you weren't wearing your lucky undies!' That's right. Humans believe that we are the masters of our own destiny, but in fact, it's all about the divination of the drawers. One night I got hit by beer cans at a gig. I rushed home devastated. It was reassuring to realise that it wasn't because I was crap. I had forgotten to wear my lucky undies.

Lucky undies aren't necessarily attractive. If you're really lucky, you'll have more than one pair. (Makes the weekly activities a lot more hygienic). When you wear your lucky undies, for some unknown reason, great things happen. Schappelle Corby obviously wasn't wearing hers, and neither was Mel Gibson. In fact, after being detained Mel was heard shouting: 'Jews stole my lucky undies.' The existence of such positive pants means of course while most of the knickers will remain neutral, somewhere in the underwear drawer lurks the evil undies. These undies have got pissed and lost your wallet, dobbed you into the taxation department and voted Liberal. These are covert operatives. They are literally undercover, and are usually only discovered post trauma. Burn them immediately. Even if they're still on. For years now my underpants have been controlling my life. I woke up the other morning and thought today I grab life by the gusset. It's time to be responsible for how I react to all of life's outcomes and not defer blame to some poor bystanding bloomers. So now I'm not wearing any undies at all.

GETTING INTIMATE WITH WILLY

Willy McElroy, front man for the Wild Zinnias fronts the Mullumbimby Folk Club this Thursday. Willy is the lovable larrikin, the languid leprechaun, the lamenting lama of song. Willy performs a rare solo set of his songs stripped back to acoustic quitar and vocals. If you throw him a few extra bucks, he might strip back a little as well. I have always thought that a raw sound is that much better when the player is nude. Show us your Willy they screamed. And he was. And because he was, he did. Mc McElroy is all charisma and charm, so you're sure to have a warm and wonderful evening at the Drill Hall. There has been a constant stream of new talent appearing at the Folk Club over the months and this month won't be any different. Chalkboard spots are still available but you need to get your name down by 7pm. Feel the love at the Old Drill Hall on Thursday with the show starting at 8pm sharp $5.00 entry, tea, coffee and cakes available.

SHAKE IT UP BABY

Local outfit, The Soul Shakers have been very industrious of late, putting down the tracks for their brand new CD. The music is the culmination of the talents of local players and includes some impressive collaborations. Featuring: Peter C – vocals/guitar/ harmonica, Geoff Wright -bass guitar, Alan Parks – guitar/vocals, Ric Crothall - keyboards, Dave Sanders drums and Dave Sandford on sax. The band has prided itself on being a vehicle for established players and for up and coming guitarists. The Soul Shakers' regular gigs draw crowds of music lovers and musicians. They give musicians a chance to strut their stuff in a relaxed environment, many great players have stood in with the Soul Shakers over the vears, too many to mention. Although the lineup has changed over the years, it's as strong if not stronger than it ever was. Local artists with a locally made product and supported on the evening by Rebecca Ireland. Be at the Hotel Brunswick on Saturday from 6.30pm.

THE LOVE BUS

Love. Exciting and new. Come aboard, we're expecting you... on the Love Bus. Promising something for everyone. Now there's an idea; what about a singles night on a bus. Like a cruise ship, but more downmarket. You'd get on single in Sydney and by the time you got to Canberra you'd be a couple. Then divorced by Dubbo. It's never going to happen. The Love Bus are a band. In fact a very good local band, the winners of last year's Dolphin award for best song and best band. They're still flushed with excitement from their performance at Splendour in the Grass. Felicity Burdett and her band hits the highway this week to play The Basement and Sydney Uni, returning to play the Rails this Saturday with Triple J favourites, the Black Market Rhythm Co.

LONE LOOPY LAD

The most fabulous thing about being a stand up comedian is that I don't have to lug anything. I just turn up and walk on. Musos finish a gig and they're bumping out. They have to turn up

SEEING THE SON Pete Murray's had a relentless road trip since his release of Seeing the Sun last year. In fact he's been on the road since September last year and is now finally enjoying some down time with his family. He's a dad too, and I must say he has exceptionally good taste in names. His three year old son is Charlie (I have a 5 year old one – I love it, sounds like an old fella from the RSL). He's just finished perfoming in Moscow (where he's currently got a radio hit), in Holland at the PinkPop Festival, and sold out shows in New York, London, Dublin and all over Australia and New Zealand. His rich emotional and inviting voice wraps around like a blanket on a dark night. Pete is joined Fairy Folk Festival, to Perth's International Festival of the Arts and beyond. The latest tour launches their brand new album, Doomsday Piano, following on from Lullaby, the instigator of their slow-burning underground swell of fans. See them at the Imperial Hotel in Murwillumbah on Thursday.

