Gypsy crew help out the 'hood

Gypsy MoonDance organisers and Mullumbimby Soup Kitchen crew celebrate the $4400 raised for the Mullumbimby Neighbourhood Centre through a Kohinur Hall fundraiser. Photo Eve Jeffery.

The Black Madonna was invoked at the Gypsy MoonDance fundraiser at Kohinur Hall recently with ceremony and ritual by the priestesses of Mullumbimby.

Flute and tabla set the mood for the evening and the temperature was raised by Spanish guitars and flamenco dancers. The music was eclectic with Irish and gypsy contemporary melodies, and tempo from circus to world beats.

Close to 500 guests attended to the event, helping to raise $4400 for the Mullumbimby Neighbourhood Centre's emergency relief program and soup kitchen. Sumptuous fare was provided by the Soup Kitchen crew with their small army of volunteers.

The MoonDance was a huge success thanks to all involved in what organisers believe is a good example of what can happen when a community gathers together to celebrate, as happened during the moondances of the 1970s.

This community cultural celebration was supported by the Byron Neighbourhood Resource Centre. The organisers would like to thank all those who helped with this benefit, including the Kohinur community, who were the hosts for the night.

Call for 'sanity' in festival sites

Spokesperson for the newly formed group Coalition For Festival Sanity, Mac Nicolson, has strongly contradicted press reports that the idea of a community run festival site was dead and buried.

'The land to the north of the Arts and Industry Estate is available, zoned for cultural as well as sporting events and has been offered to festival organisers,' he said. 'The fact that the festival promoters prefer to have their own sites is not a reflection on the inappropriateness of that site but an indication that they want to be able to run their own show on their own land.

'A Council or community run festival site is the only way that the community can effectively control the size and numbers of festivals within the Shire.

'The current proposals for sites at North Ocean Shores/Yelgun and Tyagarah would see up to ten mega festivals a year if the promoters were able to get their way with either Council or the Sartor/Iemma government. This is more than a never ending party, it is mayhem and insanity and will spell the end of the gentle aspect of our family living and holiday environment.

'We do not seek the end of festivals by any means. We only ask for sanity to prevail and the first step is to dispense with the idea of privately run mega festival sites such as at North Ocean Shores/Yelgun.'

Bangalow bypass on RTA's radar

Michael McDonald

NSW roads minister Eric Roozendaal has agreed to a preliminary investigation on the proposal for a southern bypass of Bangalow. Following on from that advice Byron Shire Council voted 7-3 last Thursday on a motion by Cr Ross Tucker to allocate $10,000 for Council staff to prepare a submission to the RTA's Environmental Assessment (EA) of the Tintenbar-Ewingsdale highway route while Council is between elected representatives.

The RTA's feasibility study on a southern bypass is expected to take place while the EA is on public exhibition until September 29. An earlier motion by Cr Jan Mangleson which in part sought to have the exhibition time extended was lost 6-4.

A number of motions and amendments were put up during a long debate of the issue. Cr John Lazarus began by calling for a Council consultation with potentially affected landowners. Other councillors felt that as the RTA was undertaking the investigation, it was their job to consult.

Cr Richard Staples suggested the proposed bypass 'will never be built. We are creating false hopes and fears and pandering to the trucking industry.

'This would open another corridor through prime agricultural land. It's a 19th century solution to a 21st century problem.'

Cr Tucker countered Cr Staples's amendment to just note a staff report on the matter by saying it would be 'the height of irresponsibility not to make a submission to the RTA just because we [the councillors] won't be here to do it. Are we saying to the people "It's twilight, we're off"?'

In a press release last Thursday Mayor Jan Barham said, 'The investigation of a southern bypass of Bangalow is welcomed and I thank the Minister for Roads for responding to the issues that were raised with him in a meeting in Sydney earlier this month. This resulted from concerns raised by community members about the impact of the upgrade, and Council resolved to support an investigation of the bypass option. Only by investigating the matter will we know if the option for a southern bypass is a more economic and efficient outcome.

'Council will meet with the RTA next week and will request details on the scope of these investigations, how their findings will be considered and what the timeline will be. There are also concerns that the submission deadline of September 29 [for the A] is barely a week more than the minimum exhibition period of 30 days required, so a request will be made for an extension.

'Council is mindful of the short timeframes available to work through the EA submission and the parallel preliminary investigations, and will look to raise these matters at a briefing with the RTA scheduled for September 1.'

In favour of the bypass, Bangalow resident Jenny Coman said, 'The issues involved in the bypass proposal go well beyond providing relief from traffic noise in any particular locality. They include addressing the need to keep heavy vehicle traffic out of Bangalow village and getting traffic to and from the west – about 45% of the total – onto the new road and through the St Helena tunnel, instead of its continuing on the current Highway and the dangerous St Helena hill as would be the case without the bypass.

'Bangalow and Ewingsdale residents who have been working towards a southern bypass for Bangalow for years welcome the Minister's decision, particularly as traffic movements are expected to increase hugely once the new Motorway is built.'

The EA is now on exhibition at

Election Roundup

Cohen hunts fear and loathing on the campaign trail

Greens MLC Ian Cohen is injecting a note of parody into the local government elections by posing as the late American gonzo journalist Hunter S Thompson, author of Fear and Loathing on the Campaign Trail.

'I'll be embarking on a fear and loathing campaign because I'm freaked out the developers are about to take over,' Mr Cohen told The Echo. 'I'll be wearing my solar-powered pith helmet and taking the pith our of everything.

'It's a grassroots campaign so my car is powered by biodiesel and the campaign banner is 100% recycled surfboard.'

Expect to see Mr Cohen out and about until September 13.

The Main Arm Residents Association (MARA) is taking a straighter approach to the elections, saying that it is 'perhaps the last chance Shire voters will have to influence the outcome of future development in Byron's hinterland areas. Left unchecked, the outdated 1998 Byron Rural Settlement Strategy (BRSS) could create four large, densely populated satellite communities in rural areas, each with hundreds of new residents, destroying the cultural heritage and rural amenity of Byron's hinterlands.

'The residents of Main Arm are deeply offended by Council's lack of respect for their diverse community. The Main Arm rezoning highlighted an unwillingness of Council or the developers to meaningfully engage and negotiate with the community to find reasonable and acceptable planning outcomes.

MARA recommends John Lazarus (1) for mayor and Jan Barham (2), and for councillor voting below the line in the following order: John Lazarus (1), Basil Cameron (2), Patrick Morrissey (3), Richard Staples (4), Heather Harford (5), Nadine Hood (6), Adrian Gattenhof (7), Louise Doran (8), Simon Richardson (9).

MLC Ian Cohen does his best Hunter S Thompson imitation.

BU survey

Responses to Byron United's recent survey of candidates contesting the Byron Shire Council election are now available online at www.byronunited.org.au

Candidates will be ranked this week against Byron United's values, and the results published prior to the election. BU president Ed Ahern said Byron United was pushing for change, good governance and accountability.

'We want people sitting on Council who will work together to get positive, tangible outcomes for our shire – like bikeways, libraries, playgrounds, a fully functioning youth centre, sports fields, new roads and clean toilets.'

Candidate Patrick Morrisey has expressed concern at the way Byron United has 'applied pressure' to him in how to fill in its questionnaire.

'My initial feeling when I read it, like many others, was of great concern with the 'tick the box' type questions. However, I reconsidered and spent hours filling in the questionnaire as well as I felt comfortable, but Byron United's James Lancaster's phone call recently applying pressure to me to tick all the boxes or else they would not publish any of my answers, was unhelpful, undemocratic and not in the spirit of Byron Shire. I reconsidered again and finally filled in all the "tick the box" questions, but with provisos and great reluctance, given the potential for this data to be manipulated by a consultant in far off South Australia.

'Candidates for Byron Council have been sent at least five questionnaires from the Northern Star, The Echo, Friends of the Koala, and a Ewingsdale based bike interest group and Byron United. None of the other interest groups wanting questionnaires filled in has asked "tick the box" questions and applied pressure to fill them.'

Contact the candidates

To find out more about the candidates from their official Candidate Informations Sheet, or to contact them directly, go to www.elections.nsw.gov.au and click on the "view nominated candidates' link which will lead you to the Byron LGA and those candidates who have agreed to have their contact information released, which is most of them.

Postal voting

Postal vote applications are now open and close on Monday September 8. Application forms are available online at www.elections.nsw.gov.au, from council offices or from returning officer Kerry Crawford on 0458 477 834, fax 6681 6132.

Meet the candidates

Suffolk Park: The Suffolk Park Progress Association, in conjunction with CAN, will be holding a Meet the Candidates Meeting on Thursday September 4 at 7pm at the Suffolk Park Community Hall. Candidates have been asked to address issues specific to Suffolk Park, to give voters a chance to hear their stance on issues affecting the local community. All candidates and members of the community are invited.

Ocean Shores: Ocean Shores Community Association has a Meet The Candidates Forum at the Ocean Shores Community Centre on Thursday September 4 at 7pm.

Bay FM: Tune into Bay FM, 99.9 on Wednesday September 10 from 6.30pm to 10.30pm. Red Terra from 'The Shakedown' will get to the heart of pertinent issues.

Teaching boys to be boys

Mandy Nolan

I've always thought that one of the sexiest qualities in a man isn't his pecs, or his car, it's how he handles himself in the kitchen. A bloke who knows his way around a crock pot will never be lonely. This is a sentiment familiar to psychologist and author of the ultimate bloke raising toolkit, Raising Boys.

'We believe a boy should cook at least one meal a week for the family, from the age of nine,' says Steve Biddulph, who will be appearing at the Fatherhood Festival in Bangalow on the weekend.

And why nine?

'Because that's the age a boy's attention span overtakes that of a border collie! At nine you can teach them about boiling water and how to handle it safely and sharp knives. Boys absolutely must cook, for their self esteem, and the pride of doing something for others. It's even the key to getting a girlfriend.'

Raising Boys altered the whole approach to boys in government policy, schools, and of course at home. It was the first parenting book ever to be a number one bestseller in Australia, and with more than a million copies sold it is still hugely popular even in countries like Brazil, Japan, South Africa, and Northern Ireland. It covers both the social forces and the biological and hormonal forces that make a boy what he is, and how to use these to help boys be safe, caring, energetic, and in love with life.

Psychologist and author Steve Biddulph.

According to Steve, raising girls isn't any different to raising boys, its just that we need to learn that some things are different.

'Boys need more help to use words. They need to use their bodies and move around to feel relaxed and able to learn. All children need same sex role models, so boys need good men in their lives, and girls good women. We need the opposite too – dads are essential to girls self esteem, and mums to sons. Mums are like a practice girlfriend for boys to learn how to be friendly, chatty, and respectful around girls and women.'

Popular culture doesn't necessarily provide real role models for men, and therefore it can be hard to model healthy masculine development.

'Suicide is still huge among men, as are depression and accidental death,' says Steve. 'Men have been cast as work machines for two centuries, but now there is a widespread discussion and activism for men to have balanced and happy lives. The Fatherhood Festival is one of the bright flames in that whole movement.'

For the last decade women have complained about the undue pressures places on them by the 'You can have Everything' package. Meaning that women can have babies, multiple orgasms, a rewarding family life, a high flying corporate job, be a yoga goddess, bake their own organic muffins while assembling some Ikea furniture while getting a Brazilian. Men have now achieved similar dizzying heights of gender role mutation. Men now need to be bread winners as well as bread bakers. Tough, cultured, sensitive, reliable, sweet and resourceful. Is this role loading as tough for men as it is for us girls?

'Yes, I hate the term work/family balance, because there has to be a world of self – one's spirit, creativity, belonging to community. Both men and women get trapped in being there for others, but become bitter and burnt out if they don't have a self.'

Steve Biddulph will be speaking at the Byron Bay High School on Friday at 7.30pm and at Lismore High School on Saturday at 7.30pm. Tickets available on line at www.fatherhoodfestival.com or at Southern Cross Credit Union, Barebones and Mullum Bookshop. Both talks are $10/$12 and are not suitable for young children.

Local groups appreciate support

The organisers of the Mullum to Bruns Run and Walk got together last week with event sponsors and funds recipients for a presentation of cheques.

The inaugural event which saw over 700 compete, raised almost $14,000 which was divided between local group the Brunswick Valley Rescue Squad and the Indigenous Australia programs of Oxfam Australia.

Representatives of both Oxfam and the Rescue Squad were over the moon with the generous donation.

Ross Allan from Oxfam said the money would go a long way. 'Oxfam is very active with indigenous programs currently running in the Gulf of Carpentaria. This money will be used at a grass roots level to facilitate the empowerment of the indigenous people in the Gulf.

'People recognising the importance of Oxfam and the Rescue Squad and choosing to donate to these causes says a lot about the people in this area. This is a sizable donation and we are really grateful.'

Rescue Squad president Chris Foster says the funds will be used to upgrade and maintain small equipment. 'Little things break quickly and easily and we have to continually raise funds to repair and replace gear. The Run and Walk was a great community event and Ross and I both agree that Mehil and his crew have done a wonderful job organising it. The rescue squad will certainly be involved next year in whatever way we can to help.'

Oxfam's Ross Allan and Chris Foster from the Rescue Squad, centre, accept cheques from Dennett's Richard and Davina and event organiser Mehil Beckerman.

Organiser Mehil Beckerman has had a chance to reflect on the Run and Walk and is very pleased with the outcome of the event and says that it simply wouldn't have been possible without the generous help from its sponsors.

Major sponsor Richard Storie from Dennett's IGA in Mullumbimby was more than happy to be invoved in the community day. Richard, who on behalf of the IGA donated $3000, was happy to be involved in such a health promoting activity.

'It was very satisfiying to support a day that would benefit a lot of people. The Walk and Run not only raised funds for two very worthy causes but it helped people to become healthier, it was a great way to get people up and going. Mehil has to be congratulated for his brilliant job.'

Richard is also mindful of the local community and this was one of the ways in which he could say thank you. 'We wanted to show our appreciation for the people who support us by returning the favour and this was the perfect vehicle for that.'

The beneficiaries of the event are very thankful to the sponsors. 'This is what happens in small communities. Everyone helps each other and it's important to support the people who support you to support us.'

Mullum High organises fun run

Mullumbimby High School will be holding a fundraising event on Wednesday September 10. Students will receive prizes in accordance with the amount of money raised.

The Run/Walk will take place on the beach starting at Tyagarah and finishing with a gourmet BBQ at Torakina. Students will be collecting sponsors over the next two weeks in an attempt to raise much needed funds for equipment at the school. The Run/Walk is slightly longer than the school cross country, and takes about one and a half hours to walk at a reasonable pace.

Prizes will be awarded to the best dressed and probably the worst dressed at the end of the day. There will be the annual Tug of War grudge match between the teachers and the sports houses with the teachers looking well honed as most elite sportsmen and women are.

Organiser Robyn Wright is overcome with emotion because everyone will be participating in her beloved sport of running (or walking). This hopefully will be one of the most enjoyable days of the school year so please encourage your son/daughter to attend and get involved. Remember 'One World – One School – Mullum'!

Marriage all roses for the Thornes

Thorne family legend tells the tale of a young man who, having arrived back from five years service overseas as a paratrooper during WWII, was hopping on a train to the army base at Richmond when he heard from the crowded carriage, 'I've got a seat here for you, sergeant!'

The rest, as they say, is history and a few months later Dick and Pat Thorne were married at St John's church in Kings Cross.

Another legendary thing about the Thornes is their absolute love and adoration for each other. From the moment they embarked on their honeymoon at Katoomba in the Blue Mountains, through their life together in Wagga Wagga and Sydney, in their journey as parents of three children, to their move to Tweed Heads in the late eighties to enjoy a golfing retirement and finally in their sunset years in Byron Bay, they have been hopelessly devoted to each other.

