Last week's Brunswick Heads Woodchop saw 104 axemen and women compete in over 170 heats and finals at the historic 50th anniversary of the event. Though the current men's and women's Champion of Champions, the husband and wife team of Jason and Karyn Wynyard, were late withdrawals from the carnival, the chop still featured a glowing list of Australian and world champions and crowds had plenty of entertainment, with the top notch athletes in the ring.

Mitchell Hewitt, part of the famous Hewitt family from Queensland, made a welcome return to Bruns for the 50th. Mitchell, who has won five world titles and is the current world champion, was one of the highlights for both audience and competitors. Not surprisingly, it wasn't a walk in Banner Park for Hewitt who had plenty of stiff competition from his peers, including brother Lindsay who pipped him at the post a couple of times.

The final night of the chop saw hundreds of spectators line up for a good view of the action and none were disappointed as the best of the best brought out the big guns for the Saturday night crowd.

Tension mounted through several event finals, until the ring filled with axemen for the state of origin relay event. The Brunswick Heads ring crew, who are deemed one of the greatest in the country, took several minutes for their elaborate warmup before conducting the traditional pre-origin 'it's-not-a-Mexican-Wave-because-that-would-be-illegal' audience interactive event.

Once the axemen began, it was literally blow for blow in the first leg of the Dave Moss Memorial state of origin chop off, but at the end of the first standing block challenge, it was clear that Queensland were slowly pulling away. By the end of the third underhand leg, there was no chance of NSW catching up and the trophy will go north until contested again next year.

The big trophy winners for the carnival were Kyran Laurie who won the men's and Kate Christensen who won women's Champion of Champions and the overall point score winners were, for the men, Matthew Stratton and for the women Emma Maxwell.

Near-fatal accident prompts calls for surf safety

Victoria Cosford

The near-fatal accident of a young experienced surfer at Byron Bay's The Pass has re-ignited the issues of safety measures and the need for regulation within the surfing industry. Ten year old Pascal Dattler, pictured below, received critical head injuries when he was hit by a learner's stray surfboard.

According to his father, Thomas Dattler, "The operation went really well and it looks like there's no damage. The doctors are really amazed."

He told The Echo that his son has been 'surfing for five years now and he surfs at The Pass quite a lot. The same day [as the accident] he also got hit in the eye by another surfer.

There's been a lot of close calls recently with all these people in the water. If it had been another centimetre he'd have been dead.'

Greens MP and surfer Ian Cohen has been surfing The Pass for 40 years. According to Ian, 'surfing is like a lost frontier without regulation. Surfers can be difficult to organise but we all have a responsibility to ourselves and others in the water.'

Ian's solution is a surfing helmet which he has been using for years. 'When we have accidents similar to Pascal's we are reminded of the importance of protective helmets for surfers. Statistics show that 80% of injuries in surfing are head injuries.

What's happening on Australia Day

Celebrations for the whole family will be held across the Byron Shire this Australia Day, Tuesday January 26.

The day begins with the annual 'breakfasts in the park' at both Brunswick Heads and Byron Bay, followed by a family day at Bangalow, a celebration of the survival of Indigenous culture at Byron Bay, a fun afternoon at Suffolk Park and an Aussie tea at Ocean Shores.

The Shire's official ceremony will take place from 11.30am to 1pm at its new location at the Bangalow A&I Hall.

One of the highlights of the official ceremony will be the speech of the Byron Shire's Australia Day Ambassador for 2010, Ann Snell. Ms Snell is the founder and managing director of Sydney's Ann Snell Gallery, which specialises in Indigenous art. She says her motivation is giving clients access to Aboriginal philosophy and culture via beautiful paintings. 'Art is a great vehicle for healing and learning... I think non Indigenous Australians have begun to realise that we've all missed out on so much Indigenous wisdom, and now is the time to acknowledge our heritage and embrace our future together.'

Ms Snell will also be visiting many of the other celebrations being held around the Shire.

See the full program of events on Council's website www.byron.nsw.gov.au

The Combined Service Clubs of The Brunswick Valley will hold the 'Breakfast in the Park' in Banner Park, Brunswick Heads. Breakfast of sausage, bacon, onion and tomato sandwiched between two pieces of bread, plus a glass of orange juice and as much tea and coffee as one can drink will be available for the low cost of $3 per person from 7.30am till 9am.

There'll be the usual live entertainment and sing-along with Tracy Devine and Coral Grogan till 10am, making it a most enjoyable morning for the whole family. MC for the morning is Ray Linabury.

Blanch's Bus Company is providing a courtesy bus leaving the Mullumbimby Newsagents at 7.30am and returning around 10am. George Ryan will drive the bus and pick up breakfast participants along the way. Those wishing to bring their own chairs are welcome to do so. Enquiries to 6626 7000.

Come and help celebrate the ongoing dynamic of Aboriginal life and culture in Byron Bay and Bunjalung Country at Apex Park, opposite the Beach Hotel. Welcome to Country will be at 11am, with music, kids activities, face painting and a free barbecue lunch. Proudly sponsored by the Arakwal people of Byron Bay, Sisters for Reconciliation (Northern Rivers), the Cavanbah Reconciliation Group and Byron Shire Council.

Helmets do not get in the way and are a distinct advantage with sunnies attached and a shell to protect the head.' He believes that the surfing hire industry 'should have comprehensive surfing information and helmets to hire with the boards.'

Thomas Dattler agrees about the need for education within the surf schools and surf hire organisations. 'If they all had information booklets as well as signs, it would make a difference. People do a surf lesson and off they go without being aware of their responsibilities.'

Rubber tips

In addition to education and signage, Thomas is a firm supporter of rubber tips on the nose-guards of learners' surfboards. He agrees that they may slightly affect performance but they are one solution. 'Pascal and his friends have these on their boards', he said, 'and beginners especially should have them.'

Veteran surfer and former US champion Rusty Miller has been surfing around Byron Bay since the seventies. He told The Echo that as early as the eighties he attempted to introduce 'softboards' into the surfing community - boards made out of polyethylene, the same material used in boogie boards. 'They didn't take off,' he said. 'People wanted hard surfboards. Surfing is a lot about fashion, and currently the fashion is the 6-foot Thruster.'

Dolphin Nose

What is also fashionable is the pointed nose, and ever since Rusty's involvement with the Surfrider Foundation he has been an advocate of the Dolphin Nose as an agreed standard to significantly minimise surfboard-related injuries.

(A Dolphin Nose is a 75 mm circle to put on the end of the surfboard, hence a rounded as opposed to a pointed tip. It is the belief of Rusty and many others that a pointed tip does not contribute to the function of the surfboard anyway.)

'It's not a solution,' said Rusty, 'but it is a contribution toward safer surfing - as is discouraging beginner surfers through education from attempting advanced levels of surfing unaccompanied.'

In fact education remains one of Rusty's most advisable strategies. 'All coaches to my knowledge teach beginner surfers procedures relative to personal safety. I specifically focus on personal safety, by starting with my basic tenets such as always maintaining alertness; never not looking at the next wave coming your way; not counting on people wearing leg-ropes.'

He described the situation as 'like traffic in the city - you have to anticipate and exercise self-defence.' Another solution he mentioned was smoothing the edges of surfboard fins.

And finally, 'There should be better facilities on the beaches - we need more lifeguard towers and more equipment to support safety there. And the surfing zones need to be defined as well.'

Thomas Dattler told The Echo that 'if something can come out of this horrible accident, if we can stop this happening, it will be a good thing. It's like a weapon, beginners with boards...'

Rusty himself admitted that 'I'm reconsidering wearing my surf helmet!'

Bob Brown to talk in Byron Bay

Leader of the Australian Greens Senator Bob Brown will be talking at Byron High School at 6.30pm on Saturday January 23. The main attraction of the evening will be Brown participating in a 'lounge chair' interview with Mayor Jan Barham asking the questions.

Senator Brown is offering his time to help Greens MLC Ian Cohen with his legal costs following a protracted defamation case.

'The event will start at 6.30 with plenty of food and drinks available with traditional welcome to country, short introductions and a slideshow of Bob's own photography in various Tasmanian wilderness areas,' Mr Cohen said. 'Following the slide show The Hot-tentot Party will do a musical bracket.

'An art auction of donated works will be hammered out and will include a watercolour by Rose McKinley, who recently won the main prize at the reinvigorated Byron Arts Classic. Local ecologist David Milledge has offered a limited edition set of prints depicting Tasmanian endangered flora and fauna.

'Despite some recent rumblings an exceptional portrait of Fast Buck$ in his prime in striking Warhol style has also been donated for the auction and to show that, in a fashion, Buck$ still supports The Greens.

'It was agreed that the Mayor Jan Barham should have the honour of auctioning his portrait.'

Council monitors water quality at beaches, creeks

Byron Shire Council has announced that it will join the Department of Environment, Climate Change and Water's (DECCW) Beachwatch Partnership Program and will be monitoring and reporting on the water quality at local swimming sites this summer.

Council's Environmental Health Officer David Bell said ten local swimming sites stretching from Suffolk Park to Ocean Shores/New Brighton will be monitored in accordance with DECCW Beachwatch protocols. 'Council is monitoring for bacteria known as enterococci which indicate if water is polluted with stormwater or sewage and may be unsafe for swimming,' he said.

'The sites monitored will be The Strand, South Beach Brunswick Heads, Torakina Beach, Simpsons Creek, Belongil Beach, Tallow Beach Suffolk Park, Tallow Beach Byron Bay, Watego's Beach, Clarkes Beach and Main Beach Byron Bay.

Environmental health officer David Bell takes a water sample.

DECCW Beachwatch Program Manager Cris Hickey welcomed Council to the Beachwatch Partnership Program and congratulated the Council for their commitment to keep tabs on the quality of recreational swimming water.

'The north coast is justly renowned for its spectacular beaches, bays and estuaries,' she said. 'These swimming spots are usually as clean as they are beautiful. However, people need to be confident about the quality of the water they're swimming in. 'While most coastal swimming sites enjoy excellent water quality, stormwater pollution can be a problem after rain. As a general rule, we encourage people to avoid swimming for a day after rainfall at coastal beaches, and for up to three days in estuarine areas.

'There are many things the community can do to complement the work being conducted by Council. By placing litter in the bin, composting garden waste and not using the hose as a broom, we can all help ensure pollution stays out of the stormwater and our waterways remain clean.'

Check out the results for your local swimming site at www.environment.nsw.gov.au/beach/starratingsbyron.htm.

Jan takes on national role for VIEW

Jan Blanch has been elected as the new National Councillor for VIEW Clubs Australia, the first National Councillor from the Byron Shire. VIEW (Voice, Interest and Education of Women) is a club for women over the age of 18 from a broad range of backgrounds. It is a valued part of The Smith Family that extends through 400 communities across Australia with over 21,000 members.

Jan Blanch has been a member of VIEW for most of its history. Having lived in Balgollah, Sydney, where the first VIEW Club was formed in 1960, she witnessed firsthand the excitement among the women of the community.

'We were all young women who stayed home with our children. George Forbes, the then General Secretary of the Smith Family, started VIEW with a vision of bringing women out of the house and into society with more confidence. He hoped women would find their voice in politics, hence the "V" for Voice in the VIEW Club name.'

The VIEW Club was formed at a time when women were not permitted to join clubs. It was a time when women were restricted by legislation and regulation about where they could go and what they could do. Forbes realised social isolation of women exacerbated many family issues and would be eased when women were able to meet regularly with other women.

As well as being a regular meeting place for women where they can develop friendships and discover and develop talents and skills, VIEW Clubs raise more than $1 million each year to support disadvantaged children and their families through The Smith Family's programs. Additionally VIEW members in 400 clubs across Australia together contribute over 50,000 hours in volunteer work annually.