BEACH PIGS

Unless you've had your head under a hay bale for the last 18 months, you would have heard of The Pigs and their unique genre defying performances - combining Country, Bluegrass, Hillbilly and Rock with liberal amounts of comedy. Par, T-Bone, Stretch and Cousin Billy Bob, whip the audience into a frenzy of dance and laughter with their unique blend of hillbilly/bluegrass music coupled with their ridiculous banter and outrageous antics. The Pigs are great musicians and use supercharged acoustic instruments. These little piggies don't care how much you huff and you puff, because with a lineup like this, they are going to be blowing you away. The Beach Hotel on Sunday.

LOVELY LISA!

Lisa Hunt returns safe and sound after a gig o/s saw her detained in Lebanon - but now she's back on Aussie soil giving that gorgeous voice a run at the Beach Hotel. Ms Hunt is soul personified. She's always puts on the kind of show that gets you up up up... and away. Lisa Hunt at the Beach Hotel on Thursday

ROLLING ALONG

The beautiful Carola fronts Roll Like That at the Rails on Friday. Warm, rocky, sensual groove. With great originals, you'll know why they took out the Song of the Year a few years back at the Dolphins.

for soundchecks. They can only tour in large vans. When I'm finished I leave. I can do a tour on a bicycle. It's not so easy for musicians. But for Mr Percival, aka Darren Percival, it is. He's eliminated all instruments except his own voice. With the aid of a delay pedal and a looping function he creates the backing track for his song. It sounds incredible It's perpetual experience and continuous improvisation. He's a mighty good singer, but then he did do eight years as lead singer with the James Morrison band, so I guess you'd have to know your straps. Mr Percival performs his one man show at the Byron Community Centre on Friday and Saturday 1 & 2 September. Tix are $22 and $18 from the venue. If you want to check out just what he gets up to check out the Tuesday workshop at the Community Centre Studio at 6.30pm to hear Ensembleous Spontaneous Vocaleous. BABY LEAVE THE LIGHT ON

Gaslight Radio are launching their brand new album 'Good Heavens Mean Times' at the Great Northern this coming Saturday. The album has been receiving critical acclaim, with a 4 star review from Rolling Stone and Melbourne Street press paper naming it as '.. One of the Albums Of The year..' The album comes in a limited by Kurtis and his new band at the Bangalow A&I Hall on Sunday. Tix are available at the Urban, Barebones and Southern Cross Credit Unions

CAMP KURTIS

The music has been cooking at Camp Kurtis, and this time it's ready to go. With a brand spanking new album about to hit the streets, launched nationally by MGM in September, Kurtis and his band play a teaser gig at the Hotel Great Northern on Friday. Perenially cool with a penchant for pop, there's the usual blend of funk but with a lot more rock.

ON THE BONE

I was out of the office today so I missed my usual catch up with Matt Hartley, frontman for Boneyard. It's rock, it's roll. It's blues. It's in your face. It's anarchic. It's a hostage situation and you won't want to leave. Apparently, they will be exhuming Sir Robert Menzies. Sounds like a groovy dig. The Lennox Point Hotel on Friday.

A CURLY ONE

Hailing from the Blue Mountains, King Curly is the invention of Steve Appel, one of the best-kept secrets of Australian music. For six years, his slowly evolving, chiefly acoustic ensemble has been quietly capturing the hearts of some of the biggest names in the business from the East coast Blues and Roots Festival to the Port

As we near the end of this series (originally suggested by reader, Joan Mott) we come to a YOKE of oxen and precious little else.

That is, if you don't count a YABBER of schoolkids, a YAK of aunts, a YELP of puppies, a YEARNING of lovers, a YARD of prisoners, a YES of bureaucrats, a YEA of reverends and maybe a YOYO of council rescission motions.

STANDUP COMEDY:

MELBOURNE COMIC FRONTS WHY NOT STAND UP!!!