Last Thursday, the day after Dick turned 92, the couple celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary. Festivities began with a cuppa and a bikkie in the Byron Bay hospital where Pat is spending a couple of days receiving treatment and continiued on long into the afternoon when their children came to add their congratulations to those of the staff of both the hospital and the Orthodox Home where the couple have been living for the last two years.

Dick said the best thing about 65 years of marriage was simply 'being in love' and Pat agreed. 'We are pretty good at snuggling up.' Their motto: 'Never go to sleep angry.'

Biz gives street art thumbs up

Deb Pearse from BYS, graffiti artist Tom Burrey, Sevegne Newton from Byron United, and graffiti artists Christopher Rowland and Jo Levi, stand alongside their pilot street art project in Jonson Lane, Byron Bay.

Byron Youth Services, Country Energy and Byron United have joined creative forces in an Aerosol Art project for Byron Bay.

To date talented local aerosol artists from the BYS boys groups, aged 15 to 21, have decorated three electricity pads in Jonson Lane, Fletcher Street and Byron Street. The project, financed by Byron United and co-ordinated by Deb Pearse from BYS, means street artists have a place to express themselves legally while hopefully reducing the need for tagging around town – a tidy compromise.

Sevegne Newton from Byron United said, 'Aersol Art is a widely accepted and liked art form by our youth and we are attempting to engage them in ensuring that the Keep It Clean message reaches young people in town. This art form is a way of speaking to and engaging our young people. We knew when we undertook this project that not everyone would like it but it resonates strongly with our youth.'

The electricity pad in Jonson Lane (alongside the Great Northern Hotel) was the first to be enhanced. The pad is on land owned by Tom Mooney of the Great Northern and was offered as a place for the aerosol art team to conduct their pilot painting project.

Mooney told The Echo, 'I'm all for artists expressing themselves. I quite like aerosol art, although I think the art of Byron should reflect the makeup of the town itself – that is people that are young, middle aged, old, sporty, cultural, surfie etc. I would like to see a real cross section of artistic endeavours.'

Deb Pearse said, 'This project has been another great example of the older boys being invaluable in the roles of mentors. They have worked with a number of groups of BYS young people in doing murals on the Great Northern Wall, Mullumbimby High School and for Mullumbimby Skatepark.

'They are also instrumental in a mentoring role on the Street Cruise Program and Tom Burrey has been a spokesperson for local young people at a number of forums and meetings.'

Shining start for Council's solar campaign

The recent Byron Shire Community Solar Hot Water Campaign resulted in 95 households installing solar hot water systems over a two month period. Byron Shire residents were able to receive discounts from suppliers negotiated on their behalf by Council.

Mayor Jan Barham said that the solar hot water campaign was an action delivered under Council's Greenhouse Action Strategy. 'Everyone who got behind this campaign should be congratulated, as dealing with climate change requires us all make environmentally-responsible choices in how we live.

'I'm pleased to announce that the campaign resulted in an annual reduction of approximately 380 tonnes of greenhouse gas emissions – the equivalent to taking 100 cars off the road.'

Statistics from the Federal Department of Environment, Water, Heritage and the Arts reveal that postcodes 2481 (Byron Bay/Suffolk Park area) and 2483 (Brunswick Heads/Ocean Shores area) saw the Shire's biggest uptake in solar hot water heating over the campaign period.

Local hot water providers also reported a recent surge in interest for solar hot water heating within Byron Shire.

Council is continuing to develop sustainability projects to reduce individual's ecological footprint – See more at www.byron.nsw.gov.au/sustainability.

Council Roundup

Farewell to the class of 08

Michael McDonald

Perhaps deputy mayor Ross Tucker had a taste of things to come when he chaired public access at the last meeting of the current Byron Shire Council on Thursday. That was until Mayor Jan Barham hobbled in with a newly fractured ankle and took the seat which has been hers for the last four years.

There might have been some temptation to slack off at the last meeting but it wasn't evident: all ten councillors took their duties seriously, if somewhat longwindedly, to the end. So too in the public gallery, with punters lining up for public access. Staffers got into the spirit by producing a 243 page agenda paper with another couple of hundred pages of annexures, a formidable parting gesture to the elected representatives, a textual equivalent of the single digit raised skywards. Only the council candidates seemed uninterested in the process, barely a handful – I spotted Hood, Petroff, Stammers, Cameron – turning up to observe. Perhaps the others know it all already.

One of the longer term council watchers, Belongil resident John Vaughan, was gracious enough to thank councillors for their efforts over the last four years – 'you've done a good job' – before weighing in on his pet subject of coastal management. I have to agree with Mr Vaughan that not to have a peer review of the draft coastal management plan, as suggested in a staff report, seems extraordinary and unfortunate.

Crs Twiggy Wisp and Mortimer Stone on the road to nowhere.

The state of Dingo Lane, Myocum, was the first issue in public access – unbearable clouds of dust, road safety – and dovetailed with Cr Peter Westheimer's motion, changed and refined on the run, to get a cost benefit analysis of tarring versus gravelling roads as part of the asset management plan due in June next year, and which will probably become a compulsory requirement for councils. The road safety theme continued, with Shearwater school representatives declaring Left Bank Road unsafe for children riding bicycles or walking. Put in a cycleway/walkway was their recommendation.

Ephraim Sella has what seems a reasonable beef with Council's investments portfolio, particularly the emphasis on the dreaded CDOS or Collaterised Debt Obligations, about as popular as a zombie in a mall these days. Describing himself as a former investment banker in New York, Mr Sella took issue with 'structured products' in the portfolio such as Titanium CDO and Emu Notes and suggested, like some sausages, it was best to not ask what's in them. He advised councillors to ask a number of hard questions – such as 'how is each of the investments in these structured products meeting Council's criteria for sustainability?' – before approving investment reports in the agenda.

The issue du jour was the proposed Bangalow southern bypass, which has drawn the ire of possibly affected landowners and the formation of a new lobby group, Bangalow 2020. The bypass should be the Bruxner Highway, not the Lismore-Bangalow Road, was the view of Bangalow 2020's Ian Hay. Councillors' views are dealt with in a separate story.

In all, another interesting and intelligent public access session. It remains a shame that it does not become part of Council's written records. Participants are invited to upload their submissions to the relevant category of our Forums at www.echo.net.au. The usual laws of defamation apply.

I have now survived the reviewing of the actions of four terms of Council and have the grey hair to prove it. Next.

Farewell Alec Strong 1911-2008

Byron Bay identity Alec Strong died on August 5 at the age of 96. He was chiefly noted for his inspiring work in the education of children.

Edward Alexander Strong was born on November 29, 1911, to a methodist dairy farming family at Corndale. After high school he took a scholarship to Armidale Teachers College.

An Echo interview by Carol Page in 1999 noted: 'As a soldier serving in New Guinea in World War II Alec was astounded how many young men could not read letters from home. Some of them were much younger than he was, almost the same age as those he had taught before the war.

'He came back wounded and during his convalescence at Tamworth he met Rose. They married in Tamworth and moved to Doubtful Creek and then Edenville (both near Casino) where Alec was a primary school teacher.

'He attended a lecture in Casino by Fred Schonell (later Sir Fred Schonell), and was so inspired that he decided to put into practice his unique method of teaching reading.

'He did this throughout his whole career with great success, though he was once told by a Departmental Director of Education that "reading formed a very small corner in the field of education".

'Through Alec's patience and kindness hundreds of children and adults learned to read.

'He retired in 1976 to Ourimbah on the Central Coast and in 1978 received a grant from the Federal Government to establish the Open Sesame Reading Centre where children with literacy problems could receive tuition. In 12 months nearly 100 children up to the age of 16, some unable to read at all, had the opportunity to learn.

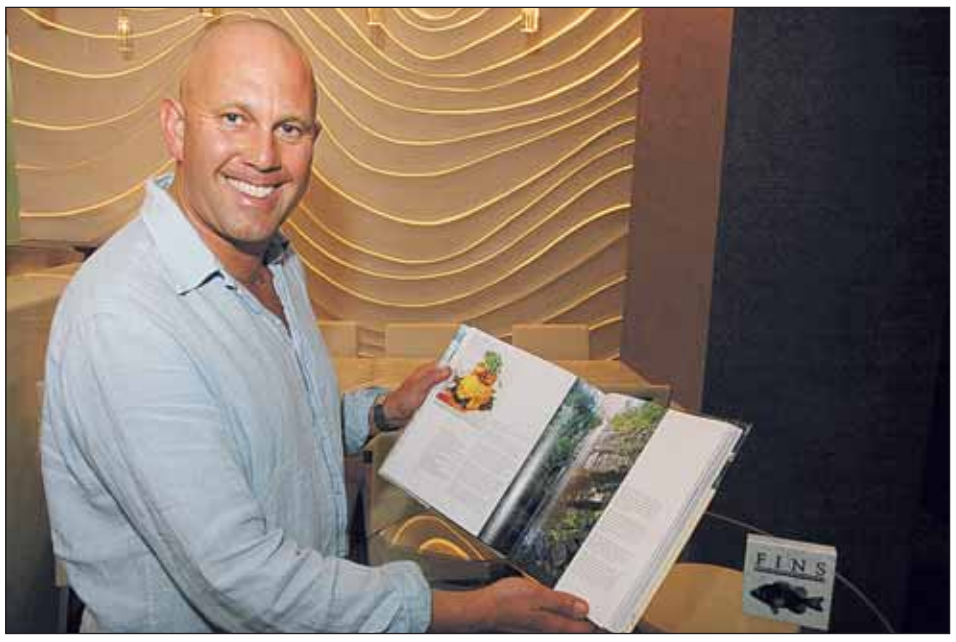
'Alec moved to Byron Bay in 1986 and although well into his retirement, continued to teach reading to those who sought his help. He did not charge a cent but mums and dads often left a donation towards electricity, books, etc.

'At the time Alec said he'd never had a failure. You just have to do it one word at a time, over and over again. "It's simple and effective," he says, "learn to recognise words first, comprehension and spelling can come later."

'"Some children are slow learners and the teachers just give up. Blame anyone but don't blame the kids. There isn't a child born who can't be taught to read or write."'

Following the passing of his beloved wife Rose, Alec spent his later years at St Andrews Retirement Home, Ballina. His family remember him as an 'educator, sportsman, patriot, stirrer and letter writer but above all loving family man'.

Snow falls into writing capers easily



Hot off the stove: award-winning chef Steven Snow presents his new dish Byron Cooking and Eating. The lavishly produced book contains the story of how Fins Seafood Restaurant has progressed from Brunswick Heads, through Byron Bay to its present location in Salt Village. Along the way Steve offers hundreds of recipes and insights into cooking and food. Photographer Brett Boardman complements the cuisine with fresh images of the Byron region, as well as all the Fins signature dishes.

Byron Cooking and Eating will be launched by Murdoch Books in Sydney this week, but Steven also plans a special local lunchtime launch on Sunday, September 14 at the restaurant.

After a set four course menu of Fins favourites ($69 per person), Steve will emerge from the kitchen to talk about the book and its origins. Reservations for this event are essential: email dining@fins.com.au or phone 6674 4833.

Jan takes dance into paint

An exhibition of dance in paint will be the opening event of the Byron Bay Tango Festival, which will run throughout the first weekend of September. For dance lovers the there will be a tango performance and great music throughout the night.

The exhibition encompasses the new paintings of local artist Jan Rae. Jan is herself a tango dancer who tries to spend some time each year in Buenos Aires experiencing grass roots tango first hand.

'I am obsessed,' says Jan. 'In the tango world everyone is obsessed.'

Jan sees herself as being on a journey of finding a way to capture dance in paint.

'I have always admired the connection musicans have with each other and dancers also have an amazing connection with each other and the music. Being an artist is a solitary occupation and I wanted to find a way to create a connection with dance and music.'

The exhibiton opens at Retrospect Galleries at 6pm on Friday September 5. For more information phone Retrospect on 6680 8825.

Highway angst

Anywhere the RTA roads program wanders, angst is bound to follow. So it is with the Tinterbar-Ewingsdale upgrade of the Pacific Highway and the investigation of a possible southern bypass for Bangalow.

The news that roads minister Eric Roozendaal will allow the RTA to study a bypass route while the Environmental Assessment (EA) for the T2E upgrade is on public exhibition will bring hope to some Bangalow residents and concern to others. Byron Shire Council has opted out of the consultation process – there will be no current councillors to take part in it, anyway – and left it to the RTA, which strikes fear and loathing into the heart if the Ocean Shores experience is anything to go by. How a possible route is mapped out must involve all players for and against.

The EA itself is a big document and deserves more time for public consideration than until September 29. The news of its exhibition arrived too late for The Echo to advise residents of 'information panels' at Ewingsdale Hall last Friday and at Bangalow RSL Hall last Saturday. You can catch up with RTA staff at Newrybar Hall, Old Pacific Highway, Newrybar, on Thursday September 4, 10am-7pm. If you want to lobby the Minister for an extension to the EA exhibition period, email enquiries.roads@roozendaal.minister.nsw.gov.au or write to The Hon Eric Roozendaal, Level 36 Governor Macquarie Tower, 1 Farrer Place, Sydney NSW 2000.

Keeping kids fat

Last week I wrote about the epidemic of obesity facing Australians. As a followup I am sad to report that the Australian Communications and Media Authority (ACMA) has decided not to impose further restrictions on junk food advertising during children's television hours. This is despite strong lobbying from health and community groups.

Diabetes Australia president Dr Gary Deed described it as 'a disappointing decision and comes less than a week after an Access Economics report revealed there has been a 137-per cent increase since 2005 in the number of Australians who have type 2 diabetes as a result of being obese. Obesity rates in children have more than doubled in just over ten years with one in five Australian children now overweight and one in ten obese.

'Children are inundated with junk food ads during prime kids' viewing time. We need to consider why the food industry is paying many millions of dollars to place ads in these slots if it is not to increase sales of unhealthy food to children.'

What is ACMA afraid of? That the fast food industry will go under if it can't advertise shit to kids? I don't think so.

Can the prime minister Kevin Rudd himself reform the system? After all, if he's concerned about the morality of posing children naked for photographs, what about the immorality of selling them stuff which will help make them fat and unhealthy? Drop him a note at www.pm.gov.au.

Kevin threatens the cane

After weeks of being accused of being indecisive, wishy-washy and all talk and no action, Kevin Rudd has retreated to his secure policy fortress of education and revealed a veritable armoury of canes, straps, bludgeons and other weapons of mass discipline.

The next stage of the revolution is at hand, and as with many other revolutions, it has an element of terror about it. States, schools and teachers had bloody well better shape up, because those who fail will be punished to within an inch of their lives and if necessary beyond.

There will, of course, be rewards for those who embrace the new order; the coffers will open and the money will flow. But there will be no middle ground, no room for excuses and no second chances. Toe the line, or you're down the mine. We'll teach the bastards.

This robust approach has of course been welcomed by the MrWhippys and Madame Lashes of the so-called education reform movement, most of whom enjoy unlimited space in The Australian; this is clearly designed to give the impression that the general public is weeping with delight and dancing in the streets at the prospect of their schools being subject to some kind of auto da fe. This is clearly not the case but it is true that most parents will probably gain some satisfaction from the idea that those entrusted with the education of their children will have to be more open and accountable to everyone, including themselves. It is an unfortunate but rarely discussed truth that parents and teachers are natural enemies; both groups are certain that they know best about what is right for the children, and each has a tendency to blame the other when things go wrong.

The only time the groups unite is when they face their common enemy, the government, usually to demand more money. By promising to deliver to the winners, and by shifting the balance of power away from the teachers towards the parents, Kevin Rudd and Julia Gillard have at least temporarily got the majority group on side. But while this is undoubtedly good politics, it does not automatically make it good policy.