This year marks VIEW

Clubs' 50th anniversary and sees Jan Blanch appropriately as National Councillor. Jan has been a longstanding member, the President of Sydney VIEW Club in the 1970s, the President of the Brunswick Valley VIEW Club as well as a Zone Councillor most recently.

Jan has been a local in the Shire for twenty years, contributing to the Drill Hall in its early days as manager as well as acting in and directing many of the shows.

She is a mother of three daughters, a grandmother to five grandchildren and a carer of homeless dogs.

She loves her work at VIEW and although at first a little apprehensive about what the job may entail, she was 'delighted' to be elected as National Councillor.

'It's a great time to be National Councillor in our 50th year. There will be celebrations at all of the clubs and of course our annual Gala in July. I hope to see a resurgence of young members joining the VIEW Clubs this year and into the future.'

To find out more about VIEW and what it does visit www.thesmithfamily.com.au and follow the links.

Get pumped for National Ride2School Day

National Ride2School Day is Australia's largest celebration of walking and riding to school. With over 1000 schools taking part across Australia in 2009 it has become Australia's largest active event for students.

Preparations are underway for this year's event which is being held on Wednesday March 17. Last year, Ride2School day saw over 108,000 students and teachers across Australia leave the car at home and either ride or walk the whole or part of the journey to school. Teachers, parents and family are encouraged to get involved to inspire those students who don't normally walk or ride to school to use active transport more often. National Ride2School day is supported by the state's bicycle organisations.

The event is part of a behaviour change program that aims to increase the number of students walking and riding to school. The program encourages healthy lifestyles by increasing students' physical activity levels as well as creating awareness around sustainable forms of transport

Schools who wish to participate can order a free promotional pack.

Mullum writer wins Marsden prize

Winners of The John Marsden Prize for Young Australian Writers 2009 were announced in December and first place in the under 18 short story category was awarded to ex Mullumbimby High School student Danielle Nicholls, pictured right. Danny has been an avid and polished writer for some time and is a longstanding member of the Northern Rivers Writers' Centre. She gratefully acknowledges the role played by 'my wonderful English teacher Elizabeth Maddox, who helped me immeasurably in so many ways.'

In its fifth year, the John Marsden Prize offers a total prize pool of $4,500 across four categories and the esteemed author for whom the Prize is named performs the task of judging. Australian readers will be familiar with Marsden's gritty seven part series for young and adult readers, Tomorrow When the War Began, and his numerous standalone works of fiction and non-fiction.

Here Are Your Glory Days is the title of Danny's winning entry. 'It's born from the end-of-year stress of finishing Year 12; about not knowing what's going to happen and being intensely aware and intensely afraid of all the things that can go wrong: all the horror stories, as it were,' says Danny. 'The first part, the future's bright, is very, very much about being trapped and broken somewhere that you don't want to be, knowing that you could have/ should have done better, tried harder; knowing that there's more that you could have done, but didn't.'

'It's a bit about the realisation of my nightmares, and, to be honest, a bit depressing. That's one of the reasons why it simply doesn't work without the second part, warning: will reset at twenty-two, because it's the antithesis of being trapped; realising that no matter where you end up, it's possible to get out, to change and fix and re-shape your life to be what you want. It's very much about my fear of the future, but also about not wanting to wait to see what it holds.'

According to John Marsden, the work is 'sustained from start to finish without a flat note or a false one... funny, funky and stylish.'

In 2010, Danny has set her heart on beginning a Bachelor of Arts, with a focus on writing or film and television studies and her long term vision is for a combined career in the publishing industry and as a writer, 'putting out as many words as I take in.'

Danny's story is published in the December edition of Voiceworks magazine and can be read on the Express Media site at www.expressmedia.org.au.

Dead fish found in Water-Lily Park

About 200 fish were found floating dead in Water-Lily Park, Ocean Shores, last week.

Byron Shire Council's executive manager of Asset Management Services Phil Holloway said from initial investigations it appears the fish have died as a result of the lake currently having a low water level and recent hot weather. 'The combination of these two factors has resulted in a low oxygen level in the water and as a consequence a number of fish have died,' Mr Holloway said.

He said at this stage there was no concern over algae in the water and the floating plant matter was the naturally occurring red azolla fern. Monitoring of the lake's water hens, ducks and egrets yesterday afternoon showed they were all active.

Mr Holloway said further investigations would be carried out and the Fisheries Department within the Department of Primary Industries had been contacted for their advice.

Protest targets Japan consulate

Sea Shepherd and anti whaling groups last week converged on the Japanese consulate in Brisbane, calling for an immediate end to the annual Japanese whale kill in the Antarctic. Groups including Sea Shepherd Surfers for Cetaceans, Byron Whale Action Group, Whales Alive and the Taaji Dolphin action group handed the Japanese consulate individual letters expressing their concerns and demands.

Founder of Byron Whale Action Group, Dean Jefferys, said, 'This protest is to support the Sea Shepherd's activities opposing the whalers and to condemn Japanese whalers' dangerous activities ramming and sinking the Sea Shepherd boat, Ady Gil. It is also to demand Japan stop killing whales immediately in the Southern Ocean Whale Sanctuary and to inform them of an international campaign to boycott Japanese products if Japan continues to kill whales.

'Maybe the CEOs of the big Japanese companies will start to lobby the Japanese prime minister on our behalf when they start losing millions of dollars in sales and Japan loses millions of dollars in tax revenue. We now have a Federal Court ruling declaring Japanese whaling in Australian Antarctic waters is illegal yet the Australian government doesn't want to enforce the injunction.

'Environment Minister Peter Garrett should instruct Japan not to kill whales in Australian Antarctic waters and the Southern Ocean Whale Sanctuary or it will carry out its promise and take Japan to the international court. While the Sea Shepherds are stopping the Japanese fleet killing whales and costing Japan its profits in the Antarctic, consumers around the world can contribute to sinking the whaling fleet economically by boycotting Japanese products and services.'

A movie of the protest can be found on YouTube by searching 'Brisbane anti whaling demo 4 Sea Shepherd Ady Gil'.

Family sailing day at Brunswick

Byron Shire Council in conjunction with the youth services group SAILS (Sailing Adventures in Life Skills Inc.) is holding an affordable sailing day at Brunswick Heads on Saturday January 23. Council's Youth Activity Officer Belle Arnold said the sailing day was back by popular demand and is the third time Council has subsidised and held the affordable family fun day activity.

'The family activity is part of Council's school holiday program, designed for all ages to experience the excitement and fun of sailing, kayaking or just hanging out on the water,' Ms Arnold said.

All equipment is supplied and participants will learn how to sail a Hobi Cat, kayak and canoe on the Brunswick River.

Launch off will be at Massey Green Caravan Park Reserve, Brunswick Heads, from 9.30am to 1.30pm.

The event is restricted to 50 participants and costs $10 per person over the age of 5. Remember to wear or bring sunscreen, swimming gear and hats. Bookings are essential and can be made with Council on 6626 7178.

Cafés cooperate to recycle

Lynne West and Michael Brechbuehler (Byron Local) and Matt Miall (Soulbowl) share costs to provide recycling facilities for their customers.

The North East Waste Forum (NEWF), on behalf of Byron Shire Council, has recently surveyed the waste practices and attitudes of hospitality businesses in Byron Bay's CBD in order to assist and improve waste reduction outcomes where possible.

Respondents undertook a wide array of sustainable practices, with 32% sourcing and purchasing local/organic produce where possible. Other popular practices include using recycled paper or biodegradable cups and containers, using energy efficient lighting and cleaning with environmentally friendly products.

The results showed that while 83% of businesses recycle cardboard, 44% participate in further recycling such as glass and plastics. A pleasing (given how busy Byron hospitality businesses are!) 15% still manage to recycle their organics by taking them home for composting, worm farms or chickens.

Unfortunately, 32% of cafes and restaurants surveyed stated landlords and body corporates are the biggest setback for businesses wanting to improve on their recycling efforts. Tenants need to negotiate with the owners of the premises in order to change or improve on their current bin systems, however some businesses are discovering how to speed up the process.

Byron Local and Soulbowl, opposite the surf club on Bay Street, are two Byron businesses passionate about providing positive choices for their clientele and being sustainable wherever possible. After months of phone calls to management seeking the installation of recycling bins, Lynne West from Byron Local explains, 'It was a process longer than it should have been, but well worthwhile. With little support from management and armed with information that the NEWF provided, we decided to simply write them a cheque ourselves in order to have recycling bins, and from then on it was a quick process.

'It's such a minimal cost that allows our business to reduce our ecological footprint and provide sustainable options for our customers. Most people recycle at home but the means to do so when on holiday or out and about are limited. It was really important to us to make recycling available not only behind the counter but to our customers too. I would definitely recommend the power a small cheque can have to any businesses wanting to do something similar.'

Matt Miall from Soulbowl said, 'We've only been open for six weeks, and share the same management as Byron Local. When we saw that Byron Local was providing recycling, we were keen to be involved from the start. We consider it our responsibility to be sustainable wherever we can and sharing the costs with another business is attractive. I think having recycling bins available to our customers also provides a good frame of reference for people given that we're located so close to the beach where some people are still littering.'

'Offering recycling for clientele is a great way to show people your commitment to the environment,' Samala Hogg from the NEWF says. 'An important thing to remember is the need for clear labelling of the bins. There are a range of stickers available and I'm happy to help businesses find the right system for them.'

The North East Waste Forum encourages businesses wishing to reduce their ecological footprint to check out the business waste reduction DIY toolkit at www.northeastwasteforum.org.au. Find out more from Samala Hogg on 0408 701 907 or samala@northeastwasteforum.org.au.

Record rainforest project completed, more help needed

Australia's largest rehabilitation project that protects endangered lowland rainforest between the Clarence and Tweed Rivers has just been successfully completed by the Big Scrub Landcare Group and 11 partner organisations.

Dr Tony Parkes, President of Big Scrub Landcare, paid tribute to the differing groups and individuals who contributed so much to this important project. "This has been a great effort by all involved but we desperately need ongoing funding from the Australian government to continue this work, which is a priority to save the priceless biodiversity of the rainforests in our region: there is still so much work to be done."

This one-year community-led project was funded by a

$368,000 grant from the Australian government's Caring for our Country program. This funding was matched by contributions from the project partners, other landholders and volunteers. Rehabilitation work was undertaken at 83 remnants of endangered lowland rainforest, including eight nature reserves, 23 local government sites and more than 50 remnants on private land.

Weeds are the major immediate threat to the survival of these priceless remnants of the magnificent lowland rainforests that once covered significant areas of our region. Professional rainforest regenerators carried out more than 1,800 days of weed control work, exceeding the project target by 31%.

The project also involved a number of well-attended community education events including the Big Scrub Day, three field days and five workshops.

A key to the success of the project was the broad partnership of stakeholders from across the region that were involved. Big Scrub Landcare and EnviTE, the project manager, led the partnership. Other partners included the Department of the Environment, Climate Change and Water; Lismore, Ballina, Byron and Tweed Councils; Rous Water; the regional umbrella landcare groups – Richmond Landcare Inc, Tweed Landcare Inc and Brunswick Valley Landcare Inc, plus Tuckombil Landcare and 50 other landholders.

Lifeline course

Lifeline Northern Rivers provides crisis telephone counselling to more than 600 troubled callers each month. The continuation of this service is utterly dependent on the commitment and dedication of the skilled telephone counselling volunteers who graduate from Lifeline Northern Rivers' twice-yearly training courses.

To maintain its volunteer numbers, and ensure that our callers receive the help and support that they need, Lifeline Northern Rivers is now seeking applications for its first 2010 training course.

This is the first time that Lifeline Northern Rivers' trainers will be delivering Lifeline's new national training program which is even more closely aligned to Lifeline's crisis counselling practice model.