Bradford Oakes (Oaxy) has performed standup comedy around Australia for the past 16 years. In that time he has played to over half a million people. That's a lot of laughs. Brad is in high demand as one of Melbourne's most experienced and versatile MC's, both on the live circuit and for corporate entertainment. His significant talent as a comedy writer has also seen him in demand as a TV comedy writer for Jimeoin, Full Frontal and Hey Hey it's Saturday. He performed his own solo one man show for the ABC's Smallest Room in the House, received the Moosehead Award for best small top tent show at the Melbourne

Comedy Festival and directed Corinne Grant's Comedy at the Melbourne Festival this year. He's appeared on Rove Live, Good Morning Australia with Bert and has found himself sharing the stage with comedy geniuses like Bob Franklin and Glenn Robbins in their show 'Who's that Guy with the Axe?' Bradford is in town visiting his brother and consequently we have the opportunity of having him as MC for the cult comedy event that is Why Not Stand Up. Every month new and upcoming comics take to the stage to sharpen their wits and hone their humour. It's been a spectacular event to witness, with local comics gathering new material and going from strength to strength each month. The next Why Not Stand Up is on Wednesday 30 August at 8pm at the

KEEPING THE DREAM ALIVE

NORPA Dance Action presents The Good Foot Dance Company in The Dream, a dance theatre production for young people and families. The Dream explores a young person's hopes and aspirations and the desire to realise their dream of becoming a great dancer - a quest that fires the spirit and imagination. The central character (performed by Jacqueline Smith), is a young dance student preparing for sleep in her bedroom while contemplating her dance exams the following morning. She is supported by a cast of colourful characters, (Bernadette Gardiner, Cristy Kilkeary, Kirsten Lee, Meiwah Williams), her childhood toys who come to life during her dreams. Beautifully presented and realised, The Dream is choreographed by Michael Hennessy, a former dancer with the highly acclaimed Sydney Dance Company and currently Head of Dance at Lismore's Conservatorium for the Arts. The performers represent some of the region's leading young dancers in a production that promises to entertain and delight. Premiere: Star Court Theatre Lismore, Thursday 10am & 7pm. Friday 10am.

ART PIECE GALLERY

Coming up at the Piece Gallery, Mullumbimby is a great opportunity to see the latest art pieces of some of our local established artists. These artists live and work in our area yet often exhibit in national cities and we don't get to see their work. This is the third exhibition of established artists' that case (contemporary art space and education) @ Piece Gallery has shown as part of show. c.a.s.e is a project supported by the NSW Ministry of Arts. This project's aim is to foster support for both emerging and established artists of our region and provide increased opportunities for professional development and exposure of their work to the local community. show.c.a.s.e. is about showing our region some professional excellence in contemporary art practice. And case @ piece gallery is pleased to present these 25 artists. Opens Friday at 6pm, all welcome.

OUTSIDE THE SQUARE

Artist Cath Grant has her gorgeous new vibrant and lyrical collection at the Regional Arts Cafe at the Tweed River Gallery. 'Thinking outside the Square' demonstrates the symphony of colour she uses in her works. This collection proves once and for all that you can't fit square pegs into round holes. The rainbow region of the North Coast is home to many colourful people who definitely think outside the square. This exhibition is dedicated to all the lateral thinkers, those rebels with causes, but not pauses. The fun-raisers, hell-raisers and the child raisers. Go... All paintings can be hung at various angles. There are no hard and fast rules since every angle holds its own appeal.

OTTO THE DENTAL

From London to Byron. From Punk rock to techno and back again, well nearly – Nick Taylor's sound has come a long way. Synonymous with the Byron dance scene for over a decade, Nick is a master of local sound wave tweekage. Now he's pooling his skills. His new musical venture is Slot Machine. 'We sound like An Electro/Rock crossover with a dash of punk

Aiming for a live-band approach, which they hope to bust out over the summer, Slot Machine have been clocking both rehearsal and studio time. 'We're working towards releasing an album next year. Our first single "No Fear" has just been released on Japanese label Madskippers, on vinyl too!' So the wheels are now in motion. Already under their belt are & funk and all the different sounds that turn [us] on.' The group is comprised of himself and Sean Candy who do all the programming & production, MC Puss'n'Booty from Puss on vocals & Whitt from Spiderbait on guitar. numerous live PA's, including Gold Coast Big Day Out and recently at Splendour in a synergy of live vocals, percussion, backing tracks and performers.