> It is an unfortunate but rarely discussed truth that parents and teachers are natural enemies…
> by Mungo MacCallum

One obvious worry is that the new model appears to be drawn largely from that of New York, recently visited by Gillard. She was impressed by the fact that the Americans have managed to achieve a real increase in basic skills, mainly literacy and numeracy. This is obviously worthwhile, but in the process they have clearly not also induced a passion for learning. Most Americans end up either under-educated or at best very narrowly educated; American ignorance of anything outside America, or in many cases a single state, is both notorious and dangerous. This is not the path an internationalist like Rudd would want to tread.

Another problem is that it is not smart for a Labor government to treat teachers as potential enemies. The teachers' unions have always been favourite scapegoats for conservatives, who portray them as cells of wild-eyed Marxists determined to overthrow society and destroy public morality by perverting innocent young minds. And it is true that the Teachers Federation in particular has generally been leftist and occasionally radical. But it has also been a strong intellectual base for Labor, and one of the few remaining non-apparatchik sources of worthwhile political recruits.

Certainly the government of John Howard regarded teachers as a hostile force, which is why when Brendan Nelson was Education Minister he sought to counter their malign influence by imposing a flagpole in every schoolyard and a poster of Simpson's donkey in every classroom. In opposition, Labor was usually on the teachers' side. It would be a shame to break up a longstanding alliance now by wielding a big stick when diplomacy could well serve the purpose.

And the same applies in spades to Labor's punitive approach to truancy. Poor kids who habitually fail to turn up to school will now see their parents deprived of welfare in an attempt to starve the miscreants back to a sense of responsibility. Rich kids, whose families do not depend on welfare, will presumably still be able to skive off to their heart's content.

Apart from being clearly inequitable, this approach is both heavy-handed and silly. Children avoid school for many reasons, not all of which they are willing to reveal to their parents. In some cases the conflicts can be resolved by discussion and consultation; in others it may be necessary to change school. But it is hard to see that the process will be improved by threatening to remove what may well be the family's principal source of income.

One must assume that the policy is actually designed for Aborigines: in isolated outback settlements it may have some effect. But to present it as part of a 21st century education revolution is simply unacceptable – the sort of bullying approach you might expect from a tin-pot hillbilly dictator in the style of Joh Bjelke-Petersen. Rudd and Gillard can and must do better. The efforts of the last week certainly deserve an A+ for populist politics, but would be lucky to gain a pass in the larger classroom of life.

And the bad news from the Liberal Party is that the deadly Yellow Costello virus appears to be catching. When the best and brightest of his colleagues gathered to pay tribute to Pusillanimous Pete last week every one of them showed symptoms of infection.

The man himself insisted that it was neither a farewell nor a resurrection and indeed it wasn't: it was just another episode in his interminable political prick tease. And not one of his slavish admirers had the ticker to tell his tormentor: 'Look, Petey-pie, enough is enough: either come to bed or put your clothes back on and I'll call you a taxi.' Perhaps Tony Abbott was right: Costello really is the Liberals' greatest asset. What a depressing thought.

Penultimate opinions on the election

■ Greens Mayor Jan Barham is asking us to vote for her because she has experience, leadership and vision which she will use to give us a sustainable future. Well, the residents of Ocean Shores had the dreadful experience of losing their sports fields when she showed no leadership by following her fellow Greens councilors in voting to sell off this community land. At a public meeting at South Golden Beach in 2004 she demonstrated her vision by failing to see what the community clearly wanted.

Australian life is not sustainable if sport is denied to people. This is just so obvious when you see how strongly Australians embrace sport – witness the Olympic Games. I was closely involved in the legal challenge to Council selling Shara Boulevarde. The memory is long and the wounds are deep.

■ My display advertisement in this issue was submitted to the Byron News. They rejected it as 'defamatory' on the advice of their Sydney lawyers, who they couldn't name because they got word through the Goonellabah office (the Byron News is owned by the Northern Star).

I asked them to specify what the problem was so that maybe it could be fixed. If they didn't tell me then I would assume they weren't acting in good faith, I said. The only hint I was then given was that the cartoon figure was 'identifiable'.

Really! A caricature which looks like the person it caricatures! Unheard of. The real problem, I am entitled to suspect, is the text, where I remind Ocean Shores people of the way Ross has voted over the years. Is there now a suggestion that even a person's voting behaviour is defamatory? Editor Gary Chigwidden was around at the relevant times and is in a position to know whether my facts were factual.

As I recently argued in the High Court, democracy doesn't mean much if we aren't given the proper information on which to base our choices, which in turn means freedom of the press and freedom of information. All this nonsense about 'independent', 'infrastructure', 'sustainable', and 'good governance' with which we are currently being assaulted doesn't seem to me to illustrate the concept of democracy in a very inspiring way. Why not just draw lots?

■ Surely the biggest challenge that we face locally as well as globally is how to respond to and combat climate change.

As a community member of the Sustainability Committee, I have gained a deeper appreciation of the ways in which Council is responding to climate change. The solar hot water campaign has increased the number of installations and shown what a Council can achieve by bringing information, suppliers and community together.

Employing a Sustainability Officer has been another way in which Council is able to support residents and community groups to reduce carbon emissions. Mullum's community garden scheme and the North Coast Climate Action Group's Sustainable Streets program being two recent examples.

A Greenhouse Gas Action Strategy sets out the ways that Council as a corporate body can reduce emissions. I'd like to see the strategy broadened to help the community to adopt more sustainable practices.

Council has a key role to play in such a strategy by coordinating information, acting as an administrative point for federal and state rebate programs as well as extending the way it works with residents and the community to shape a low carbon future for our shire.

Last week, I was very disappointed to hear Ross Tucker tell the community that Council has no role to play in dealing with climate change. More than ever we need a Mayor that is able to look forward and squarely face the challenge of climate change. There is only one choice for Mayor and the Community Independents (Group C) are recommending Jan Barham.

■ The audacity of the Byron Bay businessmen spending so much money hiring out of town consultants to present misinformation and tell the rest of us cretins in the Shire how to vote?

There are so many businessmen who were first lauded and hailed as bastions of society (even by Prime Ministers), then failed, ripping off shareholders, investors, and customers to the tune of billions of dollars, chased around the world and finally jailed. Names flood to mind like Bond, Skase, Adler, Rivkin (bet you can name a lot more) include the 'Mafia like' property developers trying to run the ALP Wollongong Council and NSW Government. The premise that business has ability to choose councillors better than the rest of us is laughable.

I support local business and 'I Shop Local' and realise that they carefully watch their profit and loss columns and pay the CEOs the most money they can, but to let them or their hirelings run our Council services and use ratepayers money? No way, José!

Tony Chandler
Mullumbimby

■ 'I'll just do it!' Ross Tucker told CAN's Meet the Candidates gathering in Mullumbimby.

Time to remember the 91-95 Council when Ross was top dog and got a couple of very expensive things done for his friends in the north, notably the Mullumbimby Council Chambers. When the next Council came on board we suspected all was not well and, after we'd managed to eject Ross's favourite General Manager, Max Eastcott, and appoint a new one, Ray Kent, our fears were proved well-founded : Council was broke and would be in serious debt for the next ten years.

This meant successive Councils were handicapped

TRANSFORMATIONAL CHIROPRACTIC?

I decided to specialise in network chiropractic after seeing the transformation of a patient while working in Kalgoorlie. Cates' crippling low back pain meant she had to pace the isle during the forty minute flight to Perth. Three weeks after beginning care, Cate was able to drive the six hours, non-stop. At the time this seemed miraculous. Now this type of story is everyday.

Here's what my patients have said:-

'Before I would have rated my headaches 7/10, but after a week of care – 2/10.' N. Koren Byron

'It actually feels bad when I slump now.'
J. Xandora, 12y.o. England.

'I'm more happy, positive and energetic…and my sense of humour has returned.' T. Norton Sunrise.

'It finally feels as if my depression and anxiety has shifted.' Y. Taylor, Mullumbimby

People come to me for help with:

- anxiety and depression
- back and neck pain
- headache
- cramps in feet and legs
- restriction in neck reversing the car
- feeling 'not in their body'.

For young and old

Network Chiropractic rewires the way your nervous system has learnt to deal with stress.

Tension dissolves from your body. Physical and emotional stress is replaced by peace and openness. Instead of storing tension in the neck and shoulders you will have relaxed breathing, feel lighter, stand taller, be more centred and feel more alive.

Wellness is not about whether a person has disease. It's about their internal experience of their body, a state of mind in which you are relatively invincible, nothing can ruin your day. You feel alive, vital and confident and experience a higher state of well-being.

I have a B,Sc. Majoring in Anatomy and Physiology, a Masters in Chiropractic and receive the highest level of training in Network Spinal Analysis. I have been practising for 14 years, 8 in Byron Bay.

in what they could achieve, eg no new Library for Byron Bay after Ross and his compliant Councillors spent the money put aside for it on their dream project, the new Council Chambers. The current Council has managed finances well and not only discharged the debt but also delivered some substantial projects to the community, with others in progress. They deserve credit for their achievements, not the sort of criticism Byron United likes to dish out.

BU has already shown they have no idea of how to manage Council finances and their survey of candidates, benchmarked against their own criteria, is just another propaganda exercise. Should the preferred candidates emerge as Ross Tucker and his camp followers, eg Bob Tardif, this would be further proof of BU's lack of credibility. Ross has caused us grief in the past; we don't need a repeat performance.

■ A number of recent letter writers have asked those voting in the upcoming election to think carefully about who they intend to support. I couldn't agree more.

In the Byron Shire we value and even celebrate a peaceful community. Elected representative should reflect those values and the community's expectation that they conduct themselves appropriately. Indeed it is a great insult to the community if and when they fail to do so.

In the term of the present Council there have been numerous incidences of extremely inappropriate behaviour by Cr John Lazarus, which have been reported in The Echo. These incidences include, in relation to his opposition to tourism, his verbal abuse of two Becton staff members in Byron Bay, resulting in the matter being dealt with in the courts, and a separate but similar incident at the Byron Visitors Centre to which the police were called. Following his verbal abuse of Council staff the Byron Shire Council deemed it necessary to censure Cr Lazarus and the accummulation of incidences of inappropriate behaviour was such an embarrassment to the Greens they acted to have him removed from the party membership resulting in his resignation.

While he may have supported some people in the community with their concerns, it is not appropriate for Cr Lazarus to direct abusive and offensive language at those he opposes, as was reported in The Echo in the week following a meeting at which Woolworths representatives attended.

I am not an advocate for any candidate or party, however I do appeal to all voters to consider, not only who they want representing them, but also how they expect Councillors to conduct themselves. John Lazarus has demonstrated repeatedly that he is unable or unwilling to behave himself in a manner appropriate for an elected representative of the Byron Shire Council. On election day, for any thinking person, seeking a peaceful society means putting John Lazarus last.

■ I don't know whether to laugh or cry. Ross Tucker proudly announces that he has always voted for a bypass. Of course he knows that if he is elected and development in Byron Shire gets the green light, we'll all be sitting in crawling traffic trying to get into town, around town or out of town as fast as possible.

Diti Dickson
Mullumbimby

■ If you are dazzled by the array of choices for mayor in the coming election, don't be. The fact is that in Byron there are only two serious contenders in the mayoral race. With the exception of the odd misguided megalomaniac, the others who nominated are essentially 'sweepers' for the two primary candidates.

But then, if being an effective mayor is about vision, leadership and governance how do the two contenders stack up? What about the Vision Thing, for example?

Some years ago, when Ross Tucker faced off with Ian Kingston for the mayoral robes (and lost to him yet again) both candidates were asked by the local media to articulate their vision for the Shire. While Kingston provided a thoughtful and comprehensive response Ross seemed to take pride in stating that he didn't have one. In this election he is reported as stating 'I think the community wants bricks and mortar not philosophies and ideologies for its rates dollars'. It would seem that, for Ross, ideology and the provision of facilities are mutually exclusive.

Then there was that priceless local ABC radio piece on climate change. Faced with overwhelming evidence for the increasing impact of climate change our local station sought to dredge up a committed sceptic. Enter Councillor Tucker. On what basis did he maintain his dogged contra position, enquired the presenter. (Now hear this for painstaking, thoughtful analysis.) 'Because I'm Australian' was the gobsmacking response.

So, if the limit of your community concern is rates, roads and rubbish and you don't care too much about the environment and where land-use planning might take our Shire, do give Ross a leg up. He's a real terrier when it comes to pursuing potholes.

Like many councillors, Jan Barham sometimes confuses micro-management with leadership and on occasion manages to drive herself into an emotional spin. However, while she is no Mother Teresa she is a very hard working big-picture visionary with real passion and has obviously matured greatly in the job over the past four years. I might have had my disagreements with Jan over the years but I sure as hell know where I'll be putting my vote for mayor come September 13.

■ It's disappointing Council candidates aren't 'exposing' themselves on The Echo's web forums. Surely not all are old technophobes or perhaps our savvy candidates are reluctant to engage in such an open frank exchange of views and prefer the prepackaged spin.

It's important we know who we're voting for and what we can expect from our candidates. The forums allow you to discuss issues of concern, the pet projects or policies you'd like to see implemented – that vision thing we all keep hearing about. So candidates, please log on, reveal yourselves, let the passion, intelligence, prejudices and personality shine!

Forum participants are getting a bit sick of arguing the toss with Rene Thalmann! (Has any of the 'proactive' OS sportsfield enthusiasts come up with an alternate site yet?)

■ I am pleased to be standing in the imminent Council elections in support of Basil Cameron for Community Independents. Basil has a long history of being an energetic supporter of the interests of local residents. He is a strong advocate for public transport as part of a total transport strategy to achieve sustainable environmental, economic and social outcomes.

I first met Basil on the campaign trail back in 1995 as we, along with many others, felt compelled to put a halt to the excesses of the 91-95 council. This business-led council approved inappropriate developments with scant regard for infrastructure and in many cases developer contributions were waived or inexplicably discounted.

The most irresponsible decision of that Council, three weeks before being ousted, was to approve the multi-million dollar Council chambers which led to years of debt for subsequent councils – and residents – to carry. Council properties in Byron Bay were disposed of in a fire sale and there was a heavy handed attempt to sell the Suffolk Park caravan park for luxury development. Scandalously, funds earmarked for a Byron Bay library – $400,000 – were diverted to add another unnecessary wing on the building.

Clearly, and despite claims to the contrary, a business-dominated Council is not good for business and certainly not good for residents.

This election, for all our sakes, please do not deliver power back to the pro-development lobby. Vested interest and good governance are inherently incompatible and there would dreadful consequences for the amenity of visitors and residents alike.

Council was still recovering from the financial debacle in 2004 when Jan Barham became the Mayor. Under her stewardship the Council is now debt-free. I have seen several mayors come and go and Jan is by far the most hard-working, visible and available one we have had. In the face of a recalcitrant State Labor government and very personal attacks from disgruntled locals she has maintained an openness and a positive vision for the future of our shire.

Jan has done the hard yards and deserves to continue the tasks she and the Council have started. That is why the Community Independents support Jan Barham for Mayor in the coming elections.

Bill Mackay

■ Isn't it great that we have a very human, hard-working and highly competent mayor here in Byron Shire. There is no doubt that Jan Barham has shown enormous intelligence, ability and interest in so many areas of life here in Byron Shire. All of us have seen her at work, always listening, wanting to know more, finding out what each part of the community needs and getting things done. Most importantly it's been her focus on community priorities and her work as a planner that has made this administration a vast improvement on its predecessors. We need these qualities in the future leadership of this Shire. If we give them away we are sunk.

Sure there have been mistakes. The land allocated for sporting fields in Ocean Shores that was sold to the RTA was a terrible community betrayal by the Greens and has caused fury within the community. This must never happen again and needs sorting out immediately. But under Jan's leadership this Council has payed off the massive debts left behind when Max Eastcott was General Manager. What an awesome achievement to have payed off the eight million dollar debt left by the building of the new Council Chambers. We have to thank all the councillors who have made this possible. We now have $44 million invested as Council assets and the interest from these investments, which are crucial to the funding of major projects, have become very vulnerable to the current stock market and the priorities of this next Council.