E-training

The 2010 training program also includes a newly developed e-training component that will allow for more flexible learning and allow the classroom sessions to focus more intently on the development of the trainee's counselling micro-skills. Over the next few months more than 1,000 people nationally will be beginning a Lifeline telephone counselling training course and taking the opportunity to equip themselves to make a crucial contribution to their community.

The course will run from February 25 to April 22 with a three week Easter holiday break. Most of the sessions will be held on Tuesday and Thursday evenings between 6pm and 9pm.

The course also includes a two day Applied Suicide Skills Intervention Training course and a one day Domestic Violence and Child Protection course.

There is a reduced course fee of $400 for people who commit to going on to be Lifeline Telephone Counsellors for a minimum period of 12 months.

The wild surf

Surfing has always had its dangerous elements, from idiots dropping in on waves to the adventurous wiping out above crunching coral reefs, but now with more people in the water the dangers are multiplied. This was made evident last week with the shocking head injuries to ten year old Pascal Dattler and earlier when local artist Deb Tinker was hit by a stand-up board.

Fortunately the 'elders' of the surf have come out in support of safety measures and, in a touching gesture, Pascal's own mates have agreed to wear helmets when he returns to the water. The obvious measure of putting a nose guard on pointy boards is being canvassed. Surfing innovator George Greenough believes it will improve the board's performance – see letter page 11 – but the best thing is that it could save a life.

The main problem as always is education and etiquette. Some inexperienced surfers are under the delusion they can mix it in a crowded break, and there are those who think that aggression is a valid lifestyle. The will to win is certainly useful in pro surfing but it is hardly necessary at a busy Byron beach.

In some ways it is sad to see the notion of 'freedom' offered by surfing compromised by its popularity – it's not the sixties, after all. The latest news is that Manly council has erected (surfboard-shaped) signs promoting its own surf rules. Obviously we can't have young children being killed in the surf. The truly adventurous can still get their kicks at an isolated stretch of beach when most of the neighbourhood is sleeping.

Artistic merit

If you thought discussing surfing etiquette was dangerous, try entering a debate on artistic merit. Following the kerfuffle over photographer Bill Henson's images of naked children, the NSW Child Pornography Working Party (CPWP) is recommending that the defence of artistic merit be removed from the NSW Crimes Act.

While the Arts Law Centre of Australia's executive director Robyn Ayres says proposed changes to pornography law are still unclear, she sees some advantage in the fact that 'prosecuting authorities will need to turn their minds immediately to the question of whether the work was for a genuine artistic purpose before charging anyone with a child pornography offence. With proper training, hopefully this will overcome heavy-handed behaviour by the police in seizing artworks which end up being given a G or PG rating, as happened with Bill Henson's work.' The Police Association might see the advantage in having their members attend art appreciation classes, which would, naturally, include an understanding of irony.

Standards of decency and morality are always up for debate in a democratic society and that is how those standards are defined, particularly in relation to what someone wants to regard as art. However, while creativity for its own sake can be an exhilarating experience, the notion that, say, photography or sculpture – or writing – possess an exalted and protected status above, say, plumbing or building is a nonsense.

The first consideration in a decent society is the protection and education of children. We live amid an epidemic of child abuse and exploring the art of overcoming that would be a good exercise in creativity.

Tony punches smart in green corner

Tony Abbott's planned private members bill to override Queensland's Wild Rivers legislation may be, as his opponents claim, a political stunt.

But they can hardly deny that it's a bloody good one. Not only does it wedge the Labor Party from two different directions, but like all the best stunts, it combines skill and daring with a core of plausibility.

Premier Anna Bligh's declaration that the Archer, Lockhart and Stewart river systems of Cape York should join six others already gazetted as wild rivers was itself seen as something of a stunt by many political cynics. According to this view, it was a straightforward deal with the Greens, trading the rivers for Green preferences at the last election.

Certainly it outraged the Aboriginal residents, in particular their charismatic leader Noel Pearson and his brother Gerhard, who had been putting together plans for the development of the area to provide employment and eventual self-sufficiency. Pearson denounced the decision as 'foreclosing on a future for our people .. the state cannot rip the future out from under indigenous children's feet.'

Bligh has denied that this would be the effect of the law; development of a sensitive and sustainable kind will still be welcome, she insists. But there is no doubt that the gazettal has placed severe limits on the Pearsons' options, nor that it has interposed another layer of bureaucracy between them and land which was found by the High Court's 1996 Wik decision to be in traditional indigenous ownership.

There is a certain irony in the fact that the Wik decision was largely gutted by Abbott's mentor John Howard, and that Abbott is now proposing to effectively reinstate it. But unlike Howard, Abbott has credibility on indigenous issues. Indeed it could be argued that no politician in the current federal parliament is better qualified to argue the Aboriginal case for Cape York.

Not only is Abbott a personal friend of the Pearsons, but he is a regular visitor to the peninsula and has done volunteer work at the troubled community of Aurukun at the mouth of the Archer River and inland at Coen. His private member's bill may have a tinge of political opportunism about it, but at least he knows what he is talking about.

There is an irony in the fact the Wik decision was largely gutted by Abbott's mentor John Howard, and Abbott is now proposing to effectively reinstate it.

by Mungo MacCallum

Furthermore, although such a bill would almost certainly trigger a constitutional challenge, it is one the Commonwealth would probably win. The Opposition's legal affairs spokesman, the lawyer George Brandis, made a convincing case for it last week.

He notes the similarities to the 1983 case involving Tasmania's Franklin River Dam, which the Commonwealth won, and suggests that much the same arguments would apply, but in the Queensland case they would be even more clear cut.

The Commonwealth could invoke not only its constitutional power to make laws for people of the Aboriginal race, Brandis vigorously opposed the government's move. Now it looks rather handy.

Abbott's bill will, of course, not be passed; Kevin Rudd is not about to overrule the embattled Labor premier of his home state, especially if it involves setting what could be a far-reaching and potentially embarrassing precedent. But opposing the bill will bring its own problems.

One of Rudd's first commitments as Prime Minister was to 'close the gap' between indigenous and non-indigenous Australians. By refusing Abbott's challenge to do something concrete and practical which has the support of some of Australia's most active and respected Aboriginal leaders he risks being seen as putting political considerations ahead of good policy, and worse, of joining Bligh in sacrificing legitimate Aboriginal interests for more electorally valuable Green support.

Not that Rudd owes the Greens anything after their contemptuous dismissal of his Emissions Trading Scheme, but their preferences could be useful at this year's election, and in any case he will almost certainly have to deal with them after it. Very much a Catch 22, made worse by the fact that the issue will also divide two groups which both traditionally support Labor. A cunning stunt indeed.

In keeping with his carefully cultivated image as Action Man, Abbott has also thrown himself vigorously, if somewhat confusingly, into the whaling controversy; last week he seemed to be suggesting sending a gun boat (or at least the hapless Oceanic Viking) back to the Antarctic to interpose its body between the forces of Japan and Sea Shepherd. And he wants to set up some kind of workforce to look after the environment in general. He is, as promised, going in with all guns blazing.

But hang on a moment: just what are they blazing at? Surely Abbott was elected leader as a sop to concerns that the party under Turnbull was moving too far to the left, getting too close to Labor. Abbott was to take them back to their conservative grass roots. But last week all he seemed to worry about were Aborigines and whales, the darlings of the elitist bleeding-heart chardonnay-sipping lovey-doveys. Come on man, get back to basics. Smash the unions! Tax cuts for the rich! What do we want? More profit! When do we want it? All the time!

That's the trouble with political stunts. No matter how clever they are, in the end they're just distractions. Good fun, sure, but not like the real thing.

Not making a point at The Pass

■ Yet another terrible surfing accident out at The Pass. What can we do, if anything, about it?

I have now heard lots of ideas about legislating, educating, segregating and pontificating. All well meaning and valid ideas. But the sad reality is The Pass is intensely crowded even without backpackers, grommets or kooks.

We may not be able to prevent accidents but we can try to protect our skulls. I have been wearing my Gath helmet for 20 years, ever since we lived in Margaret River. Gath helmets were invented in Margaret River and it was the norm to wear them over there. They afforded some protection from the heavy reef breaks.

Having surfed here for the last 15 years, I have always thought they are even more important out here at 2-3 feet Pass than they were at 8-10 feet Margarets.

You only get one brain.

We need some surfer heroes to wear helmets to make it cool, then others might too.

■ If you look at the basic design of the pointed nose surfboard, the pointed nose really is a fashion statement. Also, it can be used as an offensive weapon to intimidate other surfers. It doesn't make the board surf any better, in fact it adds extra length, increases swing weight and wind resistance.

Injuries caused by pointed noses can be very dangerous. You have the mass of the surfboard focused into one tiny area. The end of the nose is reinforced by a wooden stringer as well as fibreglass. Being hit by one of these boards can result in a deep penetrating type of injury, loss of an eye and even skull penetrations.

How many parents with small kids buy their kids this style of board, looking at fashion, not thinking about safety issues? How easy is it for some kid to fall off the back of the board shooting their pointed nose into their brother's or sister's eye.

There is an easy fix to this problem.

Find a jar lid or tin about 75mm in diameter. Place it on the nose of the surfboard, on the deck.

Draw a line around the front and cut off what sticks out the front. Round it off and put a layer of fibreglass over it.

In collisions this will dissipate the energy of the impact over a much larger area, greatly reducing the chance of severe or critical injury. The board will surf better because you have reduced the swing weight and wind resistance. It is shorter, turns quicker, and pulls off moves you couldn't do before. It gives you more confidence to go for new moves because it is safer and less likely to cause injuries to you and other people.

Stand-up paddle boards are a new hazard in the surf. They are a large difficult to control craft, they fall into the same group of vessels as surf skis and kayaks and they should keep clear of other surfers and swimmers.

Fabulous fireworks

Congratulations to the committee and all the hardworking organisers of the 50th anniversary of the Fish 'n' Chip Festival fireworks display. It was absolutely sensational.

From my view at the north wall I felt as if I was in the middle of them and they were coming right at me. They went for such a long time, full of beautiful colours soaring high in the sky and going off with a big bang, they rivalled Sydney's fireworks and they were in little old Brunswick Heads.

How proud the committee must have felt when the crowd (which was huge) went wild at the end, clapping and cheering. I know I was feeling very proud to be a member of this incredible community, knowing that those fireworks were paid for by the community and not from handouts from the state or local government.

Once again, well done to the committee, you did a fantastic job, and I'm sure that you would never say no to more volunteers.

Sad compulsion

It is sad that people who know how to fly ultralights or single engine planes have a compulsion to inspect clotheslines and suburban backyards instead of wanting to fly far away from them and discover the world. I don't know if other parts of the shire have been so well surveyed than Suffolk Park by narrowminded aviators.

According to the CASA website: 'Ultralights must comply with the flight conditions specified in the relevant CAO (95.10, 95.32 or 95.55).

For example section 5 of both CAO 95.10 and CAO 95.55 forbids flight below 500 feet agl and flight over cities and towns at a height from which it cannot glide clear of all dwellings, buildings and persons within the built-up area.' At 6pm last Saturday (09/01), two ultralights flew at the edge of Tallow Beach, above swimmers, at an altitude of 60 feet at the most (less than 20 metres). Considering the rules mentioned above I would think that no flying machines should be allowed over Suffolk Park or any other densely populated area.

Woolies in Maleny

I agree totally with Grant Cameron's anti-Woolworths sentiments (Letters, January 12). It is a ruthless, greedy company driven by profit and completely foreign to small, self-sustaining communities such as Mullumbimby.

However, Grant is mistaken to say Woolworths is an American company. It is Australian and a great number of shareholders are Australian 'mums 'n' dads', either as individual shareholders or through super funds. When Woolworths forced itself on my town of Maleny, many residents sold their shares as quickly as possible and looked for greener, more ethical investments that would not rip the heart out of their town or rely heavily on liquor and pokies.