Slotmachine Slotmachine

Nick started making electronic music in the early

'90's while living in Tokyo. 'I'd been playing in punk and rock bands for years, but then discovered house & techno music, so the guitars went out the window for a while. But now they're back!' While living in Tokyo he caught some wild live shows. In particular Third Culture, an annual birthday bash thrown by a mate. 'One year I played after a wicked punk band called Wrench. After me were the Tokyo Shock Boys, who do some crazy self-mutilating cabaret, followed by an upside down Ramones covers band. Even the drummer was hanging upside down!' Alas, awe inspiring as it was Slot Machine won't be attempting the up side down sound down under

After living in Tokyo for three years Nick came to Oz for a while, where his son Jyaz was born in '92. 'I came to Byron because I'd had enough of living in big cities but still craved the stimulation & diversity of culture that they provided. In Byron I found the ideal mix of environment & culture.' One of the elements of Byron life he finds so endearing is how 'everyone's got a blag of some sort'. For this reason he doesn't feel the need to get caught up in a system of belief. 'As soon as you believe one thing, you become closed to anything else, so I try to keep an open mind.' Fittingly his hypothetical bumper sticker would read "Don't Believe the Hype", with perhaps, 'Respecting yourself and others as well as a healthy sense of humour are invaluable' in fine print.

But back to Nick's obsessionmusic. He describes hearing new stuff, even the process of 'sniffing it out and hunting it down' as a total buzz. Nowadays he uses the net to find those 'special nuggets' that get him so excited when he gets to share them with a dance-floor. 'A big moment for me was playing the soundtrack to 2001 Space Odyssey at midnight at the Milleniyum party and then watching people go mental as I played the first beats of the 21st century'.

Leonine extravagance, overindulgence and overspending has finally reached its outer limits – now everyone's willpower gets a boost towards Virgoan

ARIES: This week ancient Romans celebrated Volcanalia, thunderbolts from heaven. Here on earth you could have something hit you like a bolt from the blue: unexpected news or a huge realisation. Or maybe just something falling off a shelf, so watch your step.

health improvements, fitness

resolutions and financial

TAURUS: Free with advice for others, Taurans tend to be uncomfortable – or just plain hard of hearing – when they're on the receiving end. But this week brings information you won't be able to ignore – during health conscious Virgo transits little things get bigger unless they're attended to.

GEMINI: Certain imaginative plans could plummet to earth this week when you realise just how much hard slog's really involved in getting them up and running. Extravagance may have to be rejigged to fit practical realities. Smaller will start to look more attractive – more achievable, anyway.

CANCER: Cancerians' casa is their castle, and you'll be wanting to kick back there after the social sizzle of recent weeks – maybe following the advice of this week's birthday poet Ogden Nash: Home is heaven and orgies are vile, But you need an orgy once in a while...

LEO: Leos are undeniably generous – but extremely possessive about what they consider personal property. This week's birthday therapist is Leo primal screamer Arthur Janov, and you'll roar too if you scent a takeover – silence as a means of expressing disapproval being so not your style.

VIRGO: As this week's Sun and Moon join Mars in Virgo for your annual Don't Worry, Be Happy month, promise yourself this year you'll relax, take it easy, stress less and enjoy more. Then keep this promise to yourself as you would a commitment to anyone else.

LIBRA: This is the week ancient Greeks celebrated Nemesis – a deity who's received bad press in recent times but is actually the Libran principle of Divine Equaliser. If you've been living lavish and maxing the plastic, this week's Virgo energy weighs in on the sensible end of your scales.

scorpio: This week's cleanup-your-act transit brings plenty of energy for attending to things you've been putting off. Addressing the messy details in your life file – streamlining, downsizing, getting something that's been out of whack in your life onto a more level playing field.

SAGITTARIUS: You mightn't want to hear it, but the next few weeks of Virgo transits are best used for slowing down, taking stock of resources and focussing on the practical, day to day steps necessary for putting those new plans you've been dreaming up into practice.

CAPRICORN: Capricorns are by nature giving people who honour their commitments. But take glowing promises – your own as well as other people's – with a grain of salt right now, because the will to fulfill them could clash with this week's drawing-in, nuts and bolts reality.

AQUARIUS: It wouldn't do to be easily offended by criticism or the inattention of others this week, but then you're not likely to. It would be wise though to avoid arguments in which giving your opinion will be like trying to put out fire with gasoline.

PISCES: This week's influx of Virgo energy's particularly kind to Pisceans, bringing the chance to take life to a new level. A fresh look at finances, resources and credit is recommended. Business advice should be reliable and Jupiter could sling some unexpected dollars your way.