I find it very upsetting that some of the brightest brains inside Byron United, who more than anyone believe in a set of values that will protect Byron and keep it unique, should at the same time be so vehemently opposed to Jan Barham and in favor of Ross Tucker. Byron United's warchest of 'show me our money' is both misleading and untruthful, implying unfairly that this Council, under Jan's leadership, is hiding money. There are now so many important projects in the pipeline and it's these projects that will make this place a stronger community and a better place to live in.

We only have two choices. Jan Barham and Ross Tucker. Who best will protect and develop this Shire into the future. I have to repeat Peter Westheimer's words. 'Of the Mayoral candidates only the current Mayor, Cr Barham, has the vision and pragmatism needed for the challenges ahead. She works tirelessly and enthusiastically and understands the issues. She deserves to be reelected to follow through what she has begun.'

■ Along with about 150 other people I attended the CAN Meet the Candidates event in Mullumbimby and had the opportunity to hear candidates for the local government elections speak. Congratulations to CAN for excellent organisation, and to Russell Eldridge for his fair minded facilitation of the evening. It was good to hear candidates and their positions and answers to questions – it certainly helped my thinking as regards how I will vote.

It was also good to see candidates like Tina Petroff and Ross Tucker turn up and participate – this might not have been their natural audience, and they didn't convince me to vote for them, but their participation and that of their supporters added a lot to the evening and its usefulness.

But where was the ALP? Every other ticket for the election was present. The ALP's Bob Tardif couldn't even scrape up one representative to attend and speak. Don't they believe in community participation and consultation? Were they worried about questions on Frank Sartor and the State Government's role in taking powers away from local government? Is this Iemma smugness at the local level?

By not turning up they lost any chance of getting votes from me. Sure, I was already suss of the role of big party politics in local government and wouldn't have given them my number one vote, but I probably would have given second or third preference to their candidates behind candidates I personally favoured. Not any more, and I urge others to leave the ALP out of their thinking. If they want to participate in local government here, they should not be ignoring events like the CAN one.

■ 'Community consultation' is one of those buzz terms that means different things to different people. Many believe that governments give lip service to it, but do so with a decision already set in stone. At times, it is hard to believe otherwise.

However, one problem with community consultation is that often the community does not take up the offer to consult via submissions, or to check Council information and updates online but waits until a decision is reached and then complains about being left out of the process.

Another problem is that often the windows of opportunity to respond to issues is so brief that they seem to close before we can pick up a pen. The most important thing is for everyone to be clear about the rules and they are, basically, that the government finds out the various views of the community and the stakeholders and then takes them into account when making decisions.

This is in contrast with the community myth that the government will do as they say and in contrast with the government myth that listening or receiving submissions is a very boring time consuming process that they have to do but it is all a waste of time because they know what to do anyway.

A third problem is that the youth or disenfranchised already feel ostracised (perceived or real), and thus, don't feel it's worth responding to requests for input into decisions affecting them. Though presuming I have the capacity to change all this would be akin to presuming I can cool global warming with ice cubes from the fridge, I do have one idea to support further developing the input of youth ideas into the decision making process. Teaching across the Shire has allowed me to come to know and admire many highly committed, intelligent and ideas-based teenagers, yet to our detriment, currently their areas of influence don't stretch much beyond the policies within the school fence. This is the shire's loss; yet they are members of this Shire who use our facilities, services and roads (or their fringes), pay taxes, serve on us and bring a vitality that many of us can only envy.

I'd go to every school in the shire, ask for students who wish to bring ideas, passion and tangible proposals to council to join together and set about gaining a stronger voice. This youth representative body could meet regularly, liaise with councillors and council staff, work on proposals and present them at council meetings. Their proposals would then be voted upon by councillors, putting each councillor's response on the record. This representative body would develop the skills of select groups of younger members of the community so they become empowered to engage with local issues, take their place in leadership positions in the community or stand for council themselves.

It is up to all of us, council and the community, to break through the myths surrounding consultation. Perhaps if we supported giving the same opportunity to our youth, not only would help break the cycle of cynicism, we just might learn from them.

■ At a recent candidate forum, I had the opportunity to ask many of the incumbent councillors questions about the investment portfolio of Byron Council that has now been acknowledged to have lost over $6.3 million in value (on an original principal amount of about $44 million invested in Structured Products). According to the Cole Report, Byron Council has a higher proportion of its investments in these types of products than almost any other Council in NSW. I was wondering why over three-quarters of our investments are in complex structured products that no one can possibly understand.

None of these products are listed on any exchange, so it is impossible for anyone to track their value.

Every one of the candidates seemed to fully support the existing investments. Whatever their political persuasions, they seem to be united on this one issue. None has ever objected to their approval, despite having had the opportunity to do so more than 50 times over the past four years. Not one of them expressed any remorse for having bought these products.

All the incumbents are unanimous in relying on these structured products having capital guarantees. A capital guarantee means that if the guaranteeing entity is solvent, the investor will get back the original investment without interest. Council has reported that over $8 million of these notes are not paying any interest at all. Assuming the current risk-free rate available, 7.75% compounded over 4 years, we have lost nearly $3 million in cold hard cash. This is money that will not be available for clean toilets, community centers, bicycle paths, sports fields, playgrounds, skate parks, community festival sites, road repairs, or lower rates, all things that many in the community are passionate about.

The voters deserve to know:

Did the fees and commissions that went to the people who sold the structured products to Council amount to over $2 million? And who earned these fees?

Why were the most complex structured products bought instead of term deposits or government bonds? (Or, why not invest locally?)

What are the actual cash-flows received on these products as compared to the term deposit rates?

What are the underlying investments in each of the structured products?

How does each of the investments meet Council's own criteria for sustainability?

Why were both the profits and the investments sent to the big money centre banks and multinationals, instead of locally?

Am I the only one wondering why we debate the spending of thousands of dollars, while ignoring the loss of many millions of dollars? These losses may be greater than shown above, as I have had to rely on the numbers as provided by Council, and these have not been audited.

Shouldn't our councillors be accountable?

Isn't common sense more important than being green, brown, red, blue, left or right? Or, are all the politicians correct in thinking that the voters can be swayed by big speeches while ignoring their basic duties? As the Cole Report reminds us, NSW councils are 'governed by their fiduciary responsibility as trustees for the prudent investment of public funds'. Has this been done?

A few more years of this kind of financial performance will result in a State takeover, making all of our arguments and input completely ineffective.

We will have no-one to blame except ourselves.

■ Fair go, Jan – you criticised the 1991 to 1995 council by labeling them the 'over-development council interested in scrapping height restrictions'. As Deputy Mayor of the 1991-1995 Byron Shire Council I feel compelled to say that these comments appear to be derogatory, probably intended to denigrate Ross Tucker, and I would remind you and the voters of some of the 91-95 Council's achievements.

In those four years the following facilities were established in Byron Bay/Suffolk Park area: Community Centre, Suffolk Park; Youth Activity Centre; Sandhills Kindergarten; purchased the First Sun Caravan Park from State Rail Authority; purchased the First Sun carparking area in Jonson Street from State Rail Authority; purchased the carparking area in Lawson Street, south SRA Land; purchased the North Power Building, Byron Bay, for use as library; approved an upgrade of WBSTP at a cost of $5.6m – a decision subsequently overturned and the upgrade ultimately cost $33m in 2005.

■ Thursday's Council meeting discussed a report on 'MR545' – in other words, the road between Suffolk Park and Ewingsdale.

This is the first time in my 13 years as councillor that I have seen an integrated look at the traffic issues affecting The Bay.

It doesn't start by assuming there is a 'magic bullet'. It drives the final nail into the coffin of the so-called 'Byron Bay Bypass' by demonstrating that only between seven and 17 per cent of genuine through traffic would use it.

If anything it looks even less viable than it was in previous studies. Why spend 10 or 20 million dollars on destroying and filling an excellent stretch of wetland, when the net effect on congestion in the town centre would be barely measurable?

This issue has become a political football. No-one has ever worried too much about financing it – it was assumed it would be delivered as a pork-barrelling exercise during an election campaign.

If re-elected I will be pushing (as I have been for nine years) for a second rail crossing to be formalised south of the station, and for the bus stop to be moved from its present dangerous location.

■ Ross Tucker's 'self-regulation' non-policy on holiday letting is a total joke and I'm not laughing. It simply panders to the avarice of the local real estate industry at the expense of the legitimate interests of long suffering residents to a life of peace and quiet in a genuine community where people know and look out for each other.

As currently practised, holiday letting is all pain and no gain for residents, and all gain and no pain for rent collecting landlords and the slack, fee-riding local real estate agents who service them.

In support of that contention I ask agents and landlords, do you put out and take in rubbish bins? Do you check on overcrowding by taking a drive around to see how many cars are lined up outside the lets? Do you in fact turn a blind eye to overcrowding? Do you in fact do anything more than take a phone booking and leave any problems to adjoining residents and the cops to sort out?

Here's a radical idea. How about implementing a 'one complaint and you're out' policy, with the rental bond to be forfeited and given directly to the sleep deprived residents rather than your good selves?

Finally, Byron United, (sic), why is there no complaints hot line for the north of the shire? Because there sure as hell is a noxious infestation of holiday lets at South Golden Beach that are a regular source of noise pollution and social disturbance at festival and holiday times. And, with the Splendour Mob touting 'accommodation opportunities' as a benefit of their move to Yelgun, there is the promise of worse to come.

■ It was a pleasant to read the Echo front page election report and realise that a part of the spirit of Nick Shand was still alive in the editorial department of The Echo. People tend to remember things said in jest even when the things are not said entirely in jest. The Echo should take a more irreverent bent on our own home-grown amateur local 'politics' as it previously did.

About a fortnight ago when reading advertising of this meeting through the Echo editorial I almost choked on my 'Home Brand Weet Biscuits' when, unless I have bigger cognition problems than I thought, I believe you commented that CAN was a collective of old rich hippie 'pinko greens' who I claimed 13 years ago was a CON and just a front for the part publicly-funded NSW Greens represented locally by the 'Saint and Sinner' of Broken Head. ■ To grow into a vibrant community harnessing the incredible talent of our diverse and creative people to ultimately match social, cultural and economic fortunes to the richness of our wonderful environment. To achieve this, emphasis has to be given to positive action by enhancing pro-activity and pro-opportunity on issues, moving forward with courage and showing passion towards achieving our visionary goals.

I have often wondered what a positive pooling of Byron's incredible energy would bring. I believe the key to creating something extraordinarily special is hidden by our ability to achieve exactly that. A vision that needs to be clearly defined with a matching action plan. We need continual review and redefinition to allow up-to-date approaches and solutions.

Based on positive action as the driver, Byron will quickly embark onto becoming a community that moves forward, setting in place the necessary service delivery mechanisms, facilities and infrastructure needs for progress. Based on a sustainability blueprint that is a set of broader, lateral and more inclusive assessments, Byron will quickly attract a positive brain flow towards its shores that will transform not only the way of life at Byron but also the range of products and services that will fuel our prosperity.

Creative industries will become the buzz word of town and our traditionally strong tourism industry will transform into a way of attracting visitors who contribute and enhance the local community, lifestyle and environment.

It is a green vision that is based on pragmatism, progress, pro-activity and focuses on a contributor's society.

If you think Climate Change won't hurt our economy, think again.

Australia is already a hot and dry continent.
Climate change will mean more severe droughts – reducing our water supplies, threatening agriculture and risking higher food prices.

Scientists warn that climate change will cause more severe bushfires, storms, cyclones and floods. This is already pushing up insurance premiums.

Major tourist attractions like the Great Barrier Reef, Kakadu Wetlands and the Australian Alpine areas are all threatened by rising temperatures – risking thousands of jobs.

Mary Gardner catches up with eggs

Six impossible things to consider before breakfast

Life is small.

There in the broken eggshell floats a chick embryo. I found it atop of the yolk inside the free range egg I cracked open for breakfast. The embryo is the size of my little fingernail. I can see its eye and beak, its bud of a tail and wing.

This embryo is about six days old. Aristotle had first written about it. In the 1540s, a Dutch anatomist Volcher Coiter published intricate anatomical drawings of the chick's entire development before it hatches. The twenty eight days are growth nourished by the yolk and protected by the shell. The process depends on being kept at the right temperature by the hen.

I first witnessed this phenomena as a thirteen year old. My class spent a month opening aged fertile eggs, never guessing what would be found within. We drew what we saw. But we had to learn what to see and how to label our drawings. We did again what Coiter did. This is as prescribed by Sir Thomas Huxley, who among other things in the mid 1800s set up dissection as the primary teaching tool in biology class. Five hundred years on, I was as mesmerised as Coiter.

So small is life! In an embryo only 42 hours old, I could see the heart begin to beat. I could understand why some people won't eat eggs from hens that run with roosters for fear of killing these little forms. I admired how the embryo developed predictably, like clockwork. The chick used up the last of the yolk exactly two days before hatching from a shelter now too tight.

Omne vivum ex ovo. My teacher quoted William Harvey, of the late 1500s. All life comes from an egg. Every organism develops from a fertilised egg of one sort or another. During university studies, the deeper mysteries became impassioned every day discussions. How does development happen so reliably over time? What is the meaning of mistakes and variations?

The question is not only over a few centuries but over millions of years. Animals both with and without backbones develop according to strongly conserved patterns. Looking at the embryos across species there are a surprising many similarities.

In the 1880s, these were one basis for supporting the evolution debate. Haeckel drew a line-up of early embryos of a variety of vertebrates. For a while it even seemed all embryos went through stages up 'a great chain of being' from fish to lizard to bird to mammal. Each embryo exited at some stage, differentiating and becoming various species.

But closer more sensitive observation discredited that version of the big story. There certainly is some common inheritance to life on earth but it's wildly complex. For a while, research attention was on deciphering a genome. A genome is all the genetic material of any particular organism. The mainstream hope was that if you held the paper transcript printed from the analyser of all the DNA sequences then you held all you need to know about that organism.

But as the alphabet in hundreds of different fonts is still only a collection of letters, genome transcripts are not the Shakespeare Folios of Life. Something else is happening that is guiding development and filling the world's stage with players. My old marine science professor, in his retirement lecture in 1989, speculated there had to be something important about space and time.

These days, scientists make computer animations of DNA, RNA and proteins bending and changing shapes in 3D and slow motion. Some positions seem to start activities. Others stop them. These are activities which create or halt production of different chemicals which appear during development.

In the chick embryo, at a very early moment and only for a short time, some of these chemicals are produced by cells at the posterior end of a wing bud. The wing bud cells are all the same basic ones until this chemical appears. It diffuses to the other end of the bud. But it spreads unevenly.

In response to this morphogen, the dividing cells now develop differently. They become various bony digits, vaguely similar to three human fingers. If a graft is now taken from posterior and set in the anterior position, the digits will grow out of their usual sequence. The wing becomes deformed.

There are more examples of morphogens. There are also hints that the nuclei of a cell counts the total number of cell divisions according to some internal clock. This clock keeps time of not only development but also growth, maturity and senescence (aging). Cells that divide produce cells that are immediately at the current 'age' of the organism in its life cycle. Cells that don't, that simply grow without being defined and integrated in the overall body, are a visible aspect of cancer.

But back to this half eggshell. I should think of breakfast. Then there is the day ahead. I, like anyone, am meeting people, doing jobs, thinking through ideas. Dreaming way beyond myself.

Then the astrophysicist on the radio show is saying we on earth exist on an outer arm of a spiral galaxy 100,000 light years across but only 12,000 thick. It's one of billions in the observable universe. I feel the switch as my mind struggles, shifting scale from the tiny to the vast. I catch my breath.