As for Woolworths being prepared to wait for a generation of protesters to die, sorry, Grant, in Maleny they will have to wait a long, long time because most of the town's youngsters feel the same way about the unwelcome intruder from the Big Smoke. Most newcomers to the town also will not shop there, having heard about the destruction of a platypus habitat and Woolworths' dirty deeds and unsustainable practices. Shopping at Woolworths' big, ugly box carries a stigma in Maleny and will for many years to come. The town's eight-year campaign continues and there are as many 'We Still Won't Shop There' car stickers around town as there were when the big box opened.

Four unprofitable Woolworths supermarkets were closed in the past financial year. We have been told by a Woolworths insider that the only reason the Maleny supermarket remains open is because closing it would send a signal to other communities, such as Mullumbimby, Newport and Cabarita, that the greedy giant can be beaten.

Erosion of human rights

I have been amazed over the last few years to see how deeply ingrained our acceptance of repeated erosion of human rights is embedded in our psyche no matter which State one hails from. In Melbourne last year, I was there at a conference when the adolescent youth was shot several times by Victorian police and killed in a skatepark in Northcote. A national outcry? No.

In NSW an Aboriginal man dehydrates in the back of a police van and dies. A national outcry? No. An eleven year old boy in handcuffs all day in Tamworth courthouse. A cause for comment under the United Nations 'Rights of the child'? No. NSW having the highest rates of youth arrest and incarceration - regularly raised at magistrate meetings as a national shame. A cause for concern in this State? No. The Northern Territory's 'three strikes and you are out' feature classrooms, plenty of solar power and will be asbestos-free. But when such growth comes at the expense of flora, I take exception.

A lilli pilli, a very fruitful chili bush and a magnolia-like tree that had the most glorious white blooms now all lie dead in the corner of the construction site, their roots pointing to the sky, a sad monument to policy, no matter how bad an individual's circumstances are. A policy worth national scrutiny? No.

I read the newspaper article by David Leser and was glad this issue of child arrest and overreaction by police was raised. But I am astounded that others still believe the police can abuse power and 'feel sorry for them' and that one should, when it comes to the police, 'just shut up and do what one's told'. Well, thank God I didn't.

Of course I don't believe the illegal arrest of a 15 year old compares to any of the gross abuses of human rights that occur daily but the acceptance of the erosion at this small level gives way to bigger, far more important erosions. My faith in challenging authorities for basic human rights for all demographics is renewed.

I can only assume that accepting clearly illegal activity on the part of the police is a throwback to a convict heritage whereby as a nation we remain unchallenging of clear abuses of power and do not see fit to protest against all too regular Aboriginal deaths in custody, annual shootings by police of mentally disturbed individuals and frequent contraventions of the Child Protection Act and Young Offenders Act - just ask local youth how they are treated and speak to local youth workers and don't forget the many children psychologically scarred in detention centres which we accepted as an OK policy for other people's children!

Perhaps a Bill of Rights will only be seen as essential in this country when freedom and fairness is expected for all and from all. Including the police.

of food. A sad fact given the homeless people that gather for food once a week but a block away.

I can appreciate that the survival of such plants may not have as much bearing on the community as houses falling into the sea due to erosion, or whether or not Woolworths will get into Mullum, but to me, planting a tree where you know in time it's going to die, or failing to relocate flora that is in the way of construction, shows little regard for nature and the green values this Shire is supposed to sport.

It is some comfort to know that a number of parties have taken cuttings of the grape vine, so that it may live to fruit another day.

The two of us

I seek to clear up a little confusion which has arisen in recent months (Letters January 5, January 12).

There are, in fact, two Michael Malloys living in Byron Shire. I have lived here since 1985 and after a lengthy stint in Byron Bay now reside happily in Bangalow. Michael Malloy No. 2 moved to the area about 6-7(?) years ago and we met not long after that.

I used to write a few letters to the local papers but have long given up, only occasionally coming out of retirement as I did last year to expose some blatant hypocrisy and self-interest re traffic planning in Bangalow.

But Michael Malloy number 2 writes quite a few letters and while I don't always agree with his stance, I find his letters generally entertaining and to the point. Sometimes people compliment me on letters written by Michael Malloy number 2 and I have to give them a tedious explanation of why he is not me and why I am not him.

Lately he has taken to signing his letters 'Mick Malloy, Suffolk Park'. I do not answer to 'Mick' and always sign my letters 'Michael Malloy, Bangalow'. Hope that this is all as clear as mud and Happy 2010 to all (especially Mick Malloy).

Misguided Dogs

My wife and I have supported the Blind Society and the Guide Dogs for over 30 years. We agreed to help out once again by telephone before Christmas. When our donation was not received within a certain timeframe we were sent a letter of demand from Dunn and Bradstreet collection merchants who added a threat of reporting our bad debt which they said 'may affect future requests for finance'. So we forwarded our donation via Bpay on December 14.

Yesterday we received another letter of demand from Dunn and Bradstreet which stated that in spite of previous demands, we had not sent our donation (again with the added threat of reporting our bad debt to a Credit Reporting Agency).

I telephoned the Guide Dogs at Chatswood this morning and was quickly transferred to their telemarketing agency. The young lady there was apologetic but the stench of telemarketing and aggressive collection merchant forms of donation soliciting and collection is still in the air. They've lost us forever.

Failing holidaymakers

I see that the Byron Shire Council is again failing to cater for tourists, holidaymakers and locals specifically in relation to the hundreds of people who have boats, canoes, sail boats etc.

The road into the Brunswick Heads Boat ramp is a disgrace with huge potholes. The ramp itself had not been cleaned for weeks and is extremely dangerous. There have already been several bad accidents occurring due to its slippery surface including a car and trailer slipping into the river (an expensive insurance claim).

Both the poor road condi-

Further warming/cooling thoughts

■ The IPCC estimates that Australia's share of greenhouse gases is 1.5%. Now the percentage of all the CO₂ in the atmosphere is roughly 0.038%. Out of this 0.038% let us generously assume that 5% of that is caused by humans, which is 0.0019%. So if the numbers are right, Australia's share comes to the almost microscopic figure of 0.0000285%.

So how is reducing that by 5%-25% actually going to control the world's temperatures?

Do we need another tax on top of building permit tax, cigarette tax, corporate income tax, dog licence tax, income tax, fishing licence tax, fuel tax, liquor tax, property tax, service charge tax, road usage tax, workers' compensation tax, vehicle licence registration tax etc, etc? On top of GST, which is a steady 10% and mainly goes to the states, we will be paying a (useless) CPRS tax and we have no guarantee that it will not fluctuate at the government's whim.

■ I started writing a longwinded response to Matthew Lambourne (Letters, January 12) but then deleted it. This discussion has, for me, run its course when I spend hours clarifying what I did and didn't say in past letters. Basically:

1. Matthew, I agree with you about the relative lack of sea level rise. Geez, man, it was Prof Noerdlinger who estimated 4cms, not me.

2. You completely misquoted my original letter and its intent. Not good. Read it again and understand, if you truly have a copy.

3. You admitted not reading or hearing all of the ABC interview, so why comment on it?

4. Fabricating evidence to support prejudice? Pfft. Read above for self-examination.

At least Matthew was thinking and had followed previous discussion (albeit incorrectly) before commenting.

Dailan Pugh - that letter was just embarrassing. You went at my letter 'bull at a gate' and showed you clearly have not followed this discussion. Due to your laziness, you do not deserve a response, so will not get one. There was more than a whiff of Don Quixote in that pile.

I do hope this process has stimulated thought (seems it has from the many who have approached me personally) but playing the Devil's Advocate has lost its allure. I'm back to local issues as Wayne Davis suggested.

■ Waiting for technology to fix climate change is akin to hoping for perpetual energy, or, that violence will ever overcome violence. It is attempting to pull oneself up by the bootstraps. Technology dependence is the cause of environmental degradation and climate change, so technologising our way out of it is not the solution.

Embodied energy - the cost of making, transporting and disposing of a product - is the elephant in the room that few wish to notice. The environmental cost of a product necessarily includes the cost of displacing earth-harmonious peoples particularly in mining or forestry operations. Their knowledge of sustainability given our predicament is now invaluable. How can any technological product be seen as sustainable, if part of its cost involves the removal and plight of the people of sustainability?

When there are no standby lights and there is Extended Consumer Responsibility in Australia, when school children in their Environmental Science class have no shoes on, when people go to bed and get up with the light, and when people are legally able to shop naked in Woolworths, then we will know procrastination about climate change has begun to end. We all know in our hearts that the solutions to environmental degradation and climate change are radical.

Before people suggest I am wishing to return to the caves, the inexorable path we now follow leads to the collapse of 'civilisation'. After that, there is the cave. At any rate, if one day, through a winding-back of materialism one wakes up naked in a cave, there is every possibility that one will be happier than what one is now. Part of that happiness may be the existence in oneself of the revolutionary idea, alien to a technocratic people, that nature is perfect.

The scorpion's tale

The scorpion, unable to swim, asked the frog to let him ride on its back across the river Jordan.

'Nothing doing, you will sting me and I will die!'

'Would I be so stupid? If you die I will drown!'

That makes good sense, thought the frog, and allowed the scorpion on her back. The scorpion promptly bit the frog.

'Why did you do it? Now we will both die!'

'This is the Middle East,' replied the scorpion.

Mr Gareth Smith must have been surprised at the Egyptian government preventing the demonstrator groups from crossing into Gaza. There were immediate cries of USA/Israeli pressures. In fact the secular Musharraf government is fighting a life and death battle against the extremely religious parties trying to overthrow it. Nor does it want Hamas to become stronger and stronger via continuing underground supplies of arms and rockets to Gaza. Under such circumstances what on the surface may seem enemies become friends.

I had suggested to Mr Smith to have a look at the other side of the border. He might have been very surprised at what is happening on the fast developing West Bank.

Should he be interested to know I shall be happy to let him have some material.

I do not doubt the earnest sincerity of his outcries for justice for the Palestinians but these should not prevent him from opening his mind to what is taking place.

Emma Maxwell, champion with a saw

For Emma Maxwell spending a few hours a day in the wood heap is rewarding and fun. Emma, like a surprising number of other women athletes, is a competitive sawyer and she loves it.

'I first became interested in woodchop events when I met my husband Shayne,' says Emma. 'It was his hobby and sport. That was over 20 years ago. I have been a sawyer myself for 19 years and in the last three, much more seriously focused on competing.'

Shayne Maxwell is the chief handicapper as well as being a competitor at the Bruns event and woodchopping is a huge part of the Maxwell's life, with children Chloe aged 12 and Jacob 10 getting involved.

'They are a bit young for the sport, but they show an interest. They have a go at sawing and chopping. Jacob has his own axe, but their attitude is more leisurely. At home when we train, they join in.'

Emma is actually quite petite in the world of women competitors but she attributes her success to her fitness and strength and while she says she can swing an axe, it is not something she competes in. The strength needed to get through a block of wood at speed is something that only a minority of women can achieve successfully, though there are many who do and they are admired within the circle.

Emma is the Queensland Jill sawyer of the year and with Shayne, they have been the Queensland Jack and Jill (mixed double-handed saw) sawing champions for three years in row. She has numerous championship titles in Queensland and two wins in the Australian team.

In what one would imagine is a blokey environment, Emma says that woodchopping men are very helpful and encouraging.

'People within the sport are very supportive of each other. The men are always very helpful. The men, the women, the families - everyone is always looking out for each other. It is actually people outside of the sport who can't seem to understand why I do it, but once you get a chance to tell then about it, they get more interested - some of my friends even come along to the events to cheer me on.'