Like good wine, architects reach maturity over time. Learning how to make buildings well and developing a distinctive individual style can take decades. Glenn Murcutt is like the Grange Hermitage of Australian architecture. He has been making houses all his adult life and is recognised around the world for his exquisite Australian architectural style. His houses look like verandahs and they also perform as verandahs, allowing the owners to enjoy the natural environment, in tune with the passing of days and seasons, cool in summer and warm in winter, always protected physically and psychologically. This is the opposite of living in an airconditioned unit. Indeed, Murcutt takes great pains to design buildings that require no airconditioning. His architecture seems simplicity itself, this elegance a testament to the art and craft of his work.

RIVER QUEEN

The story at the heart of this movie is a tried and true one, Sarah O'Brien (Samantha Morton) becomes involved in the Maori Wars of nineteenth century New Zealand when she goes in search of her abducted son, himself the offspring of a mixed racial relationship. The atmospherics are potent and it's hard not to be reminded of The Piano for, though not as bad, it has the same darkness

Morton looks like she's acting throughout a sombre performance and Kiefer Sutherland as an Irish soldier suffers from a terminal case of the begorrah begorrahs. There is a historical grittiness, but it is awfully studied - which is the film's major drawback. By ceaselessly striving to make an impression it becomes so selfconscious that it never allows you inside it. Turgid and unfocused.

John Campbell

and sullen earnestness. It's also not a million miles from John Ford's mighty The Searchers, as director Vincent Ward explores the issues of the clash of cultures and the strength of family. But it is onepaced and unsettled, with scenes abruptly jumping from time and place, and made more exhausting by too much hand held camera and intrusive, melodramatic music laid over often incomprehensible dialogue.

THANK YOU FOR SMOKING

Nick Naylor (Aaron Eckhart) is a tobacco lobbyist whose cocky world order is threatened by anti-smoking activists, a do-good senator and a conniving female reporter. Eckhart, suave and likeable, easily wins sympathy for a character of questionable values who brazenly claims the high moral ground in defending our right to decide for ourselves. The nanny state steadily prohibits that which is not compulsory, while public opinion's odium supplements legislation in determining individual behaviour. It is a base argument which nevertheless holds - nicotine is a deadly drug, but we know that, so it's our choice. How we arrive at that choice is what concerns director Jason Reitman. The way business is done and the boundless potential for the population to be manipulated, particularly through the imagery of cinema, is the subject as Nick negotiates a deal with movie mogul Jeff Megall (a superbly repellent Rob Lowe) to get mega stars puffing fags on screen. It's laugh out loud funny and all too believable, and it points out how corruptible and gullible we are without ranting about that condition. In a zealous age, such an offensive of charm and wit during which there is not one cigarette smoked – is welcome respite.

Matt Dillon & Kate Hudson star as Carl and Molly Peterson who have just in Hawaii and settle down to the promise of a happy life together. Things look even brighter when Carl's employer and father-in-law, Mr Thompson (Michael Douglas), fast-tracks a juicy promotion. But when Carl's best man, Randy Dupree (Owen Wilson), lands on their doorstep with no job and nowhere to stay, chaos erupts. It's hard to put your finger on what makes Owen Wilson so likeable, but underneath his shaggy dog mop of unruly blonde hair and distinctively crooked nose, is an inexhaustible child-like enthusiasm responsible for much of his appeal. As irrepressible, homeless and jobless Dupree, Wilson turns irritating into lovable as he moves in with newlyweds, making life unbearable, then patching up the mess, turning things around so we see life from his point of view. With its smart script and an ultralikeable cast, You Me and Dupree is funny and wacky with plenty of heart, shifting focus beyond expectations.

FAVOURITE MOVIE QUOTATION : DEAD POET'S SOCIEITY

John Keating: They're not that different from you, are they? Same haircuts. Full of hormones, just like you. Invincible, just like you feel. The world is their oyster. They believe they're destined for great things, just like many of you, their eyes are full of hope just like you. Did they wait until it was too late to make from their lives even one iota of what they were capable? Because, you see gentlemen, these boys are now fertilizing daffodils. But if you listen real close, you can hear them whisper their legacy to you Go on, lean in. Listen, you hear it?... Carpe... hear it? ... Carpe, carpe diem, seize the day boys, make your lives extraordinary.