Life is so small.

United by former Cr Jenny Coman August 5 said, 'you've got it wrong' – and 'It is thanks to our Mayor, Jan Barham, that Council was finally able to acquire the land from the Arakwal people, whom you don't deign to mention' and again August 19 'fails to acknowledge the real gift from the Arakwal community in making their land available for our much needed new library' and past ones by Ian Cohen MLC September 5, 2006 'Arakwal and their needs have been ignored despite their generous donation of prime land worth approximately $2 million for a library'; all have asserted that the Arakwal gave the Byron community a library site; to my knowledge the Arakwal have never made such a claim and my guess has never sanctioned the Greens to assert such a claim. The Greens have attempted to distort history in some vain attempt to bathe in the afterglow of the Arakwal's very successful Indigenous Land Use Agreement – ILUA 2 and 3.

The Arakwal have managed a brilliant agreement with the NSW government that has sidestepped the mine fields of state and federal Native title law on land claims; an agreement that even Donald Trump would be proud, all credit to them. They don't need Ma Coman and Pa Cohen to step up to the plate and speak on their behalf.

The library site was not given to Council rather it was swapped for significant Council assets; one of which was – 'land at Taylors Lake' which as Byron United has correctly pointed out was donated to Council by local developer Mr Eric Freeman. Further the Lawson Street library site was not subject to a native title claim nor was it part of the mapped ILUA agreement. It is also a fact that part of the site in the past was already a Council owned road reserve, prior to it being diverted to a new alignment by the Lands Department in the early 1970s.

Who was responsible for the land swap with the Lands Department? Jenny Coman asserts, 'It is thanks to our Mayor, Jan Barham.'

At the relevant time when the dealing was done, Tom Wilson was Mayor and Council's general manager was Ms Robyn Read. A Councillor has informed me that it was Ms Read who apparently popped off to do some horse trading of Council assets to obtain a library site. As much as it miffs the Greens, it appears they had little to do with the deal. As Secretary of Friends of the Library Jenny Coman should be less petty and give credit to local developer Eric Freeman for the booty which enabled Council's Ms Read to do the swap deal.

Council now has freehold title to land in Lawson St and is perhaps ready to build a library. But is it the right location? It is with great amusement that we now watch the good ship Byron Green dropping its global warming ensign to half mast as they champion the building of our multi-million dollar library on a flood prone, designated Coastal Hazard Zoned land. This surely has the makings of a plot worthy of an East of Everything episode?

■ Three new candidates Patrick Morrissey, Basil Cameron, and Karin Kolbe, from groups B,C and G respectively, need to be elected as the new energy for Byron Shire Council.

They all have the ability and policies to work constructively and robustly with the Greens on a new council to form a possible 5:4 or 6:3 majority council.

The most outrageous spin prizes of the election campaign so far are Ross Tucker's advertisement regarding 'Working for families and the Environment'and Bob Tardif's touting 'environmental responsibility'.

Their voting history as councillors speaks louder than my words or their election spin.

Just in this 2004 to 2008 term of council Cr Tucker and Cr Tardif have voted against Sustainability initiatives, against Biodiversity Conservation strategies, against Climate Change considerations in planning, against planned retreat, against funding for a youth development officer and interestingly against a Long Term Financial Strategy.

And a few more: Ross Tucker also voted against Greenhouse Action Strategies, Aboriginal issues, affordable housing issues,an East Coast Whale Sanctuary, and against adequate collection of developers section 94 contributions for a 316 bed backpackers hostel DA in Byron Bay. Just to name a few! He may well proudly accept an award as the councillor of No! In stark and revealing contrast Mayor Jan Barham supported all the above issues.

Ross Tucker is a man of the 1950s and represents his particular constituents quite well but is not the best candidate for Mayor.

It is not worth the risk of voting for him as a protest vote against the Greens.

If the need for protest grabs you then support groups B,C or G – Morrissey, Cameron or Kolbe.

Fun run brings in the funds

Lions Club Secretary Terry Newling participated in the recent community walk/run from Mullumbimby to Brunswick Heads. He had asked the Lions Club to sponsor him, so he was very happy to donate his cheque to the Brunswick Valley Rescue Squad.

'Lions sponsored me for $100,' Terry said. 'Beforehand, I thought if I was going to go in the event I might as well make it worthwhile and get some additional funds for BVR. They do a great community job and who knows when their skills and equipment might be called on to assist me, my family or a close friend. My only regret is that I let Lions off too lightly this time, but then again there is always next time!'

Terry was pleased when Chris Foster told him that the money would be spent on repairing and servicing equipment some of which was due for routine maintenance.

Chris then turned the tables and gave Terry some money for Lions that had come from a recent joint venture of the Rescue Squad and Lions.

Has Ross Tucker Changed His Spots?

Change is inevitable, and therefore so is development

However! Gradual, moderate and responsible development is one thing; change that instantly destroys the character of a locality forever is another.

Ross Tucker's vote last month in favor of Splendour at Yelgun, in the face of overwhelming local opposition, shows that he still worships before the false god DAAC – Development At Any Cost. When Ross recently hosted some Catholic pilgrims he was merely behaving like a typical politician, posing as a human being who cares about people.

Did Ross care for the people of Ocean Shores when he voted in favour of the freeway being where it now is, against overwhelming local opposition?

Did he care for the people of Ocean Shores when he voted in favor of Brunswick Heads sewage being pumped to Ocean Shores, thereby using up the only spare capacity in the shire?

Did he care when, during the time of his hero Max Eastcott, money supposed to be set aside for sewerage was instead put into the general fund – where it disappeared rapidly into the $7 million deficit, which has never been explained?

Did he care when Max Eastcott's neglect resulted in the shire's sewage treatment plants becoming so overloaded that virtually all development in the shire had to halt for several years until the systems were upgraded?

Open your eyes!

From Max to Yelgun, the only thing that hasn't changed is Ross Tucker's spots…

Stargazer Lilith has adventures in the land of rainbows

Hawaii Ahui Ho...

Ahhhhhhhh Honolulu, my favourite city: high rise Tourist Central expressly developed to service the teeming hordes. Where everything runs on aloha spirit, and because being inconsiderate to visitors is alien to Polynesian culture the locals share their paradise graciously, giving endless courteous directions. Youngsters treat elders with loving consideration, paths are litter free, streets continually swept, hosed and cared for. No-one's drunk or disorderly. You can walk straight off the sand at Waikiki onto swish hotels' banana lounges to watch poolside hula shows – hours of entertainment in some places free, others the price of a drink. No menacing bouncers in black or heavy police presence. Even playing Spot Security we couldn't – they dressed like everyone else on holidays.

With Iz Kamakawiwo'ole's tender rendering of Over The Rainbow playing everywhere (Hawaii's ancestral name being Land of Rainbows), we get free hula lessons at Waikiki shopping plaza. At a festival in the royal picnic grounds under monkey pod shade trees (old style hula, big beautiful women with tattooed legs) my Byron travel companions encounter Hawaii'an plate lunch – as in no, they can't have kahlua pork without the pork.

Into the vivid local mix of Polynesian, Japanese, Korean, Filipino, Chinese, Portugee, African and Caucasian where a continental breakfast includes rice porridge, fried tofu, kim chee and lumpia, we promenade through heavy plumeria scented air to the Sheraton Princess Kaiulani for our favourite band Kaimana and dancer Tiana, eat lomi salmon under the big banyan then holoholo home through steeldrum playing rastas, performing parrots, handsome cops and luscious hookers sucking lollipops.

Lilith and Parijat Wismer in a lush Hawaiian setting.

Scorpion Queen Kumu Kea Pattye conveys us to our hula school home in Kailua where I am in hell in heaven, having stepped off the plane, looked in the mirror and screamed. Opthalmologist says shingles virus not in eye so won't go blind. Embark on healing diet of raw fish, seaweed, green pawpaw salad, iced canteloupe juice, painkillers, acupuncture and bottles of Hawaiian Rain.

All cabdrivers in Kailua are fishermen who fish weekends, but Richard the Magnificent from Kaneohe abandons the catch for our $70 fare and sets a cracking standard for sassy taxi chat. Wishing him well in his search for a wild woman who'll give him a heart attack, we comb Aloha Stadium's acreage of aloha everything for shell leis, hibiscus luggage, ukulele t-shirts, frangipani backpacks, tropical car seat covers and a double gourd drum then, eyes finally achieving floral overload, hit the cool home pool for chamchams: champagne with duty free Chambord liqueur.

A planette painted with hula girls flies us to the Big Island – home of Aloha Luigi, Hawaii's Cannabis Ministry and the Dodo Mortuary – to Hilo's Dolphin Bay Hotel with free baskets of bananas, lilikoi, limes, papaya, tomatoes and avocados fresh picked from their gorgeous gardens of cascading orchids, heliconias and every color frangipani. If I was a plant I'd want to be reborn in moist misty Hilo, where soprano frogs warble all night like songbirds.

Hilo being Hawai'i's funky alternative version of Byron, we affirm solidarity with protesters carrying placards saying Bring Our Troops Home and US Out of Everything, pay respects to Madame Pele the volcano goddess, order gargantuan platters of asparagus, mahi mahi and purple rice to accompany our Party in the Mouth guava wine.

At the Farmers' Market Angel Pilago, home grown ex-Viet vet runs for mayor with the mission statement: To change the context of conflict into a positive atmosphere so we can find agreements and solutions. This is not a cultural or racial issue – it is transcendent... and suddenly, from a riot of tropical florals, a highland vision surfaces in kilt, leather sporran and dagger in woollen sock selling Finnish zithers. A Scottish gypsy born on a boat in Alaska who invites us to his family's evening street performance outside the Kava Bar, where resident kavameister reveals the secret of drinkable kava (fresh coconut water) and seven kilted brothers – all movie star handsome, clean cut and luxuriously tattooed – pipe jigs and reels for a brace of leaping nieces.

A plaid blanketed didge produces hysterics in us and a middle eastern(ish) drone for the tribal wives and aunts' bellydance extravaganza (Mother taught it to daughters to keep fit on boat in Alaska). Which sailed to Mexico (clarifying the Lobos del Mar logo on family van) so next up a few mariachi tunes. The female rels reinvent themselves for a Polynesian dance show topped off with a stirring bagpipe and drum finale as Hawaii's cultural fusion reaches new heights.

Back on Oahu for Waikiki's Annual Ukulele Festival with performers from Japan, Canada and Guam and a uke orchestra of 200 school kids, the Mayor strums and sings What A Wonderful World with his own words: Smiles on the faces of tourists passing by... When friends are saying How do you do, they're really saying aloha to you, And I say to myself: I'm so lucky to be mayor of Honolulu...

Above: how the candidate groups appear on the Electoral Commission's website will be the order in which they appear across the ballot paper below the line.

Michael McDonald

There are two ballot papers for our Shire's local government elections on September 13 – one to elect the mayor and another to elect eight councillors. Both ballots are linked – whoever wins the mayoral position sends a spill of votes over to his or her preferred group ticket.

Hence in 2004 the Greens managed to get three candidates elected besides Mayor Barham, despite the small primary votes of Tabart (141) and Lazarus (51). If, say, Ross Tucker were to be elected this year, his preferences will spill over to his group F – Heeson, Woods and Barnham. And last time, Tucker directed his preference spill from his councillor vote to Diane Woods who was elected with a total vote of 1477 despite a primary vote of 33.

If you want the full detail on how to vote, go online to www.elections.nsw.gov.au/local_government_elections/voting/how_to_cast_a_vote

Remember, you do NOT have to vote according to an individual group's how to vote card – you can create your own preferred order.

Electing a mayor

On the ballot paper there will be a list of seven candidates.

You can vote for only one candidate but then your vote is exhausted if that candidate is not elected. It is better to number all candidates from 1 to 7 in the order you prefer so at least someone you like has a chance of being elected.

Electing councillors

On the ballot paper there will be group squares above the line and a list of all 36 candidates in their groups below the line. You can vote EITHER above the line OR below the line. Lazarus and Gattenhof (Group I) do not qualify for a group square above the line as there are only two candidates in their group. The rules state, in the Electoral Commission's rather confusing handbook, 'Request To Form A Group will include provision to request a group voting square, but only if… the number of candidates in the group is at least half the number of candidates to be elected…' In our case eight councillors are to be elected, so groups with four or more candidates qualify for a group square above the line.

Above the line, you can vote for just one group, however, to quote the NSW Electoral Commission: 'By placing a "1" above the line in only one group voting square, you have indicated preferences for all the candidates in that group, in their order on the ballot paper. The vote STOPS with the last candidate in that group and preferences DO NOT continue to any other candidates on the ballot paper.' (My capitals.) So if you vote above the line it is again preferable to number more of the squares in your preferred order of groups.

For the discerning punter, voting below the line for all 36 candidates in your order of preference is the way to go. You can pick and choose favourites among the groups and put your least preferred candidate at number 36. It takes longer, but you could practise compiling your 1 to 36 list by downloading the ballot draw from www.elections.nsw.gov.au or by using the sample on this page.

Good luck.

How they count the votes

For the mayoral position, to quote the Electoral Commission again: 'To be elected a candidate requires a majority (50% + 1) of the formal votes in the count. If no candidate receives more than half of the first preference votes, a process of preference distribution takes place. One by one, the candidate with the fewest votes is eliminated and their ballot papers are distributed to the remaining candidates according to the next preference shown. This process of elimination continues until one candidate has a majority of the votes, at which time that person is elected.' In 2004 in Byron Shire no-one got close to 50% of the first vote – favourites Barham and Tucker got around 33% each of the total vote - and the preference count went down to the wire. That is surely going to be the same process this year.

In the councillor vote, a candidate is elected on receiving a number of votes equal to or exceeding a 'quota'. 'Votes in excess of the quota are transferred on to continuing candidates according to their next preference marked. If there are a large number of exhausted ballot papers (those with no preferences for any continuing candidates in the count), it is possible for candidates to be elected without having reached the quota.'

A quota is the total number of formal votes divided by the number of candidates to be elected plus one, then one vote added to the result. So if there are 16,000 formal votes in Byron Shire, that number is divided by nine, making a quota 1,778 votes.

After those initial sums, the calculations of the 'transfer value' of 'surplus votes' head off into the mathematical stratosphere, so we won't bother with them here. True psephologists can visit the Electoral Commission website to find out more.

Preference counting starts on September 16, the Tuesday after the election, so candidates and their supporters will have plenty of nailbiting practice.

Byron Chiropractic

One of the most powerful effects of chiropractic care is to reduce dural tension. The dura is the connective tissue that surrounds the brain and spinal chord. In between these layers of tissue lies the CSF fluid commonly known as spinal fluid.
The flow of CSF is vital to the optimal functioning of the nervous system. It washes away toxins, acts as a shock absorber and helps the cells communicate When dural torsion is present this restricts the flow of fluid. This results in poor concentration, fatigue and back pain. A very powerful yet gentle chiropractic technique to restore this balance is Sacro- occipital technique (SOT).

Next gen hair reduction

IPL how does it work?

Intense Pulse Light treatments work by sending intense light through the tissue to damage the bulb and prevent the hair from growing back. Effective in dark hair, it often leaves behind 'fluffy' red and white hair.

New Elos technology

combines electric energies with the intense light, which means the treatment is now available to people who have hair and skin types that previously were not compatible with the treatment. The treatment can also be used for skin rejuvenation, sun damage and pigmentation.

Mullumbimby Chiropractic Centre

Chiropractic is a form of healthcare primarily concerned with function, rather than symptom analysis. Chiropractors aim to improve, restore, or normalise the function of joints, nerves and muscles. We can then function and live as nature intended.