Emma competed in over 30 events at this year's chop and she has been a member of the Queensland state team for five years and the Australian team for three. 'Out of work hours, woodchopping is pretty much our whole life. I am a sawyer for the state and national teams, so that means travelling around Australia to compete and constant training.'

Biddulph talks at Mur'bah

Following on from child psychologist Steve Biddulph's visit to Mullumbimby last November, local parents are organising a film of a similar talk entitled The Secret of Happy Children to be screened at Murwillumbah's Regent Cinema on Thursday January 21 at 7.30pm.

The Mullumbimby talk was given to a capacity audience in the town hall which underlined not only the need for parent education but local parents' receptivity.

According to organisers of the Murwillumbah event, Biddulph, who generously waived his usual fees, ended the talk to roaring applause and heartfelt appreciation.

The November discussion mainly centred around raising boys, however the Murwillumbah screening will be more of a general talk on practical parenting.

Biddulph was voted Australian Father of the Year in 2000 for his role in encouraging the role of dads.

In an attempt to make this a special night out for parents, children and babies cannot be admitted to the screening.

Entry is by donation - a suggested but flexible amount is $7.50.

Two BBFF films to focus on Mexico

The Byron Bay International Film Festival has announced the first details of two films to be screened at their upcoming festival. Both films focus on Mexico, a country that knows all about poverty with almost half of their one hundred and five million people living below the poverty line.

The minimum wage in Mexico is 46 pesos a day. That's $3.90 Australian.

It comes as no surprise that families living in total poverty are compelled to send their children to work on the streets in an effort to supplement the family income. These are the 'lucky children' because they at least have a family.

'While these circumstances do not conjure up happy pictures, if we scratch beneath the surface of these images, we find a world full of hope, promise and even joy,' say the festival organisers. The Byron Bay International Film Festival (BBFF) will open windows into this world when its screens the films The Tijuana Project and Somewhere Near Tapachula.

Focusing on just six of the numerous children of Tijuana whose neighbourhood is the city rubbish tip with its mountainous piles of waste, BBFF's 2007 Best Documentary winner John Sheedy provides us with an unusual perspective into this grim scenario. A school has been established in the neighbourhood, offering a platform for the children to voice their own attitudes to the many problems, and potential solutions, associated with waste.

In Somewhere Near Tapachula, homeless children who are utterly without hope experience a major life change when an Australian husband and wife set up a children's refuge, Mission Mexico, which provides far more than just 'shelter'. Starting with seven children, the numbers have now swelled to 54 living at the refuge.

The 22-year-old director Stefan Hunt says, 'We are so excited to share the amazing and inspirational story of Pam and Alan Skuse, who gave up their lives in Australia to become parents to 54 children in need.'

Adds producer Jonno Durrant, 'The joy and hope these kids have found in surfing and the love of their new "parents" is captivating. We are really excited to be attending the prestigious Byron Bay International Film Festival, and especially to be bringing Moacir Zeledon, one of the stars of Somewhere Near Tapachula, who is at Southern Cross University on the Gold Coast through the assistance of a Norm Innes Scholarship.'

BBFF's festival director

J'aimée Skippon-Volke says, 'Stefan will be in the running for our Best Young Australian Filmmaker Award. It's great to see young Australians creating such powerful films that are capable of truly touching our hearts. Our hope in screening these films is to inform and inspire our audience to appreciate the difference that they themselves are capable of making.'

The films will screen together on Tuesday March 9 at the festival, which runs from March 5 to 13 at the Byron Bay Community Centre. The full program and tickets will be available in early February. For more information visit www.bbff.com.au.

Lynda Rose

Bianca is off to Spain in Feb for 12 months on a Student Exchange Australia program. Bianca has been studying Spanish for three years and will go to high school over there and attend dance classes. After completing her schooling and dance in Spain Bianca hopes to bring some new moves back to the Northern Rivers region.

Our motto is 'dancing for joy' and the workshop is aimed at fun, and performance. There are several genres – something for everyone – and the classes are for beginners and experienced dancers from 8 years upwards. On the last day the dancers will perform some of what they have learnt for each other.

Dance is a family affair – Bianca, who is 17, has been training as a dancer since she could walk. She began her teacher training at 13 in her mother Lynda's NZ dance school. She has also danced and assisted in her grandmother's dance school which has been around

'forever'.

BACK TO SCHOOL

Back to school in a shot

With students preparing to return to playgrounds and classrooms across the country, Australia's Chief Medical Officer, Professor Jim Bishop, is urging parents to protect their children against a resurgence of the pandemic (H1N1) 2009 influenza, or swine flu.

'Parents need to get themselves and their children vaccinated against the pandemic strain before the start of school,' Professor Bishop said. 'Medical evidence shows us that schools are a significant factor in the spread of the virus. Once influenza is in the school environment it can spread quickly, affecting families and the local community.'

Of the more than 37,000 confirmed cases of pandemic influenza in Australia last year, about 15,400 were children and young people up to 17 years of age. Children had the highest rate of hospitalisations. Around 7,700 children under 10 years of age were confirmed cases. More than 1,000 of these children needed hospitalisation - 85 so serious that they had to be cared for in Intensive Care Units (ICUs). Most of these children had no previous underlying illness or conditions and 16 children under 10 years died.

Professor Bishop said Australia's free pandemic influenza vaccine, which has been extensively tested in international and Australian trials and has proved to be both safe and effective in combating swine flu, would ensure Australia doesn't see the same impact on children as has happened overseas recently.

'Vaccination is safe, effective and free, and once you are vaccinated you are protected against pandemic H1N1 for at least a year.

'We can't be sure what will happen with this flu over coming months but we can ensure our children have the best possible protection against this virus,' Professor Bishop said.

To find out more about getting your children vaccinated as part of their back to school preparation call the Pandemic Hotline on 180 2007 or visit www.healthemergency.gov.au

PROTECT YOURSELF AND YOUR FAMILY NOW WITH THE FREE SWINE FLU VACCINE.

The pandemic H1N1 influenza (Swine Flu) vaccine is now registered as safe and effective for children from 6 months of age. You can protect your children and yourself by getting this free* vaccine.

Almost 75% of all children aged 9 or under who have been hospitalised with pandemic influenza had no underlying illnesses or conditions that made them more vulnerable to this virus.

Swine Flu is still a major threat to Australia and continues to spread around the world. So the best way to ensure you and your family are protected is to get vaccinated now.

Contact your GP or health care provider for an appointment.

Brunswick valley School of Dance

BVSD has been an established dance school in the heart of Brunswick Heads for over 20 years. It offers classes in Classical Ballet, Hip Hop, Contemporary, Musical Theatre, jazz Funk and Tap, exams, eisteddfods or dance for fun! For the past 6 years the school has been under the direction of principal Carly Connors. 'Last year was a great year, and to see the students grow as performers and dancers at Dance Excellence in L.A and at the end of year concert made me really proud. I am really looking forward to seeing what the students can achieve this year.'

New enrolments welcome please call Carly on 0405 398 604.

Plaque Removal Recommended

Professional cleaning can not only improve the colour and remove recent staining, but plaque removal can also improve the health of the gums.

Cleaning the teeth not only feels fresh and brightens the teeth, but the build up of plaque can be the cause of much imbalance in the body including bacterial infection, bad breath, impaired digestion and the beginnings of periodontal disease

Regular observation of what is going on in the mouth can prevent later problems that can prove costly to both your health and bank account, so its good to include a check up in your visit

30 Minute Intro Special: Consultation, Check-up and Clean including 2 x-rays – $190 and get an update on your dental health and a professional cleaning. (Longer consultations available)

HYDROFUNK

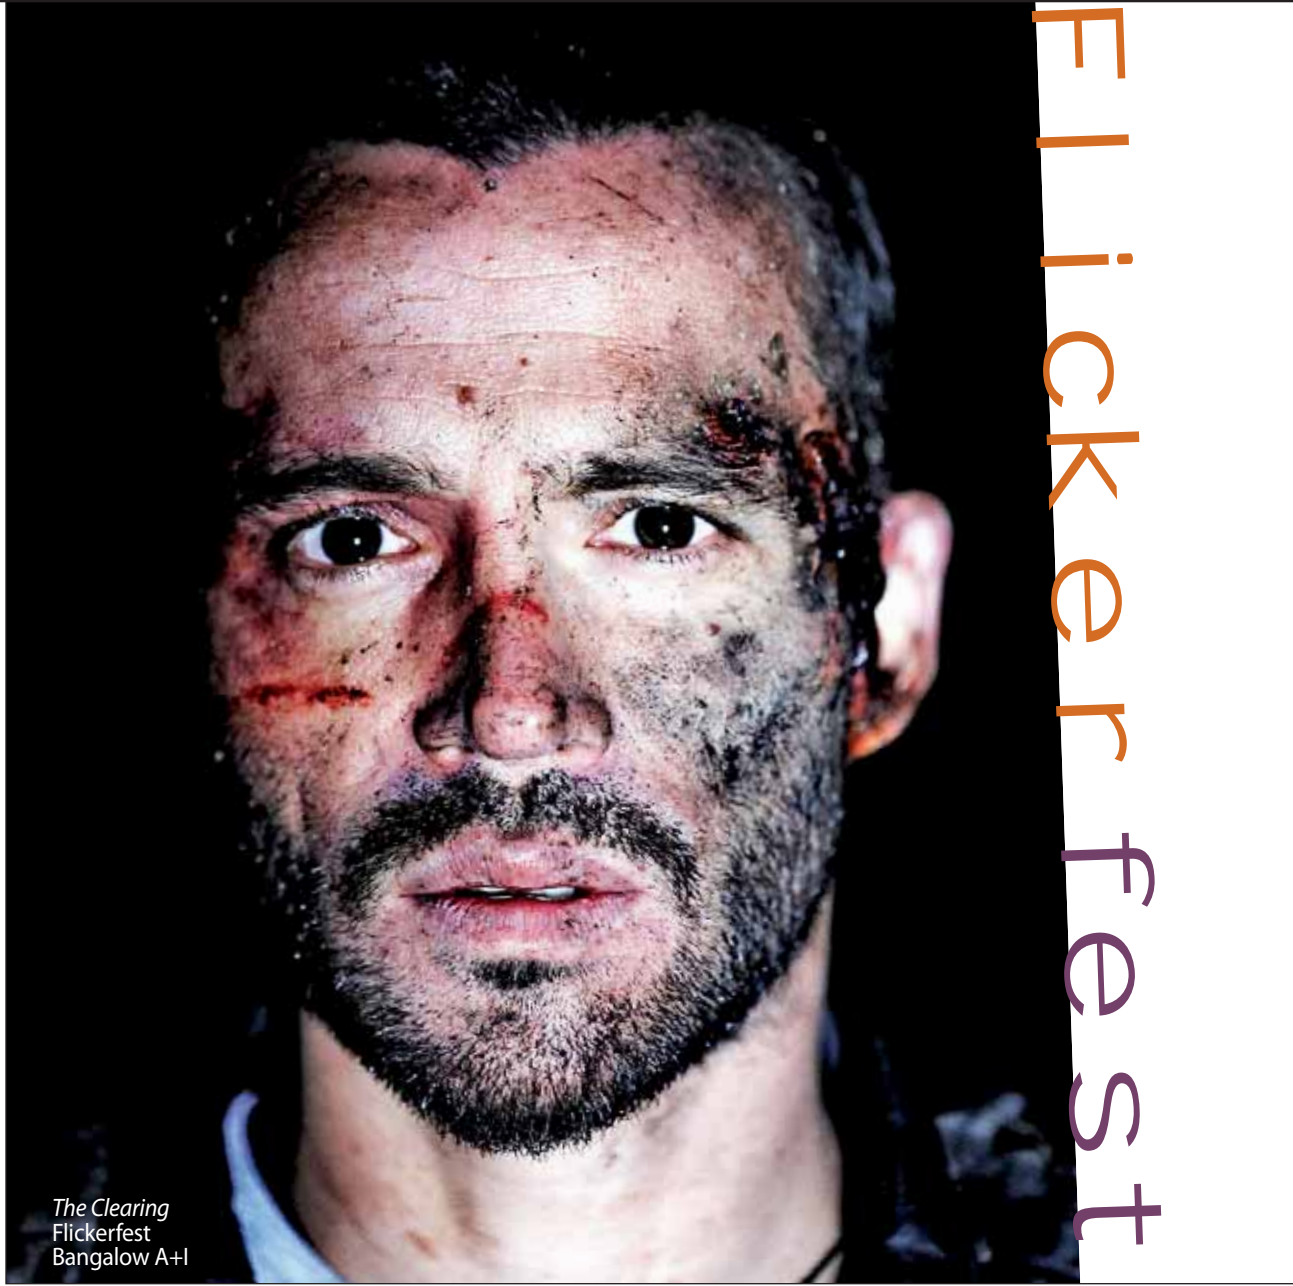

One lucky reader can win a free double pass to the launch of Hydrofunk's online store at the Back Room on Friday with the subject header, "What the Hydrofunk?" to gigs@echo.net.au

In its 11th year, Byron Shire's longest running film festival, Flickerfest, will screen a selection of multi-award winning International Shorts this weekend. The festival will also incorporate screenings of the Best of Australian Shorts and the Byron All Shorts (BAS) Short Film Comp.