TABLE TALK

JACK GETS SAUCED

John Boland of the Byron Bay Chilli Company (www. byronbaychilli.com) recounts how actor Jack Thompson ends up with his name on a barbecue sauce: The first time I met Jack Thompson was several years ago at the Byron Bay Blues Festival. Jack had been jamming on the harmonica with Billy Thorpe. I think it was the year Roger McGuinn was there, doing Byrds tunes from the sixties; a day right up there with hearing the Elvin Bishop Blues Band a handful of years earlier, or Arthur Lee not quite so long ago. Anyway, I had a stand there flogging our Byron Bay Chilli Sauces, and Jack wandered by late one night to do a bit of sampling. I could tell by the way he went straight for the chipotle (smoked jalapeno) salsa that he was a connoisseur of hot sauces. He told me about his passion for charcoal/woodfired BBQ, mentioning that he also enjoyed making his own sauce recipes. We talked about his travels, the spicy twangs and smokey drones of barbecue sauce being tossed about like musical notes for the tastebuds. Some time later he rang to ask if we would be interested in working with him to produce some of his sauces for the public. He mentioned wanting to do something to help support one of his favourite community based initiatives - Landcare Australia. For every bottle sold we will make a donation to this very worthwhile endeavour. He said he asked us because, since our meeting at the Blues Festival, he had taken to adding that special touch of spice to his recipes with a bottle of our Red Cayenne Chilli Sauce (voted best Louisiana Style Hot Sauce for the last two years at the annual Scovie Fiery Foods Competition held in Albuquerque, New Mexico). Jack had three sauces in mind, and asked us to try them and see what we thought. First we had a barbecue in the hills behind Byron Bay where we live, and then we had one at his home near Coffs Harbour. Then we had another, and another, and finally it was decided. Labels were designed, formulations perfected and Landcare Australia approached. And that's how the Jack Thompson/Byron Bay Chilli Company range of barbecue sauces was born. Please join us for our official product launch at The Fine Food Show, in Melbourne, September 11-14. Jack and myself will both be there cooking the proverbial Aussie snag, dressed up with some of the tastiest barbecue sauces on the planet – Stand E 46 Gourmet Food Section. Melbourne Exhibition Centre. (Jeff's Shed)

NEW REDS FROM RUTHERGLEN

Rutherglen Estates is riding a recent wave of success and the wave of new varietals continues with the release of the Sangiovese 2005 and 'Red' 2005. Senior Winemaker Nicole Esdaile believes the Rutherglen Estates Sangiovese 2005 is the best sangiovese the winemaking team at Rutherglen Estates has made since its first attempt in 2001. 'Since our first vintage of sangiovese in 2001, the style of wine produced by our fruit has developed dramatically. As the vines have matured the body, colour, structure and the complexity of the wine has increased enormously,' said Esdaile. One hectare of the Rutherglen Estates lowest yielding vines of the sangiovese block was crushed and cold soaked for 48 hours in a small static fermenter before being warmed and inoculated with a traditional Italian yeast strain. Fermentation followed by maturation in mainly seasoned oak barrels has led to a wine showcasing all the traditional varietal characters of black cherry, spice and savoury notes. The Rutherglen Estates 'Red' 2005 is a blend of 85% shiraz and 15% durif all sourced from Victoria's north east. The cooler 2005 conditions resulted in more fresh fruit characters and a spicy character with real palate weight. Find out more at www. rutherglenestates.com.au.

AND THE WINNERS

Victoria Cosford

HOW WE LIKE AN AWARD!

Within the hospitality industry there are various bodies which bestow awards measuring excellence, one of the more respected being the Restaurant and Catering Association. Its purpose is to represent the needs of restaurants and caterers, and one of its objectives is to recognise best practice within the industry and to then award the leaders. The process consists of the selection of finalists in a variety of categories by people's choice, and the results announced at a slap-up function mid-year. And so it was that on July 31 at the Novotel Pacific Bay Resort in Coffs Harbour the Visa International Awards For Excellence in the Northern Region were revealed for 2006. As in previous years the Byron Shire shone, in both the number of wins and the number of finalists. For four of the winners the awards are by now becoming familiar but for the other four it was the first time they were recognised by this particular organisation.