We all tend to lose flexibility as we age. It may not be significant at first, but eventually we will notice our golf swing is not as smooth, or our reach with the tennis racquet has shrunk. This condition will probably start painlessly. You will notice it takes longer to warm up, and injuries occur easier and more frequently.

Chiropractic care is an ideal way for most people to improve this aspect of life. To make an appointment with Michael or Karl call us on 6684 1028. We are at 110 Dalley St Mullumbimby.

Gluteal cleft

Is the minor exposure of the buttocks often caused by the wearing of low-slung trousers, jeans or stubbies.

Female buttock cleavage regained popularity in the 21st century. Womens' buttocks are often a primary focus of sexual attention. The term "plumber's butt" refers to the exposure of male buttock cleavage that is considered to be unattractive. Also known as peddling crack especially if the victim is riding a bike.

In the early 2000s it became fashionable for young women and men to expose their buttocks in this way, often in tandem with low rise jeans.

Sometimes this resulted in what is often called a whale tail—the appearance of the waistband of a thong or g-string above the waistline of one's pants, creating a shape resembling a whale's tail.

If you suffer from gluteal cleft sydrome please buy some bigger trousers.

Great Floor!

Thinking Flooring is a family owned company that specializes in solid strandwoven bamboo flooring and decking. Strandwoven bamboo flooring is the second hardest hardwood; it won't dent like other timber flooring, comes pre-finished (however in years to come can be re-sanded and re-sealed), is termite resistant and is a great environmentally friendly product to install in your home.

Strandwoven bamboo decking is the perfect outdoor flooring product for our extreme climate. In the manufacturing process the decking is pre-finished with natural oils to protect against UV, water and scratching.

Our showroom is located in the Southern Cross Industrial Estate in Ballina, where our experienced staff are happy to discuss the product, the installation process and organize a quote.

If you can't come to us, we can bring samples to you and give you a free measure and quote in your home. We can also quote from your floor plan if you are building a new home.

Cog are back in the country and on the second leg of their album tour, promoting Sharing Space, the follow up to The New Normal, the album that broke them onto the national music scene back in 2002. The boys are rock stalwarts, having fronted the legendary Sydney band Juice, which evaporated about the same time as Dig, with the old Bondi School chums Lucius and Flynn hooking up some time later to create Cog. Turns out, Cog was exactly the right configuration.

I spoke with Lucius about what's been turning Cog's world.

'We did two secret gigs, one at Beach Road and the other at the Annandale – they were both under a pseudonym; Itchy Kransky. We did it to test new material, you spend a lot of time recording, and when it comes to doing the live thing you need to work it up... we try and evolve a lot of what we do on stage... some songs are just more difficult than others, although after a few rehearsals we are fine, the muscle memory comes back again.'

Muscle memory?

'It just gets so familiar with what you are doing it becomes second nature. Sometimes with drums it can become quite a meditative thing, you let it flow, and you try and just go with it.'

Lucius Borich is the son of Kevin Borich, a rock legend who's had over three decades in the industry. For young Lucius music was a natural choice for a kid who grew up surrounded by musicians.

'It was a bit of a novelty, even for them to see a two or three year old sitting on a drum kit, they built me a tiny scaled down drum kit, and it all worked and I could play a straight 4/4 beat. I have never had to second guess myself about what I am going to do with my life.'

Lucius has a very philosophical approach to his daily life, something he attributes to the ethos of working as a full time musician.

'I think now I very much look at the opportunity of every day as some type of a gift and I think that I look at the beauty of the natural world a lot more than I ever used to and that inspires me in a lot of ways and keeps me level. If I go into this cesspool of society and think about where it's heading you can get corrupt and get down it can get to you a lot. I guess I like to seize the day!'

The intensity and diversity of a musical career is what Lucius finds the most rewarding.

'That's what gives music its excitement for me, it's not as such a ground hog day, you are experiencing music in a different way – it's forever changing and that's part of the thrill. When you've been on the road a while you can't wait to get back into the studio and create. We love the road, but we also love to write and create, and the studio facilitates that.'

This latest tour is Cog's chance to stretch their legs with their brand new baby, Sharing Space.

'The first leg of the tour was great! We kicked off with an extensive tour and it was the best results we've had, it's almost ten years, and then we kind of for the first time went to UK and did shows there and we have a label in Germany now and they have just released the album this week, so, kicking off the second leg of the tour here is going to be great, we'll be servicing the areas we haven't played yet.'

Cog play the Ballina RSL on Wednesday 17 September. Tickets – $25 presold $30 on the door. On sale now at the venue or phone the club for credit card bookings on 6686 2544.

THE SOAPBOX MANDY NOLAN

fLYING Off

There are so many silly rules and safety measures on planes these days. As I limp shoeless and beltless through security trying to re-dress myself, I get ushered over by the bloke with the scanner. The first time I didn't know what it was. I thought he was going to give me an open air ultra sound. He reads the blurb about 'random test' to check for any chemicals or substances on my clothing that may indicate that in the hour preceding my 6.30am flight I didn't get up and knock up a bomb. I'm like 'Man, look at me. I'm a 40 year old Mum of three. The only terrorist residue I have on my shoe is the dogshit I trod in on the way to the clothesline at five this morning to get a pair of clean undies. If I'm walking funny, it's not because I've stashed something illegal in an orifice, it's because the undies were damp with dew and now I think I've got frostbite on my clacker.' Once you've actually boarded the plane they make the big song and dance about the tray table. It can't be out for take off. Heaven forbid the pilot crash and they have to do an autopsy on the black box and find out the reason it all went pear shaped was because of the middle aged woman with a frozen clacker and dogshit on her shoe had upset the fragile balance of the plane by having her tray table out. Don't even start me on the reclining seat. It's amazing what comfort and relaxation one simple inch can give. I call the recline button, the disappointment button. So much expectation, so little relief. It's a bit like Kevin Rudd. Apparently the pilot can't land the plane if your seat is back as well. It's not going to make much difference. When a plane plunges into the sea, or snaps in half and crashes into a mountain, generally the seats tend to rip out and bits of charred passenger move around the cabin. At least if they were burning into their seats you'd have the comfort of knowing they were in fact in the relaxed position. The safety routine is just a sham. You can tell by the state of that dirty display life jacket, that it's just a psychological device that creates the illusion of safety protocol. That life jacket looks like something they've been dragging out since the 1970s and unless you're planning on marshalling the next Mardi Gras that whistle is just a waste of space. The other night I was flying back from Sydney and the airhead, I don't know what are they called, flight attendant, canteen girl or whatever woke me up to ask me to put up my blind. Apparently the pilot can't land with it down. Jesus, what's he doing, a three point turn? Hasn't he got a rearvision mirror up there? I suggested that the rule was a bit 'anal'. There is a reason. If the wing catches fire, we need to be able to see it. Brilliant. Man if the wing is on fire I don't want to know. I just want to put my tray table down, lift up my armrest and recline one inch and go and meet my maker.

FATHERHOOD FESTIVAL

'This year's Fatherhood Festival is about questioning our values and accepting that we don't have all the answers. That is a great starting point. The quality and depth of presenters, speakers and artists at this year's festival indicates how far we have come in the past four years,' exclaims Colin George, the director of the Fatherhood Festival, and proud parent of five kids. And indeed the four days of workshops, talks, game show, music, films, activities and events lined up that make up the 5th annual Fatherhood Festival prove his point. Commencing on Thursday with the Testosterone Factor Game Show, organised by the UNCLE Project especially for the Fatherhood Festival, and concluding on Father's Day (Sunday) with an all-star free concert with Jeff Lang, Tex Perkins & James Cruikshank, Da Karpo and Cody Butler, this festival is an intently inclusive gathering designed for fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers, aunties, grandparents and all friends of children. The annual fund-raising concert features Australian Idol '06 winner Damien Leith in intimate acoustic mode, with support by Mick McHugh, Leigh Carriage, Kurtis, and Ross Nobel on Saturday. This early evening concert is preceded by six free and varied Parenting Workshops run by skilled professionals from around Australia. The final day is our fabulous free day of family fun, on Sunday, in the Bangalow showground, where there's nonstop action and activities for the whole family. Sunday's entertainment is all free, and features some of the most remarkable dads in Australia. At 11:15 world class indescribably talented circus star Joel Salom will present an original Big Kids Show on the oval, followed by a midday performance of all the finalists of the Family Idol competition. Judged by Damien Leith and a glittering panel, the winner anointed on the spot. At 2:15 new father and idol of all who love great guitar playing Jeff Lang will perform followed by the inimitable Tex Perkins and James Cruickshank, in their aprés Cruel Sea duo mode, with opening acts Cody Butler and Da Karpo. Visit the web site for tickets and further details. Tickets can be purchased online, or at the Mullumbimby Bookshop, Barebones Artspace in Bangalow, and all Southern Cross Credit Unions.

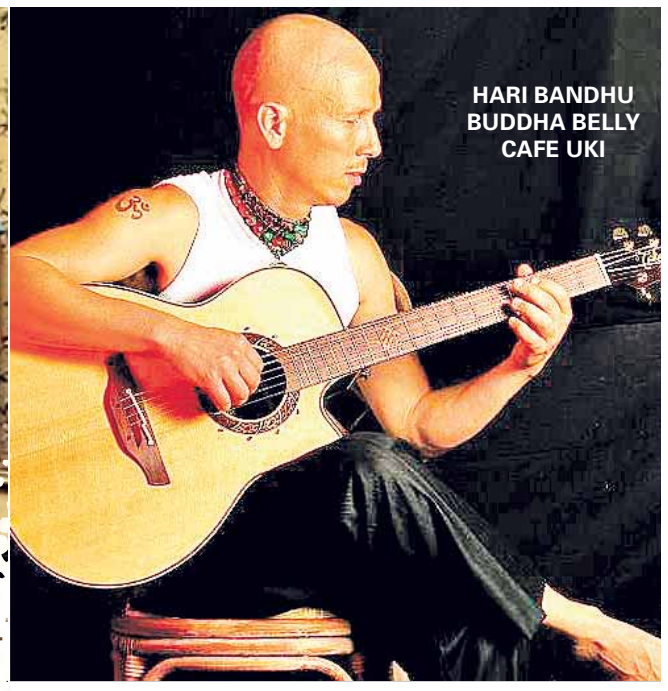
AN EVENING WITH THE STARS

What happens when you combine the talents of the youngest ever winner of the Sydney International Piano Competition with those of a young violinist who has been awarded the Paganini Prize in Italy, and been the only person in the 200 year history of the London Royal Academy of Music to ever be awarded 100% for an examination performance? You get an evening of superb, and sublime music presented by two of the world's rising stars. Ning Feng (violin) and John Chen (piano) perform a program of sonatas through the ages. From Mozart and Beethoven 200 years of musical history will be covered. Wednesday 10 September at Byron Community Centre at 7.30pm. This is a Musica Viva presentation. Adults $35, concession $30, student, including TAFE & SCU on production of ID, $17.

RAGA DOLLS

Ku Promotions present their first show at the newly refurbished Mullumbimby Civic Hall. The Raga Dolls is a smaller version from Australia's newest professional orchestra (Raga Dolls Salon Orchestra) and specialises in recreating the swirling sounds heard so often in the ballrooms of high society at the start of the last century: a dazzling mix of Viennese operetta, Gypsy Mazurkas, Argentinian tangos and the popular classics of the day. Their most recent album Night Falls has been hailed as 'A true evocation of the hours of darkness; glittering nightlife, lullabies and the world of shadows'. September 12 at 7.30pm for show at 8pm. Tickets $20 at the door only.



KING TIDE

Renowned reggae and roots influenced band, King Tide, is the first Australian band to be signed to prestigious UK record label, Urban Sedated. King Tide perform at the Beach Hotel on Saturday and Sunday.

CBD DUB

Celebrating the first day of spring CBD dub PROJECT will be appearing as the CBD dub Orchestra (11piece)! Featuring two soul mamas one stage! They have Sonia Leeson back to sing it up with Shelly Hughes, some slinky guitar from Ben Rodgers, three part horns and percussion. Also featuring special guests Guy on drums, Vanessa Baker & MC Thundercat (and Adam Biggs on sound). CBD creates their fresh, reggae influenced sound by combining catchy vocal hooks with sizzling instrumentals, hip-hop elements and dance music. At the Rails on Friday.

CANADIAN RE-MAINS

Back from Canada for a week, the Re-Mains are plunging into the fray at the Beach Hotel this Thursday at 9pm. The band bought an old Chevy van for $800 in Vancouver – it carried them 16,000 kilometres across that vast nation – playing 64 shows in 14 weeks. 'Country rock and roll is now a cargo cult in several provinces of Canadia,' claims frontman Mick Daley. 'We played to 15,000 wasted cowboys and cowgirls at the Big Valley Jamboree in July. At Ness Creek we had bears raid our cabin while we were playing. And at the North Country Fair we made history by playing three times in one night – the last time at 6am to a crowd of stupefied mushroom imbibers.' Invited back next year to all of the eight festivals they played, the band has also hooked up to a vibrant circuit of red-hot touring venues across the country. In the middle of recording an album with Christian Pyle of Ghost Mountain, the band's also playing Brisbane's Valley Fiesta on September 14 and then embarking on a four state tour of Australia. 'Business as usual,' Daley says, 'and next year a return visit to Canada, then Europe.'

BLUE BIRDY

Are you just dying for somewhere sexy, sophisticated and stylish to go out in Byron? Somewhere where you can actually wear out those killer heels and gorgeous frock, or that swanky suit that sits in the back of your wardrobe? Tucked away in the Woolies carpark in a new club called Liquid, The Blue Birdy is where it's at! Reminiscent of such legendary hotspots as the Basement in Sydney or dare we say it Birdland NY, Byron has its own little treasure for the avid jazz lover. This week Alfredo Lopes on saxophone brings his unique stylings along with a smashing lineup to the band stand. This week only $10, Doors open 8pm. Come fly with The Blue Birdy flock. Its fun!

YOUR SUMMERSONG

Every year for the past decade the Summersong Music Camp has changed the lives and hearts of all those who attend the week long music intensive at Lake Ainsworth, Lennox Head. For this special occasion of its 10th birthday the organisers have lengthened the camp from seven to eight days and extended the program even further. For January 2009 Summersong welcomes some fantastic new teachers from overseas and Australia. This year's program includes daily classes for all levels in a cappella singing with Tony Backhouse, songwriting with Kristina Olsen and Del Rey, guitar with Karl Farren and Del Rey. Music-filled days evolve into evenings spent performing, jamming and celebrating. Every year has booked out well in advance, so visit the web site: www.summersongmusiccamp.com or call 6684 5570.

Television Guide

1. It was the fifties and It Came from Outer Space (ABC2, Saturday 8.30pm), bringing communists, civil rights workers, union organisers and all sorts of troublesome people. Fortunately we overcame, didn't we?
2. This is Hellboy (NBN, Saturday 9.40pm). The release of this entertaining film's sequel is a good excuse to sit stunned by the visual effects of the original, and by the overacting of Ron Perlman's prosthetic make-up.
3. David Wenham, Frances O'Connor and Joanna Hunt-Prokhovnik (who marquee signwriters hope will not grow up to be a star) are the battling Australian family in the critically-acclaimed movie Three Dollars (SBS, Sunday 9.10pm).