This year Flickerfest received 1600 entries, of which 97 were selected for the final competition from all around the world. Last week, we had a little preview in The Echo office and were immensely entertained by this year's offerings.

International highlights include an Australian entry, The Cat Piano – an extraordinary animation which has already won the Best Short Animation – Sydney Film Festival 2009; Best Animation Short – Melbourne Film Festival 2009 and the AFI AWARD for Best Short Animation 2009. Another notable from Australia on the world stage is Seth Larney's The Clearing – a tale a bit twisty for those who like a puzzle. For the polyglotically challenged, there is a selection of subtitled entries, the Spanish Miente (She Lies) tells the story of a girl who wants to give a birthday present to her young sister, but she has to risk her own life in the process and from Iceland, The Nail – a quirky tale of power and paint.

Screening on Sunday night is the Best Of Australian Shorts program which has been especially curated for the Flickerfest National Tour. The films are a selection from five Australian Competition programs at this year's Flickerfest 2010 in Bondi. The Echo was fortunate to have a sneak peek at some of those entireties as well; Deborah Mailman's Ralph is as exceptional as Luke Doolan's Miracle Fish.

The Clearing
Flickerfest
Bangalow A+I

The inaugural Byron All Shorts Short Film Comp – the Northern Rivers Short Film Competition will see some of our local film-makers alongside the best in the world at Flickerfest over the Australia Day weekend. The screening will be held at the Bangalow A&I Hall in conjunction with the Flickerfest screenings.

The BAS received nearly 60 films, with filmmakers having just over four weeks opportunity to enter. There are some great entries competing for nearly $5,000 in prizes including the Directors Award selected by industry professionals – Flickerfest festival director Bronwyn Kidd, Screenworks GM Jill Moonie and others industry representatives and an Audience Award voted by those in attendance.

All sessions are held at the Bangalow A&I Hall. The screening for International 1 will be on Friday, International 2 will screen on Saturday and the Best Of Australian Shorts will be presented on Sunday. The doors open each night at 7.30pm with the films starting at 8.30pm.

HOW DO YOU MAKE A MANGO

A mango woke the baby. After an hour of jiggling and rocking, singing and feeding I had managed to lull my pink sweetmeat into slumber. I lay her gently into the cot, awestruck by her swaddled repose. There is truly nothing more beautiful than a sleeping child. Enfants terrible become Enfants de paradise. I felt the ache of my own body as it touched the sheets, the fatigue fizzing on my skin like an alka seltzer. Thank christ. Then it fell. On the tin roof.

Fricking stupid mango tree. It's like living in Beirut. I've been through two bottles of rescue remedy since the season began. The house begins its metallic concerto as flesh hit tin. Bang, thwomp, crash. The baby startled and then started to cry.

I used to love mangoes. Now I hate the sight of them. The smell makes me nauseous. Mangoes are evil. Fruit fascists turning my ambience to compost. Mangoes no longer herald the beginning of summer, these juicy mascots of the warmer season are harbingers of insomnia. About 40 years ago some fricking moron decided that it would be a good idea to plant a mango tree next to my house. And not a Bowen mango, the shitty stringy one. The one that should only ever be planted in the immediate vicinity of a dental floss tree.

So for the last few months I have had to put up with the constant banging of dropping fruit, the screech of hungry bats and the stench of rotting fruit outside my bedroom window. In the four years I have lived in this particular house the tree has never fruited. But weather conditions aligned with such perfection that the whole of Mullumbimby is awash with mangoes. The entire town has that sickly sweet smell of mangoes on the turn. Either that or someone's on a deodorant strike. (Wouldn't be the first time).

Hundreds of small putrifying orange carcasses litter the streets. Roadside signs declaring 'Mangoes $20 a box' make me laugh. Man, I'd pay $20 a box for you to take them away. What do you do with that much surplus fruit in a suburban garden? There's only so many pickles a girl can cook up and those who know me well would attest that I am not a conserve-ative girl.

I've tried composting them, but the bin is full. I've tried pegging them at hippies. I've set up a mango lassi stall. I've developed a new range of mango full-body fruit peels.

Doesn't only take off dead skin, actually takes off new skin! After playing in the tree my son's back looked like Groucho Marx's ashtray - large cigar burns all over his flawless skin. The sap had eaten through and left blisters, which have now healed to large white scars, a physical testimony to the Summer of 2009.

At least that's what I told the DOCS investigator. I can no longer park the car in my driveway as the mangoes have eaten through the duco on the bonnet. When I arrive home late at night I am greeted by the squelch of mango juice between my toes. Yesterday the rats arrived. They gather to eat the rotting fruit which I've piled under the tree. You don't have to be David Attenborough to know what comes next. Snakes. It makes me think that the tree of knowledge, the tree that became the fastrack out of paradise everlasting, wasn't bearing apples at all. It was a fricking mango tree.

Bluejuice Sizzling Hot

Bluejuice had a massive 2009, releasing their sophomore album Head Of The Hawk in September. Having attained an ARIA Award loss for Top 40 hit, Broken Leg, the band have big plans for 2010. Despite their pasty complexions, their complete rejection of shorts as a fashion item, and their general reluctance to go outside for any reason, Bluejuice have decided to spend summer touring the sizzling Australian countryside before their late-January appearance on the Big Day Out circuit. Sizzling 2010 is a mini music fiesta also featuring their pals Yves Klein Blue which will allow all members to throw off the shackles of their debilitating inner city paranoia and embrace the sunny delights of summer. Hotel Great Northern on Wednesday and check this week's giveaways for doubles passes and CDs.

Get Mental

Iconic Aussie rock band, Mental as Anything have been touring Australia and the world since the late seventies, and have enjoyed success with dozens of hit singles, including If You Leave Me Can I Come Too?, The Nips Are Getting Bigger and Too Many Times plus selling over two million records worldwide. Mental as Anything's musical career began with vinyl records and continues to thrive on iTunes. Mental as Anything have recently returned from touring the globe to perform live at the Byron Bay Brewery. Currently their greatest hits album, Essential as Anything - 30th Anniversary Edition, has been revamped and is available now. Also their latest album, Tents Up which contains the latest original works from the band. Get Mental at the Brewery on Saturday at 9.30pm.

Stoking the Australia Day Fire

Australia Day Eve will be heralded in as Tim Stokes plays his blend of rootsy, folk and blues with his upbeat and infectious happy vibe on January 25, performing his original style and some much loved Aussie songs. Stokes has been of the Northern Rivers area for the last two years and is pumped for another gig in one of his favourite pubs in the world where you can expect something different, special and surprising.

Mason Rack is Back
Indie troubadour Mason Rack is back from his third Canadian tour of over 60 shows and 40,000 km travelled in a van. The Mason and his band had venues and festivals trying to book them straight away for the tour of Canada in July. Mason Rack is the only band in the history of Kitchener Blues Fest Ontario to be asked back three years in a row. Mason Rack will play Lennox Point Hotel on Saturday. Hear new songs, ol' Mason gems, and toe curling tales from Canada – he brought one of them back with him – apocalyptic Canadian drummer Joel 'Thunderfoot' Purkess who joins the lineup here. Joel is renowned for a drum solo classed as 'eye popping, jaw dropping and genius'. Nathan 'Nurse' Lee-Archer completes the trio on bass.

Nimbin goes Mega
Nimbin Underground are going all out with a mega gig Australia Day at the Nimbin Town Hall from 1pm. The gig entitled 'Invasion Day' will showcase nine of the Northern Rivers best garage, punk, grunge and heavy metal bands. The lineup includes Nimbin's favourite, Manifest, who love to dress and paint up, playing their original inventive country-punk ballads; The Tendons, a hard-rocking Lismorian outfit, who have just released their latest CD, Cult Hero; Tanamera, a heavy metal band from Alstonville who are currently recording their debut album. These boys get the heads banging. The Wine Slutzz are a two man AC/DC meets 50cent rock/rapp combo and The Arcane New Year, a Clunes based alternative rock band, having recently charted on Triple J unearthed, are ready to rock your socks off. Also on the bill, Slug, a down and dirty, punk four piece, reminiscent of Joy Division; Thunder Gods of the Multiverse, another wicked heavy metal band; P.I.S.S. a quirky cutting edge punk

Stompy and Swampy – Mama Kin

Mama Kin's bittersweet melodies soar with stomping piano and swampy beats, all the while traversing the riotous, the raw and the intimate. Mama Kin draws on her experiences of love, life and heartache to deliver a set that is as engaging as it is inspirational. This summer Mama Kin will take to the road, showcasing tunes from her debut album Beat and Holler, due instore through MGM Distribution July, 2010. Beat and Holler marks the arrival of a sassy, soulful femme fatale, with hints of Regina Spektor, Fiona Apple and Joan As Policewoman. Tore My Heart Out, the first single from Mama Kin's debut album was named iTunes Single of the Week. The accompanying video clip scored indie clip of the week on Rage and was named clip of the week by The Daily Telegraph. Saturday at the Mullum Civic Hall from 7pm.

In the RAW

Every year the Melbourne International Comedy Festival mounts a nation wide search for fresh comedy talent via RAW Comedy. Hopeful aspirants from every corner of the continent start scanning their lives for material, hoping that their short time on the planet can filter into a killer five minute routine. To date there are over 20 entrants in the Byron Bay heat of RAW comedy prompting national organisers to schedule a second heat to take in all the talent. Byron Bay is one of the more regional areas but is a strong contender when it comes to RAW, with more entrants than some of the states! Byron entrants have a history of doing well with Ellen Briggs of Mullumbimby making it to the national final just four years ago. Ellen credits this with kick starting her comedy career and giving her the confidence boost she needed to make that dramatic sidestep from tuck shop mum to standup comedian. Ellen is now very much in demand in comedy rooms all around the country. Hannah Gadsby won RAW and found herself coming second at Edinburgh's 'So You think You're Funny'. Hannah has been touted as one of the most promising up and coming comics in the country. Adam Hills directed and mentored her for her solo show at the Melbourne Comedy Festival last year and Hannah is now spied on the telly on a manner of programs with a few ABC hosting jobs coming to fruition this year. Hannah did her first spot after a Byron Shire ACE comedy course and still uses a lot of the jokes she used for her very first performance. Other local success stories include Sandy Gandhi and Liam Holm, both making it to State finals. Find out who the new comedy sensations are, and cheer them on to greatness. Heat one is at the Byron Services Club on Monday January 25 at 8pm. $10/15. Bookings to 6684 3443 or tix at the club. MC Mandy Nolan. Special guest judges. It would be un-Australian not to attend! The second heat is now scheduled for the same venue on Monday February 8. Anyone still wishing to enter RAW can do so through: www.comedyfestival.com.au/raw Roll up roll up to the Circus Arts Showcase!