Muoi's Feast in Byron Bay's Fletcher Street is a success story anyway, and adored by locals. The eternally-sunny Muoi - whose sweet humility belies the technical expertise with which she manages to please all palates all of the time – was the winner in the Asian restaurant category. I asked Muoi if she had a special recipe she was prepared to share and she suggested the Whole Roast chicken in Rock Salt, currently on her special Vietnamese Inspiration menu. She bones out a chicken, marinates it then smokes it on a bed of rock salt so hot it chars the chicken golden, leaving the flesh incredibly moist and gorgeously perfumed. Best Cafe-Restaurant in the region was deemed Utopia in Bangalow. This chic little slice of the city has from the beginning been popular, the long narrow space stretching back past tables filled with ladies who lunch, family groups or groovy young things in for a full meal or merely coffee, invariably well-made, and one of the heavenly sweet things from the glassed-in display. Winner of Best New Restaurant is the Devlin brothers' WhyNot near the Byron Bay roundabout. These hardworking boys deserve all the awards they receive: that welcoming space they have created will offer you forty international wines by the glass, Italian nights on Tuesdays, live music and stand-up comedy, tapas and cocktails, reasonably priced meals and comfy couches, and a Chocolate Fondant with White Chocolate Icecream capable of making grown men weep. Best Thai Restaurant went to Bang Thai at Bangalow. Having enjoyed several superb degustations there over the past year I can quite see why. Those were the newcomers. The usual suspects were - dish for Contemporary Australian; Fins for Seafood; Seven Mile Cafe for Wine List; Coyotes Cantina for Mexican. Dish is amazing – after seven years in fickle, ruthless Byron Bay it has only ever had two head chefs and has recently taken on its third, to replace Luke Southward. A new menu is expected out soon and I anticipate it eagerly – its leanings, I understand, will be more French than Spanish. Fins of course barely needs a mention - and I await with interest the opening of its little brother up at Salt in Kingscliff in a couple of months' time. The gloriously-positioned Seven Mile Cafe – to my mind one of the best dining destinations up here - is about to relinquish ownership after a very neat seven year stint by Marcel and Tracey, who are handing over the reins to lan Hunt and Wayne Higgins. As for Coyote's Cantina when I asked owner JP for one of the more popular dishes he described Halapeno Chillies Stuffed with Cheese, Double-Crumbed and Deep-Fried, and all I could think was: decadence in a dish! Or heart failure. Or eye-rolling pleasure, sitting out the back in the little courtyard on a balmy Byron night...

SAE and school cooperate

In July of this year SAE and BBPS launched a program whereby final year SAE audio engineering students supplied technical support for the biannual BBPS Arts Extravaganza.

The BBPS Arts Extravaganza showcases the school's Choirs, Bands and individual class performances that range from plays to dance groups, improvisation and mime.

Final year engineering students, Elliot Hudson and Hutson Rapier organised the audio and visual component of the evening that led to a much more enriched experience for the performers and audience alike.

The next Arts Extravaganza will be held in September and once again students from SAE will be supplying all sound gear and taking care of the audio requirements for the night.

Many parents commented on the improved sound and the professionalism of the evening.

New season for Byron Bay Athletics Club

Athletics in the Byron Shire has gone from strength to strength in the last few years especially at the grass roots level. The new athletics season will be starting in September and Byron little athletics has changed its name to Byron Bay Athletics Club to reflect a new focus on providing competition for senior athletes up to 17 years old.

Last season the club had 120 registered athletes aged between five and 17 years at all levels of ability competing at the Byron Bay High School oval in a range of track and field events. Byron athletes also have the opportunity to compete in both the Gold Coast and Brisbane.

'Our competition works brilliantly for everyone as the emphasis is on personal improvement not winning,' says Club president Phil Redhead. 'Every athlete irrespective of ability will grow and improve with training and practice through the season and they are rewarded

Sports Roundup with Alex McAuley

Bangalow/Byron rugby union 'grand final' comes a week early

Bangalow rugby union's unbeaten run came to an end in the major semifinal over the weekend, losing 7-6 in the last five minutes with a forward pushover try which was converted by a resurgent Evans team.

It followed a similar pattern to other close games this season: good service from the halves to get the backs going, but difficulty in making try scoring opportunities. A high turnover rate in the rucks and mauls coupled with a high penalty count put Bangalow on the back foot for most of the game.

Two penalties and almost a try from a strong run by Richard Allen were the total scoring opportunities for Bangalow; maybe it was a lack of intensity that was missing, or complacency after winning so many games, but it was certainly a wake up call. Training on Wednesday should iron out hiccup, and get the boys back on track.