TRIPOD AT EVOLVE

Standup comedy supergroup Tripod, the three wheeled, nerds with attitude front up to Red Devil Park on Saturday October 4 to headline Evolve, Byron's first dedicated Arts festival. I was driving late the other night and had the ABC on and managed to catch one of their latest songs, I can't quite recall the title, but the basic premise is that 'I'm a fey bookish boy who won't survive in a post apocalpytic green house affected world.' The line that had me almost wetting myself was directed to the importance of being politically correct and it said something along the lines of 'I don't have any indigenous friends, and I think if I started buddying up at this late stage they might get suspicious.' For those of you who don't know Tripod, it's a comedy triad of Scod, Yon and Gatesy. Scod is the geeky one with the guitar and glasses. Gatesy sings quite well and wants to play guitar. Yon, well he's shorter. He's weirder. He wants to play guitar but will settle for the trumpet. Their last live show was 'How to Train an attack Dog from Scratch' which premiered at the Adelaide Fringe Festival in March and went onto the Melbourne Comedy Festival 2007. The show was nominated for four Green Room Awards, one of Melbourne's Premier Arts Awards. Tripod had a successful return to the New Zealand Comedy Festival and returned to the Edinburgh Fringe Festival in August for the first time in nearly ten years, performing in the delectable Spiegel Garden to sellout houses and rave reviews. ART
MALE THINGS AT PIECE

Art Piece Gallery in Mullumbimby presents One for the Boys, an exhibition featuring art, textiles and sculpture inspired by fast cars, star guitars, best mates and more. There is no sugar or spice to be found here. The art will include dogs from renowned artist John Giese. Undeniably striking paintings, they represent canines as metaphors for human beings and our journey through life. Exhibition opens at 6pm on Friday and runs until Friday 19th September. All enquiries should be directed to Nadine Abensur, Gallery Director at 'nadineabensur@artpiecegallery.com.au' or by calling 6684 3446.

FUSION FESTIVAL

The best way to experience the amazing cultural diversity of the North Coast region is to come along to Southern Cross University's upcoming Fusion Festival. The festival is free and open to the general public and celebrates the University's diverse and multicultural community and the contribution it makes to intercultural understanding both on campus and in the local area. This year's festival theme is 'UNIty in diVERSITY: the coming together of cultures and communities'. On the Lismore campus Fusion will run from Monday through to Friday, September 12. On the Tweed Gold Coast campus, festivities will take place on Tuesday, September 9. The Lismore campus program includes a photographic competition and exhibition in the SCU library, theology discussions over coffee and cake, music, song and dance from around the world, forums, discussions, an international film night and an international cook-off competition.

MULLUM HOSPITAL VARIETY NIGHT

The re-emergence of the Mullumbiby Civic Centre has seen an explosion of entertainment in sleepy Mullumbimby. The Mullumbimby Hospital host their Variety Night, with the versatile MD as MC, that would be Dr Michael Pelmore, a man who really knows how to deliver a joke – even if he has to use forceps. The show is scheduled for Friday at 7pm and there are lots and lots of locals performing including The High School Stage Band, High School Rock Eisteddfod dancers, Public School Kindergarten Dancers, Flamenco from 'Arte Gitana', Dr Tim Devine and the Salsa Dancers, Kim Mitchell's 'Mullum Rouge', comedienne Ellen Briggs, Dr. Michael Pelmore, and lots more. This is the last big fundraising event before the state hospital Olympics in October. $10, adult; $25 family/$6 conc.

POETRY

TYPEWRITER GIRL STRIKES A KEY

'Writers at the Rails' return to their poetic soapbox at the Railway Hotel, Byron Bay for their Spring show on Sunday with two special feature poets from Brisbane and the Sunshine Coast: Pascalle Burton (aka Typewriter Girl) and Tessa Leon head a new wave of performance poets from north of the border, both have been recent features at the Queensland Poetry Festival and the Woodford Festival. The afternoon show starts at 2pm will also include open and invited readings and the ever-popular $100 Poetry Slam. For any info phone David on 6688 6485.

SCULPTURE

A SWELL IDEA

The sale of Thursday Plantation meant the demise of an important art event, the East Coast Sculpture show. Interestingly, according to Swell curator, Devanunda, who was also a curator on the aforementioned event, many previous entrants and winners of the Thursday Plantation Show will have their works on site at the Currumbin site. Interestingly, about a quarter of the sculptors are from the Northern Rivers. For those of you not familiar with Swell, from September 12 – 21, Queensland's Currumbin Beach transforms from a quiet seaside setting of sun, sand and surfers to a massive swell of sculpture as artists from around Australia and the world install 50 sculptures for this free to the public open-air exhibition.

GIVE PEACE A DANCE!

MK Ultra is a busy little bee and since his last interview with me he has secured an outdoor venue for Earthdance. 'This year's theme of Earthdance is honouring the earth which is exactly what we intend to do, nurture it, look after it, respect it and dance on it!' Earthdance is held Saturday 13 at Mt. Pikapene.

Q: In a nutshell, what was the journey to get the venue for Earthdance secured?

A: 'I'll need a big nutshell! In 2005 we organized an Earthdance event at Mt Pikapene state forest recreation area without a permit. We have always had a tradition of partying responsibly and looking after our sites and developing initiatives to deal with issues around waste management, safety and 'site nurturing', and our responsibility to the wider community. In that year we raised nearly $2500 for the UNCLE project which was a fantastic outcome for an organization doing great work with our youth. In 2006 I organized an all night trance party in the Byron Entertainment Centre. That was a landmark event and it gave me the skills to understand the perspective from the authorities' point of view. Last year, with the loss of precious venues due to poor event management by some party organizers and land sale we took a punt and used Pikapene. We got the 'visit' but we were allowed to stage the event despite not having a permit. Forests New South Wales were impressed with the quality of organization and the attention to detail, especially the site clean up. From that day on it took a lot of planning and negotiation with FNSW, Council and Police to achieve a legal approved status for this year's event.'

Q: What were the reasons that contributed to the 'demise' of outdoor partying around Byron Bay?

A: 'The two N's: Noise and NIMBYism! Basically, big sound systems, small communities some with even smaller minds offended by young people having fun while compromising their property prices in the process.'

Q: How do you think outdoor partying should be approached to be given another chance to dance?

A: 'Responsible event management! Keep it safe; keep it sensible because the writing is on the wall for fly by night cavalier operators. You need proper consultation with the authorities, and promoters thinking creatively outside their bubble developing strategies to win support not opposition. Learn your rights and responsibilities and make sustainable policy through best practice.'

Q: What argument would you put forward to neighbors/residents opposed to outdoor parties?

A: 'Lighten up! Instead of complaining put some money and energy into creating an alternative form of entertainment for the generation that follows you. Maybe finance a huge indoor venue?' Instead of complaining consider that maybe this bunch of noisy people ruining your evening possibly just raised more money for a local charity than you have ever given in your life.'

At Turning Point this Thursday MK Ultra will take on the role of a provocateur to launch people into discussion after the screening of The Road To Doof. DJ Grit co-owner/ manager of Bio-sine Records will open the dance floor for action around 9pm. Grit says, 'I am hoping Turning Point helps to educate myself and others on how we can continue to have outdoor parties whilst minimizing our impact on the environment with the blessing of the community, council and the police.' Other DJs on the lineup include Jackie Onassid, Kayhat, POB and Spliffun aka Tiffon who will be playing his own tracks until finish at 3am. Doors open at 8pm and entry is $15/$10 concession. Turning Point is about information and discussion, it's a platform for people interested to exchange ideas and experience on the subject as well as possibly start a network for and with people wanting to continue together finding new outdoor venues. Turning Point would like to invite people who can tolerate differing opinions and are willing to discuss and exchange with a creative attitude. Give it a Dance!

CHILDREN OF THE SILK ROAD

Bagging a movie about saving the lives of children is tantamount to putting the boot into a baby koala. Nonetheless... We start in Shanghai, 1937. The Rape of Nanjing is under way and George Hogg (Jonathan Rhys Meyers), a British journo, determines to get behind the Japanese line and write a first hand account of events. With an Australian (David Wenham), he makes it through and witnesses the Jap atrocities. Diver Dan is plugged before he can get his Strine into gear and Hogg is inches away from being decapitated by one of those fearsome Samurai swords. Instead he is rescued by Chen (the temptingly named Yun-Fat Chow), a Chinese Communist, and a couple of weary hours later you kinda wish that he wasn't. Chen delivers him to an orphanage occupied by a couple of dozen lads who are hanging out to be won over by his awesome humanity. It'd be no show without a bad kid with attitude and a tough old lady cook, and they are both there (the former conveniently speaking impeccable English), as is the the essential love interest – Lee, a dedicated nurse. Toil and trouble come thick and fast, but like Spencer Tracy in Boys Town, Hogg's commitment to his charges never wavers. But in casting Rhys Meyers in the role, the producers have sent a boy on a man's errand, especially if you compare his effort with Edward Norton's as a not dissimilar character in the far superior The Painted Veil. Aussie Radha Mitchell, as the blonde heroine, is no more convincing (though neither are helped by really crook dialogue). Square jawed and fatiguingly wholesome, she departs briefly, galloping into the mountains and looking like she is off to shoot a few episodes of McLeod's Daughters rather than dispense medicine to the suffering hordes. Breathtaking cinematography is far and away its strongest point as the narrative is one paced and feels as though it should have been winding down to its close well before the crew set out on their long hike to safety. They cop a lot of bad weather on this journey – you can guess in the first minute that if anything can go wrong it will – but, despite the changing topography, you don't get the impression that they have gone very far. Certainly not 700 miles. The testimony at the end by survivors of the epic march is as unnecessarily saccharine as that sort of device always is.

HELLBOY II: THE GOLDEN ARMY

My introduction to Mexican director Guillermo del Toro was through The Devil's Backbone (2001). The haunting tale of a little boy in an orphanage in Franco's Spain, it provided a foretaste of the numinous quality which was to make Pan's Labyrinth (2006) so unforgettable. In between those two wonderful films he made Hellboy (2004), and I am sorry now that I missed it. The Hellboy stories are based on a comic book character, meaning that this latest offering will be dismissed by many as mere juvenile fantasy. More's the pity, for this is the work of a visionary artist in his prime. The 'other' world that we are immersed in is that of the faun and the fabulous creatures we met in Pan, and the conflict is between them and humankind. They are led by the parricidal Prince Nuada, who must be prevented from gaining the key that will unleash the invincible golden army (read WMD). His mission is to rid the earth of the blight of people, who, with their venal, grasping ways, their 'parking lots and shopping malls', have defiled nature. The bloke's got a good argument, no risk. In fact, it is an argument over which del Toro appears to be unresolved within himself. Have Hellboy, Abe and other para-normals, raised on US Army bases, become one of 'us'? Or are they simply domesticated freaks? In one pulverising scene, Hellboy is the only obstacle to a giant rampant vine's obliteration of the entire city. At the climax of the rumble, Prince Nuada asks 'is this what you want? To kill the last of its species?' The moral issues are more double-edged than you normally find in mainstream cinema and there are no spoon fed answers. Nor is it without humour, Hellboy having some neat one liners and delivering them in the manner of Bruce Willis's likeable Die Hard detective. Only the duet with Abe, when they get plastered and sing Can't Smile Without You, strikes a try hard off-note. The concluding sacrifice, so Latino Catholic, is both unexpected and moving. With even bigger bucks, del Toro is now embarked upon The Hobbit but, personally, I'd love to see him do another small feature like Devil's Backbone. It is probably best not to recommend this film without reservation, for there are those whose tastes are too genre specific to allow for them to enter such a fantastical realm. But if yours aren't, check it out, it's brill.

MAMMA MIA!

This is an exuberant musical that uses a bunch of perennial Abba numbers to tell a sentimental tale of a girl searching for the identity of her father. Sophie, (Amanda Seyfried), lives on a Greek island with her mother, Donna, (Meryl Streep) and is excited about her imminent marriage. Her mother has always told her that she was born as a result of a brief encounter twenty years earlier and she discovers from Donna's diary that she knew three men that summer, so she sends a letter to each of them; Sam, (Pierce Brosnan), Harry, (Colin Firth) and Bill, (Stellan Skarsgard). They all arrive on the island. The timeless setting of this beautiful island in the Aegean Sea, a marvellous chorus, and a non-stop sense of fun make this very easy to take. This is a film that actually deserves the exclamation mark in its title, thanks to the exuberance that Streep and her co-stars bring to the job of reviving the rituals of the movie musical.

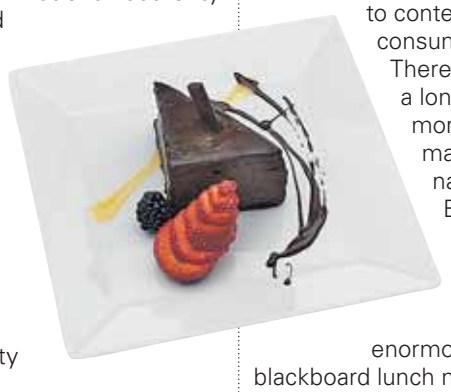
THE CAKES OF KINGSCLIFF

Victoria Cosford

There is at least one great cakemaker supplying her – or his – glorious sweetmeats to Kingscliff cafés – but I have yet to be told who it is. I have decided, however, that this pretty little seaside town boasts one of the best ranges of cakes to accompany mostly reliable coffee: it's a veritable paradise for lovers of coffee and cake.

Lately we have been driving regularly the short distance up the coast for waves (him) and cafes (me), and so I begin to feel somewhat of an authority. I have always liked Kingscliff but now it seems better than ever, its glamorous Gold Coast feel devoid, blessedly, of the glitz and the sleaze. And the tourists, excluding us – although the well-behaved pretty young things, the many family groups and the smartly coiffed seniors could for all I know be visitors as well. On a sunny Sunday morning the beachfront strip of wall-to-wall cafes and chic boutiques has a sparkling, benevolent allure, and even if you have already had your quota of coffee the pull is strong to join the crowds and have just one more. A relative newcomer to the strip is 'Three Little Figs', as much deli as good-looking cafe, with its glass cabinets packed invitingly with Serrano jamon, Heidi raclette, bright orange Mimmolette St Mere, Shaw River mozzarella and Parma prosciutto. There's a long wooden table down the centre of the shop set with the rustic simplicity of three trays of fresh ripe tomatoes; outside under umbrellas you can drink Allpress coffee or select from a sophisticated breakfast and lunch menu; they plan to start doing dinners soon on Friday and Saturday nights as well. The tartlets, petits fours and cupcakes are simply gorgeous.



But then so they are further on at Eaten, positioned cheek-by-jowl alongside the almost-veteran Sbiza, whose big blueberry muffins look identical, and perhaps are. 'Eaten' serves superb Merlo coffee; Sbiza offers seductive lunch options like mussels and Atlantic salmon ('crispy-skinned', naturally) and they both share a long communal table piled high with every type of newspaper. The mini cupcakes are tiny works of art, or perhaps jewels – far too pretty to contemplate the consumption thereof. There's Boardwalk Books, a long skinny space for more sustaining reading matter; the cutely named Choux Box Espresso Bar whose miniature cakes are called 'Bites', quite rightly, whose friands are enormous and whose blackboard lunch menu suggests things like pumpkin soup with a fetta and rosemary roll. Next door at 'Dots By The Sea' the menu is vast and its fabulous cakes are offered, alongside coffee, at great value Specials prices.

Not especially for gourmet food or fussy, particular eaters, the best lunchtime venues are, however, the Surf Club and the Bowlo. Both are bang in front of the ocean, large plain buildings serving up the great gift of unmatchable sea views. Meals are better at the former, servings at both are huge, and most dishes leave you change from a $20 note. And while coffee at the latter leaves a lot to be desired, their selection of cakes – there it is again – is lipsmackingly good.

And of course once the sun has set and all that cake digested and you are ready to turn back into a grown-up, it is only a very short drive southward to the surreal landscapes of places like Casuarina and Salt, where the likes of Fins, Bamboo and Sandbar + Grill will keep you enchanted.