Friends of the Circus Inc. and Circus Arts, the indoor circus school located in the Arts and Industry Park, Byron Bay is holding its first monthly Circus Showcase for the New Year on Thursday January 21. This monthly extravaganza gives students of the school a chance to show off their many talents and skills. Audiences will be amazed at the agility and skill of our students on trampoline, static and triple trapeze, lyra, stilts and acro-balance... as well as our high flying trapeze team to finish the night with a bang. Doors open at 6.30pm. Show time starts at 7pm and runs till 8pm. This is a free event and open to all members of the public to watch some of the upcoming and established performers and support local artists. After the show, the flying trapeze will be open for anyone over the age of five to have a swing for $5. Snacks and drinks will be available from the licensed Big Top Café on the evening.

Historical Meeting by Anna Nordstrom will be on show at the Rivers Of Life exhibition

Rivers of Life

Rivers of Life is an exhibition at the Northern Rivers Community Gallery featuring the work of 36 leading Northern Rivers artists who are inspired by the beauty and diversity of the environment of this region. The exhibition captures the uniqueness of each artist's perspective creating a panorama of locations, light and colour. The great rivers of this region have helped shape not only the landforms but have created its distinctiveness as a whole area, providing a constant source of inspiration to the many artists who live and work here. Westpac Bank is sponsoring a People's Choice Award which is an opportunity for the public to vote for the art work they most connect with. Rivers of Life will run from Wednesday January 20 until Sunday February 21. The official launch will take place on 6pm Friday January 29 and will feature a guest performance by local opera singer Katie Rutledge. The Gallery is located at 44 Cherry Street Ballina.

Le Carnaval Spirituel

Following the success of their 2008 and 2009 Australian concert tours, Le Carnaval Spirituel returns to Byron Bay this summer to entertain us with their colorful 'joie de vivre' performances. With spectacular flair they bring the stage to life, unveiling a rich tapestry of music, dance, tribal drum acts, yoga, martial arts and surreal theatre, evoking the timeless wisdom of India's ancient spiritual culture. Established in 1979 in France, this amazing troupe has toured extensively throughout the world, enthraling audiences with their out of this world performances. Le Carnaval has been described as a 'spiritual Cirque du Soleil' in its presentation of the traditional culture and theatrical arts of mystic India. Bharat Natyam is an ancient form of divine dance from South India, performed thousands of years ago in the seclusion of the temple's inner chambers. Le Carnaval performs the divine dance in its traditional style and later in a stunning, contemporary East-meets-West fusion dance. Other performers include the Drummers of Manipur. Renowned for their exotic, athletic dancing, this troupe captures the stage as they perform acrobatic feats and martial arts movements while flying through the air playing on their drums. Le Carnaval Spirituel comes to the Byron Community and Cultural Centre on Sunday January 31. Showtime is 6.30pm with a vegetarian dinner available from 5.30pm onwards. SMASH MY BOX

Arianne Schreiber, singer, song writer and front person of iCON is presenting her new album with a live set at BAY FM's Planet Luv next Tuesday. Smash My Box is electro punk with catchy riffs and pop melodies. Arianne has worked with Alabama 3, Rennie Pilgrem, Crookers, Howie B and George Michael to name a few. Apart from underground hits such as X-lover, Different Gear and 4 Strings, Arianne has had a top 40 hit with Manchild. Arianne has lent her vocals to two Alabama 3 albums and the next Rennie Pilgrem single. Smash My Box is co-written with the legendary Mike Chapman, former producer for Blondie and the Knack. When Arianne is not touring with iCON in the UK, she is doing club gigs and live radio shows in the land of OZ. www.myspace.com/iconsmashmybox

Q: When are you playing?

A: 'I am playing live on Glittergirl's BAY FM show on Tuesday January 26. I am going to sing two or three songs from the icon album. After that there might be a show in Byron Bay before I go to London to play at Fabric and the Jazz Cafe.'

Q: Highlights of your journey in music and performance?

A: 'I really love the whole journey of creating music and lyrics and relish those moments when a song is conceived. A few times I have gotten in my car and turned the radio on when a DJ in London had just started spinning my song. That is a very exciting moment. Some of the people I have worked with have been a highlight in this journey like George Michael and the Crookers guys.'

Q: Is sexism an issue in the music scene you've experienced?

A: 'I'd like to say no to this question but the honest answer is yes, and it's been very frustrating for me at times. Generally the people I work with are respectful of me and work with me because they really like my style of writing and singing, but sometimes I have to fight to be heard when it comes to mixing or on the final arrangement of a song. Because I am a female and because I don't press all the buttons it is perceived I don't really know what I am talking about. But I don't give up and love the look of surprise and recognition when my idea is hard and tried and often loved. It is a male dominated industry and it can be extremely upsetting at times, but I guess it's up to us women to really know our stuff and put it forward in the right way.'

Q: How would you describe your sound?

A: 'It is an eclectic sound, which in our case means we travel through different genres. Some songs are pop, some are rock n roll, some are punk, cartoon burlesque a bit electronic at times and a bit orchestral and then even bluesy.'

Q: What can people expect from you live?

A: 'Our live act is developing all the time. We do two shows. One is a five piece band with visuals and electronic stuff thrown into the mix. We play around with the structures of the songs and I think it sounds even better than the record. The other show is a club show which consists of me and the DJ/soundman from the band. I like to dress up burlesque punk/Lolita style and I guess you could expect to see a mad doll-like creature being sung by her songs. We (iCON) have had some fabulous collaborations on this album which is actually about 30 songs, though only 12 are on it at the moment. We have had Mick Jones from the Clash play on a song, Larry Love from Alabama 3 co-write and play on a couple. David Jordan has a song on some and the man who came and tied it all together and wrote some brilliant stuff with us is the magician Mike Chapman. This is an ongoing collaboration and we are trying to write songs for other people to sing as we all believe the world needs great songs, and that the current pop idol world of music is dulling the masses.'

Tune in to BAY FM's Planet Luv from 6am to 9am Tuesday next week and get an earful of Smash My Box...

cinema reviews

Bran Nue Dae

First up, we should dispense with the qualifiers of 'Australian' and 'aboriginal' – this is outstanding and does not need special consideration. It's 1965 and Willie (Rocky McKenzie) wants to enter the church when he grows up, but after being ill-treated at school by the German priest (Geoffrey Rush), whose mission is to hammer Christianity into the coloured boys, he runs away. Lonely and lost, he pines for Rosie (Jessica Mauboy), the girl he fell for back in Broome. After meeting Uncle Tadpole (Ernie Dingo), also from Broome, the pair set out together on a road trip home. Musicals had their heyday half a century ago with the likes of South Pacific and Oklahoma and in 2010 it is a rare thing to be entirely convinced by one – I mean really, people bursting into song for no reason? At least a few good tunes come in handy (Chicago had not one), so it benefits director Rachel Perkins enormously that the play she has adapted is loaded with them. Wisely, she does not attempt to disguise the unnaturalness of the genre, instead accentuating it with a vibrant, richly contrasting palette, the overall effect being a bit like Tim Burton meets Tracy Moffatt. The story leans towards the whacky, but in its telling there is humour, pathos, unselfconscious social comment and – such joy. McKenzie initially seems too tall for the part, gawky even, but I was entirely won over by him, especially when the movie kicks into gear with the appearance of Dingo. All shine, but Ernie steals the show with his measured blackfella shtick, while Deborah Mailman pushes the un-PC envelope even further with her depiction of Roxanne, a lascivious Kimberley woman who is keen on the grog. For all its fun and games, however, and just when you least expect it, Perkins hits you with a scene in a lockup that is profoundly sad and soulful – it's an expression of over two hundred years of hurt.

But then there's the dead snake used to replace a fan belt, and the footy players on the deck of a truck doing traditional dance to the accompaniment of a Greek bouzouki, and Mauboy, supported by a gnarly band, slaying Stand By Your Man ... Owing to its unfashionable positivity and a refreshing disinclination to dwell on victimhood (was 1990, when the stage show premiered in Perth, a more optimistic time?) Perkins's film might not win her many prizes, but it's bound to appeal to an indigenous audience. Deadly.

~ John Campbell

Tooth Fairy

Drinks, popcorn and chocolate ice creams – the sounds of contented grazing lasted well into the second half of this not entirely hopeless kids' flick. Dwayne Johnson has sensibly dropped 'the Rock' as a moniker (something The Edge might also consider doing before he checks into the old folks' home), but his niche as the black man-mountain who is a teddy bear with youngsters remains entrenched. Here he is Derek, an ice-hockey pro who has established star billing in the minor leagues after a shoulder injury curtailed his career at the highest level. He's dating Carly (Ashley Judd), a frumpy white single-mother of two – the relationship doesn't stand up to rigorous scrutiny, but an Afro-American Carly would have murdered the box office. It's not every day that Hollywood allows for the guy to be better looking than the gal (Hugh Grant and Sarah Jessica Parker in 'Have You Heard About The Morgans?' springs to mind), but decking him out in wings and a baby blue elf's outfit doesn't do the big fella any favours. That's his fate after he pooh-poohs the concept of the tooth fairy to Carly's little girl, Tess. The indiscretion results in him being abducted to the fairies' fantasyland where he is admonished by its Queen – she made her entrance on a cloud. 'Gawd, it's Ita Buttrose!' I thought, not recognizing the equally well preserved Julie Andrews – and assigned the task of collecting teeth and leaving money for gummy children while they sleep. Meanwhile, Carly's teenage son, Randy, fancies himself as a guitar hero and, to give him his dues, he does impress with a raunchy take on Cream's Sunshine Of Your Love. Randy wants desperately to perform at a school concert, but Derek's credo of 'lower your expectations, that way you won't be disappointed' is not what he needs to hear. Does Randy get to the gig and blow everyone away? Does Derek find a new lease on life to rekindle his fading career? Does gormless Tracy, Derek's fairy minder, finally win his wings? The theme of striving to fulfil dreams, even if it means lassoing the moon, is a chestnut, but the veteran writing team of Lowell Ganz and Babaloo Mandel will not count this among their most inspired efforts. Apart from the cruisy skating, it creates no lasting impression (I'd virtually forgotten all about it by the time I got home), but, as the school hols grind on, it's an unobjectionable pacifier for parents run ragged by their little treasures.

~ John Campbell

Paranormal Activity

This is a genuinely chilling horror movie experience that should be seen at the cinema, but for the full effect don't ask your friends what's coming. The film is well-paced and believable. Paranormal Activity is the taut tale of Micah (Micah Sloat) and Katie (Katie Featherston), a nice, young couple who are experiencing strange phenomena. Another nice feature of the story's setup is that this paranormal activity isn't viewed by the couple in the same fashion. For Katie, it's troubling and reminds her of darker moments from her childhood. For Micah, it's an adventure. The movie effectively stokes up that sense of 'the other': the idea that there are forces in this world that we can never hope to understand, and that to toy with them can have grave consequences. Going into this film without forewarning will almost guarantee a genuinely chilling horror movie experience. Don't ask your mates, just see this one – you won't be sorry.

WITH LILITH

The Sun and Venus joining Neptune in Aquarius makes this one of the year's most unusual weeks. What you expect may not happen, and what you never imagined probably will...

ARIES: A bossy, dominant approach is likely to make this week's people resistant, especially during late week Aries moon; relaxed, understanding consideration will get you much more cooperation and support. Impossible for an Aries? Not if you put your mind to it.