SPECIAL MEALS

This is the time of year when restaurants offer special set-course dinners designed to showcase a particular chef or a winery. Apart from the opportunity, in the case of guest chefs, to experience a specific style of food otherwise only available in big cities or, in the case of the wineries, to be introduced to some exciting new wines, the beauty about these special nights is that no decision-making is required on the part of the diner at all – except possibly what to wear! Tonight, 2 September, Orient Express in Byron Bay is offering a 5-course meal of chef Tippy Heng's signature dishes to accompany wines from Chapel Hill (ring 6680 8808). On Monday 8 September the Beach Hotel's Pacific Dining Room has chef Martin Boetz of Longrain fame (Sydney and Melbourne) at the stoves serving up a 4-course menu with matching wines (ring 6680 7055). And on Thursday 11 September up at Fins at Salt Village Steve Snow is turning on a 6-course degustation menu with matching wines from the Woodstock winery (ring 6674 4833).

WINE AND FOOD FAIR

A great family fun day is planned for Sunday 14 September when the fifth Lismore Wine and Food Fair will take place in Molesworth Street in and around Left Bank Cafe. Featuring tastings of over 80 Australian and New Zealand wines as well as gourmet treats provided by local stores Menin's and Howards Delicatessen and Butchery (think chilli-stuffed fetta, mascarpone-stuffed figs, macadamia pesto...), there will also be wine and food Masterclasses, a swing jazz band and tastings of Howards' meats and cheeses. Tickets are only $15 and all proceeds go to Our Kids, the charity that raises money for Lismore Base Hospital Children's Ward and Special Care Nursery.

WITH WINTER OFFICIALLY OVER, THIS WEEK'S VIRGO VIBES ARE PUSHING THE SPRING THING: RE-ESTABLISHING PRIORITIES, CLUTTER CULLING, DOWNSIZING, STREAMLINING AND REDESIGNING THE LIFESTYLE…

ARIES: If you feel like you're caught in some kind of psychic car wash as this week sorts and organizes the universe into order, just go with it. September works best if you can keep proceedings pleasant for everyone and avoid those loaded words should, must and ought.

TAURUS: A month of earthy pleasures that gives your financial ambitions a leg up has to be a number one mood enhancer for Taurans. Hard work paying off, old contacts coming through for you and interesting new connections are all pleasing ingredients in this week's astral mix.

GEMINI: Noone's faster than you Twins at recognizing potential then maximizing it into profitable outcomes. This week's busy, Gemini friendly social scene supports your current business/career interests, offering you value for dollars and the opportunity to broker some killer deals.

CANCER: Being really clear with others will go a long way towards preventing misunderstandings, complications, angst and extra expense during this week's domestic changes and work exchanges. Then you'll be able to get the maximum enjoyment out of fun loving Thursday/Friday's loving fun vibes.

LEO: Get the new season on track with a clear assessment of what you're doing with whom and how you plan to accomplish it. If you've been feeling something's missing without knowing exactly what that is, this week gives a clue as to where you might find it.

VIRGO: This is your prime time to reset the paradigm to an easier, more enjoyable way of operating – because whatever's less stress for you means less stress for everyone you engage with. Powerful celestial forces are working for you right now – why fight them?

LIBRA: Moon/Mercury/Venus joining Mars in Libra deliver a juicy boost to your popularity this week – go Venusians! Though you'll need to divert a certain amount of socializing time into paying bills and attending to paperwork which needs to be sorted before the 24th when complications set in.

SCORPIO: Scorpios don't like changing their minds, but there are times, like this week, when you have everything to gain from a change of mind. Or heart – flexibility being your key to September success. Along with making some appropriate adjustments to your current health regime.

SAGITTARIUS: You'll have to knuckle down and stay focussed to accomplish what you need to in the coming three weeks before September 24 – especially finalizing official business. Feedback you receive could have you thinking differently about yourself and implementing changes to suit the new you.

CAPRICORN: No matter how diligently you prepare for every contingency, chance can still step in and reshuffle the deck. Which is the universe's clue that there's nothing to do but gracefully accommodate the changes, variations and surprises – delightful or otherwise – you're presented with.

AQUARIUS: This week's astral package looks set to give Aquarian projects, income and social scene a delightful lift. The catch being that first you need to have put in the hard yards reviewing investments and resources and working out a few economic upgrades.

PISCES: This week recommends spending some serious thought on long term relationships - creative planning to strengthen both business and personal partnerships. Discuss how to combine your assets and talents into a team that could achieve more together than you would separately.

For just 24 hours last week, Alexander Morozevich was on top of the world.

Morozevich defeated Ruslan Ponomariov in round six of the Tal Memorial tournament in Moscow, a victory which took the Russian to the top of the world rankings just ahead of India's Viswanthan Anand.

The next day Morozevich came crashing down to earth with a heavy defeat against Vassily Ivanchuk, a loss which cost Morozevich both the top ranking and the tournament lead.

So disappointed was Morozevich by this turn of events that he lost his next game as well and by the end of the tournament he had fallen back to fourth place on the world list, behind Anand, Ivanchuk and teenage sensation Magnus Carlsen.

To add to Morozevich's misery, the 31-year-old was overlooked for the Grand Slam Final which begins in Bilbao, Spain, this week, the organisers preferring the younger Teimour Radjabov for the final position in what is likely to be one of the tournaments of the year.

Six of the top eight players in the world will compete in Bilbao, with Morozevich absent and Vladimir Kramnik having declined his invitation in order to concentrate on his upcoming World Championship match against Anand.

Kramnik finished tied for second in Moscow in his last outing before October's title match but it was a lacklustre performance, one of many by Kramnik this year.

It has been argued that Kramnik is saving his best chess for the Anand match but Kramnik's modest form has only served to convince Anand that Kramnik no longer has the weapons to maintain his position as the premier match player of the era.

■ This week's game comes from the ongoing Ideal Euwe Grandmaster tournament in Sao Paulo, Brazil. Despite a stumble in the fifth round, Australian number one Zhao Zong Yuan is currently on course to win another top level tournament.

Sports Roundup with Eve Jeffery

results@echo.net.au

Nat Caldwell has his futsal in the door of indoor sport

Eve Jeffery

When I was a kid sport was played outdoors. Inside was for eating, watching 'Get Smart' and being sent to your room (not that I ever was – much).

Everything else inside was stupid. Anything worth doing was done outside. I even went outside in my sleep.

In the backyard of my childhood home in Melbourne we have a big apricot tree. It has almost reached the end of its life now, but back in the 70s the branches were strong and wide and in summer if I got home from school before the folks did, I would climb into the centre of the apricot tree, which was simple, as the main trunk was only about 20 inches high, then the branches stemmed out in a vase like shape from there. For a hyper kid the step up was nuffin' and it was too easy to side step along the branches and pick the fruit; by late afternoon during those summer months the apricots were warm from the sun and way juicy.

I must have loved them so much that I dreamt about them because I can remember waking up at the sparrow's fart when I was about 4, wondering why I was sitting in the 'vase' of the apricot tree.

I tip-toed back into the house and scrambled into my bed where I fell asleep again to wake up at the normal human farting hour.

Nat Caldwell who lives at Suffolk Park likes his sport indoors and will represent the state at the 2009 National Fustal Championships in Sydney in 2009. Photo Tree Faerie

I used to do anything to be outside. I couldn't even imagine why anyone would not want to be outside so the thought of playing sport inside was really odd.

I remember the first time I heard about indoor cricket. What the? What was the point of playing a sport indoors? Basketball was played indoors but that had been so ever since I could remember but all other sport was played out in the fresh air.

Apparently not. Futsal is played indoors and is one of the fastest growing sports worldwide even though is has been around for almost 80 years.

Futsal is an indoor version of soccer. Its name is derived from the Portuguese futebol de salão which can be translated as 'indoor football'.

Locally ther are several teams and one of their finest is Nat Caldwell.

Nat aged 13 years attends Byron High School. He was selected to represent Northern NSW Schools 13 years boys, as the only goal keeper at the National School Futsal Championships 2008 in Melbourne to be later this year.

Nat started playing soccer when he was 5 and when he moved to the Byron area at when he was 8, Nat joined the Byron soccer team as goalie.

In 2007 Nat was invited for a one weeks training program at The David Beckham Academy in London where he received a bronze medal for his ability.

During his training there he was assessed by scouts as a potenial top goalie and Nat's focus changed from field player to goalie drills.

Nat began playing Futsal and was asked to play with the Vikings 13's in the Northern NSW region as goal keeper at the 2008 Pacific Regional Titles held last January.

This was Nat's first big competition as goal keeper with teams from New Zealand and from across Australia attending.

In the game of futsal, the position of goal keeper receives a lot more action than a soccer goal keeper as futsal is a faster game and the oppositions aim besides scoring goals is to take out the goal keepel.

Nat has had his hands trodden on, has been kicked in all sorts of places but still manages to save a lions share of shots.

As a member of the Vikings development squad Nat has been improving his skills. He also receives private training from Jason Woollett a well know futsal player who has just returned from Brazil.

In July Nat was one of four boys from across the northern NSW and and Queensland areas accepted into the Dalponte Futsal Academy's Goal Keeping School of Excellence which he attends each week in Brisbane and he has recently been selected as goal keeper for the Northern NSW Futsal Team for the under 14 boys team for 2009 for the State Series as well as the 2009 National Futsal Team Championships, both competitions will be held in Sydney in January 2009, all of the makes Nat a busy, busy buy.

And I thought indoor sport was stupid. Doh!!!!

Community School student to represent North Coast in Sydney Athletics Carnival

Eight year old Byron Community Primary School student Kahlia Ashford came home a star following her knockout performance at the Regional NCSA Athletics Carnival in Coffs Harbour on August 19. Kahlia, who was competing for the first time against 8, 9 and 10 year olds, surprised the other team members, her teachers and herself by taking out first place in her 100m event heat and then by finishing second overall. A team of 14 Community School students competed at the regional event in running, long jump, shot put and high jump. Kahlia now qualifies to represent the North Coast Sports Association at the NSWCIS Primary Athletics Championships in Sydney early next month. She hopes to pull a few more tricks out of the bag while she is there.

London here we come

Well just when we thought we had done with Olympics for a while, we find that we can get our pre-viewing eyes ready for a dose of the next big thing in th UK.

The official website for the 2012 thingy – www.london2012.com – tells us that there is only 1457 days to go until the next lot begins. Are you counting? I know I am.

For your present viewing pleasure you can see all the fun and celebrations of the handover party (good grief), and if you have a look in the gallery and see exciting photos of random party goers entitled 'A Great Day: Smiles as people leave the Visa London 2012 Party', and 'A girl waves Visa London 2012 party and Handover Flags'.

You can also see a photo of the stadium being built, at present it looks like a slum.

I know I am getting jaded but one can't help wondering that if like the supermarkets who start stocking the shelves with chocolate rabbits on December 26, the Olympics is becoming more about the commercial build up than the actual event – after much energetic foreplay most people I have spoken to thought the Beijing' climactic opener, a big yawn. If it gets too boring we might be in danger of not bothering with it at all. Anyone for World of Warcraft?

Rugby League the loser as champs are scuttled

John Campbell

The Mullumbimby Giants came to Lismore's Crozier Field on Saturday to play football. Marist Brothers came to stop them. For one of the two sides it would be the end of their season and, when the dust had settled, it was the premiers who were on the wrong end of a 20-10 scoreline.

Brothers, with their bigger pack and well drilled defence, proved conclusively that an unimaginative game plan is the easiest to execute. Taking no risks, they adhered to a style of footy that is about as inspiring as two hours of root canal work. But it was not their dourness so much as their cynical approach that disappointed.

Mullum second-rower Andrew Moroney, an inflammable character, was targeted from the start, the first of many scuffles erupting after he copped one in the head at the fifth minute. The incident set the tone and inconsistent refereeing only let the niggle fester – one particular touchie was as useful as a glass eye at a keyhole when blatant indiscretions were committed on his watch.

At a time when rugby league is locked in battle with the other codes to win the hearts and minds of new supporters, this was precisely the sort of ugly encounter that will presage its death knell. Jowly pundits who talk as though the sport is only about toughness are living in a beer sodden time warp. Punters know tripe when it is dished up to them.

Jacob Miller and Dane Chisolm contest a bomb for the Giants' U18s in their nail-biter against the Rhinos. Photo John Campbell.

However, it is always better to highlight the praiseworthy and, rising above the dross, the Giants' young flyers Jy Hitchcox and Dane Chisolm illuminated a dismal evening with their exuberance and athleticism – Chisolm after having already put in for the Under 18s in their 23-22 cliffhanger over the Grafton Rhinos. His try at the death and that by polished centre Glen Godbee before halftime were ones for the archives, exhibiting the outrageous flair that the Papists, unable to match, could only hope to stifle.

Both were long distance efforts, skirting the touchlines – the first included a searing dash from winger Chad Grant, another youngster who can hold his head up – and both called for boldness of spirit, quick hands and even quicker minds.

The Giants trailed 4-6 at the break, but you sensed that if they were patient and able to stay focused on the task at hand they would prevail against an outfit with little more to offer than brute force. Sadly for the visitors, they allowed themselves to be rattled and, through poor ball security and ill judged passes, contributed to their own downfall.

So Mullum's A Grade can hang up the boots for another year, but the lower grades aren't done yet. Following their victory on Saturday, the Under 18s will now play South Tweed in next week's final, while the reserves, having beaten the Rhinos 28-20 on Sunday, are already in the grand final.

But wait …

The Byron Bay Red Devils have booked a spot for themselves in the grand final of the Retravision Northern League with a spirited 20-4 victory over minor premiers Grafton Ghosts. The big game, against either the Ghosts or Marist Brothers, will be played at Red Devil park on September 14.

The weekend at Woody Head is a highlight of the Boardriders year.

There is a meeting at 7.30 pm on Thursday at the Services Club.

The Straddie Assault team, the Red Devils home final and European report from our club president are on the Agenda.

FNC Premier Netball grand final

Congratulations to the Lismore Daley's who were winners of the inaugural Far North Coast Premier Netball League competition.

The opening few minutes saw a goal for goal contest between Lismore Daleys and Ballina RSL by the first quarter Lismore forged ahead to lead 14 – 8 and in the second quarter advanced this to a 10 goal lead. Ballina with a positional change at half time held their ground and by the final whistle narrowed the margin to six.

There were outstanding players in both teams but the award for most valued player of the grand final went to Nikki Krause goal shooter for Lismore who held her team together when the pressure was mounted by Ballina.

The large crowd was witness to an outstanding game of netball that left no doubt in anyone's mind that this competition will be bigger and better in 2009.

Mullumbimby Little Aths

The ancient, high-backed mayoral throne has emerged from its obscurity and been placed under the photos of our elder aldermen in the council chambers. Mayor Jan Barham says the upholstery, which is a rather shabby white, will be replaced with something more suitable – there could be a public debate over whether brown or green is the go. Now all that remains is to find the mayoral robes and chain which went missing some years ago.

Slip of the tongue of the week goes to Cr Jan Mangleson who suggested a particular motion was 'putting the horse before the cart'. 'That's where it's supposed to go' was Cr Tom Tabart's immediate response.

Mullumbimby based author Lollie Barr has lost her best friend. Large floppy-eared Jerry was walking with a friend in Kingscliff while the aforementioned writer was OS on assignment. Ms Barr is devastated. Brown-eyed Jerry is the writer's muse. He's a large black and tan dog with white chest and floppy ears – a cross staffie, kelpie ridgeback. Reward is offered. Once again letter writers on other subjects have been disadvantaged by our concentration on letters about the forthcoming election. Don't worry, it happens only once every four years and normal service will resume after September 13. Only 11 more sleeps to go.

Detail from The Fairy of Sharp Edges, acrylic on linen, by local artist James Guppy. Guppy's latest exhibition 'Fay' is on at the Brenda May Gallery in Sydney September 9 to October 4. 'These works are about women, aging and power,' says James. 'The fairy element is also a tribute to my mother who gave me fairies as a child. She maintained she had seen one, so as a loyal son I will not say that I do not believe in fairies. I certainly believed in my mother. She was a testament to a mature woman's power.'