TAURUS: Aquarian Venus shines brightly in company, is less understanding up close and personally. So stick to what this week offers: the social sphere with interesting new people to meet and greet. Someone's likely to surprise you by totally overturning the opinion you had of them.

GEMINI: Mercury heading forward again in the sign of goals and ambitions has you smart as a whip and wickedly witty. People are listening, and with Jupiter moving into your sector of success this could translate into interesting new job prospects or professional offers.

CANCER: Jupiter's move to Pisces kicks off a career boost which will steadily manifest during the coming year. Friends or enemies from long ago and far away could be on your mind, even show up. How do they connect to your current situation – or don't they?

LEO: Retrograde Saturn's highlighting financial waste, carelessness and extravagance – should you be interested? See what your accountant thinks. Of course this week's about you, but others with vastly different opinions will think it's about them – paramount cheek, but just one of this week's trials, majesties.

VIRGO: Jupiter moving into your house of partnerships for the next twelve months stimulates the Virgo urge to serve. That's not a bad thing, but remember the trick to doing a Mother Teresa (Virgo of course), is finding the line between giving, and giving with expectations of a result.

LIBRA: You've got nothing to lose and everything to gain this week by experimenting, being adventurous and opening your mind to wider perspectives. Don't dismiss strange inspirations that come your way and if unexpected guests turn up with unusual suggestions, why not?

SCORPIO: Mars doesn't move forward in your success zone till the end of February but this still looks like a more than a half way decent week, Scorps: sassy, adventurous and pleasure plentiful, though not without some heavily ruffled feathers and vivid differences of opinion.

SAGITTARIUS: Archers are rovers, but everyone needs to belong somewhere: to a tribe, a like-minded community. Call home, or your homies this week, however far flung. Techno skills less than excellent? Then upgrade them so you can let your fingers do the travelling and expand your sense of family.

CAPRICORN: Some plans may have to take a back seat to economic realities this week while a heavy Saturn/Pluto square works itself out. But it will pass, so stay calm. Investigate. Ask questions. Above all be flexible and prepared to extend beyond your personal comfort zone.

AQUARIUS: Neptune in Aquarius, joined later in the week by the Sun and Venus, shifts you into exuberant high gear for your birthday month. And could you ask for a better present than generous Jupiter moving into your house of cash to splash and hanging there all year?

PISCES: With the planetary influx into the sign of the future, if you're serious about making your dreams a reality, now is definitely the time to start. Especially with big daddy Jupiter in your sign for the next twelve months detonating a major boost of optimism and confidence.

Zhao Zong Yuan has captured his first Australian Championship title after a stunning performance at Norths Club in Sydney this week.

A decade ago Zhao had stunned onlookers by finishing second in the biennial national championship at the age of 13. Within a year Zhao was an International Master and by 2007 had become a Grandmaster, Australian Open Champion and Australian number one.

Still the most prestigious Australian Championship title eluded him, but in Sydney the now 23-year-old from Coff's Harbour remedied the gap in his CV.

In blitzing an elite field which included visiting English Grandmaster Gawain Jones, Zhao scored an amazing undefeated 10/11 to equal the record score Darryl Johansen had set two decades earlier.

In his acceptance speech, Zhao admitted to surprise and delight at his great form given that he had been relatively inactive in 2009 due to completing his final year of pharmacy studies.

Zhao also made a point of thanking the second place-getter George Xie for pushing him on to a world class performance. After beating Xie in round five Zhao thought he could coast to victory but Xie's run of victories forced Zhao to pull out all stops in pursuit of the title.

The race to the finish became ever more tense, with Zhao and Xie going win for win against any Grandmaster or International Master who stood in their way.

Going into the final round, Zhao and Xie were tied for first place but Zhao held his nerve in the final round to defeat Tomek Rej while Xie crashed to defeat against defending titleholder Stephen Solomon.

Xie was not too upset, having already secured his second Grandmaster result; he now needs only one more, and an improved world ranking, to become Australia's fifth Grandmaster.

The following spectacular win by Solomon won the best game prize at the Championships.

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 d6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 g6 6.Be3 a6 The Dragadorf variation, recently popularised by Magnus Carlsen. 7.f3 Nbd7 8.Qd2 Bg7 9.g4! b5 10.g5 Nh5 11.a4! Extraordinarily ambitious. Normally this move would be played on move 9 and White would concentrate only on the queenside. 11...bxa4 12.Rxa4 Bb7 13.Kf2 0-0 14.Be2 Nc5 15.Ra3 Qc8! Heading into the valley of death 15...f5! would have put White's manoeuvres to the test. 16.Nd5 Qh3 17.b4! Ne6 18.Nf5! gxf5 19.Nxe7+ Kh8 20.Nxf5 Suddenly the threat of 21.Bf1, trapping the queen, forces Black to return a piece. 20...Nf6! 21.gxf6 Bxf6 22.Bf1 Qh5 23.Nxd6! 23.Rd3 was much safer. 23...Rad8 24.Rd3 Bh4+ 25.Ke2 Rxd6! An imaginative rook sacrifice, but it is refuted by an even better one. After 25...f5!, intending to meet 26.Nxb7 with 26...fxe4!, Black would be right back in the game. 26.Rxd6 Bxe4! 27.Qc3+! f6 28.Kd2 Bxf3 29.Rg1 Bg5 30.Rxe6 30.Kc1 was simpler, but Solomon has another sacrifice in mind. 30...Qxh2+ 31.Rg2!! PUBLIC NOTICE

I Betty Bouncer, do profusely apologise to name supplied and the other person for the visual and mental trauma caused by the photograph that appeared on page 29 of the local family friendly newspaper. I do hope you will forgive my indiscretion of luring the innocent Mr Irving Swaltz into that compromising situation and then allowing the image to be used for promotional purposes.

Yours faithfully Betty Bouncer

LAST SUPPERS

After six years behind the hot stoves of Bangalow Hotel's fresca restaurant, head chefs Paddy and Kath Hobbs are moving on to pursue other interests. They will be holding not one but two Last Suppers before they leave: dinner on Saturday January 30 and lunch on Sunday January 31 - so for a final indulgence (at least for now) in the fabulous fresca food, fans should book now. Contact the restaurant on 6687 1711.

GITAM'S RECIPES

Gitam Garden is a local woman who teaches yoga with one of the longest running yoga schools in Australia, Byron Yoga Centre. With a background in the hospitality industry and a strong focus on vegetarian food she found herself, after joining the Centre in 2007, devising menus for both its students and its retreat programs. Now she has put together a host of her tried-and-tested recipes into a little book entitled 'Gitam's Garden' and had it printed by Byron Bay's Frontline Printers. It's a handily-sized spiral-bound compendium of vegetarian dishes reflecting the yogic approach to a healthy lifestyle and based on a Sattvic diet, which is a pure and nourishing way of eating designed to help maintain the mind in its most peaceful state, allowing it to function at its maximum potential. Who doesn't need that? For the most part the recipes are gluten- and dairy-free; no garlic is used and onion is replaced by asphoetida (or 'hing', a fennel-derived herb); no eggs or mushrooms feature. This is the perfect book with which to launch a promising new year of at least beginning to eat more healthily, and the best part is that the very simple recipes are also, on the whole, delicious. There is a gorgeously rich Pumpkin Cheesecake; a fabulous Spinach and Fetta Hunza Pie; Golden Spicy Cornbread; Pear and Spinach Salad with Fetta; several excellent chutneys including a zingy Mango one to use up all this season's surfeit. In short, this is a book which will please non-vegetarians who do not practise yoga as much as vegetarians who do. It is available by contacting Gitam on 6677 1098 or 0414 261 390 or by visiting www.byronyoga.com

In Praise of Pasta Platters

Victoria Cosford

These long sun-drenched days will continue for a while, as will visitors from other parts of the country. January is a hard month for settling back into the common grind as the party mood prevails. And while the word Entertaining continues to be relatively benign, it is useful to have up your sleeve some simple solutions to it. One of my favourites is the Pasta Platter. Apart from coeliacs, there are very few people averse to the notion of eating pasta – done properly, of course, with a good sauce neither too scant nor too smothering. Pasta Platters can mostly be prepared well in advance of the descending hordes; they look splendid; they may cater for both vegetarians and carnivores. And the only accompaniments required are the simplest green salad and some respectable bread (which it is increasingly possible to find up here: I am currently loving much of what Jordans produce).

The key is organisation. All you need are three types of pasta to go with three types of sauces. Contrast and colour are critical to the success of your platter – and so the three types of pasta could include one short dried one such as penne, one long one like spaghetti and one fresh one such as ravioli or fettuccine. Fresh pasta has the benefit of being very forgiving and quite difficult to overcook – its actual cooking time is also minimal. Dried pastas are trickier – and soggy, overcooked pasta is to be avoided at all costs – but you can do what many restaurants do and precook it, removing it from the water while still quite firm, spreading it out to cool as quickly as possible with a lubrication of olive oil tossed through to keep it moist. Back to that later.

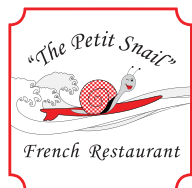

For the sauces, consider the drama of your table presentation. You could go for the colours of the Italian flag and have a green, a white and a red sauce. So, for example, spaghetti al pesto, fresh tortellini with a creamy cheesy ham sauce, fusilli with a chilli-spiked tomato sauce. Fresh pastas are particularly suited to cream-based sauces. Beetroot makes a visually stunning sauce – just simmer small cooked chunks of beetroot in buttery onions, add white wine then whizz in a blender before finishing with a little lemon juice, cream and grated parmesan. Fresh basil works well at the last minute. Do a tomato-based prawn dish alongside a spinach and ricotta one alongside a pumpkin, goats cheese and black olive type. There are so many hundreds of glorious pasta sauces, but do be mindful of flavour clashes: it's really quite easy to imagine what will go with what when the three types are all on the same individual plate.

Apart from all'espresso sauces like sage and burnt butter (heavenly with fresh ravioli and it all happens in the last five minutes before serving), your sauces can be made days ahead then refrigerated. Then, half an hour before you plan to serve, while someone else is setting the table, you need to ensure your biggest pot is 2/3 full of salted simmering water. On three other hotplates prepare pots (I personally prefer low wide frypans) of your three sauces and bring them to simmering point. Keep some water handy to top them up if they are reducing too much. Increase the heat in your big pot to a boil and drop in the fresh pasta: as soon as it floats to the surface fish it out in a heat-proof strainer and toss it, shaking off most of its cooking water, into its matching sauce. Keep the heat low after stirring everything together. Lower the big pot back to a simmer and in the same strainer lower one lot of par-boiled pasta. Count to ten then hurl that into its appropriate sauce, keeping the heat low. Repeat with the next lot of par-boiled pasta. Now, working quickly, it's just a matter of raising the heat and tossing pastas through sauces until well-coated. Topple briskly out on to the awaiting platter in three neat colour-contrasting thirds and wipe the platter clean with a tea towel. Rush it to the table where a chunk of real Italian parmesan sits on a plate with grater. Three sets of tongs, last-minute-dressed salad leaves, chopping board with loaf of bread. A flask of chianti if you can find one – or a jug of wine and thou. Everyone just hops in helping themselves, shared-food concept invented centuries before the term became a trend, and your apron can come off.

your apron can come off.

The indiscretions of Abbotsleigh

Horatio Bitemark

'Will sir be wearing his boots to bed tonight?' asked Sanders the butler.

It was extremely cheeky of the man and done with perfect panache. Abbotsleigh, the gentleman so addressed, merely stared harder into his newspaper while a flood of crimson washed across his cheeks and the rest of us guffawed and slapped the table top in appreciation.

The story, circulated gentlemanwards via the scullery boy and the valets, had Abbotsleigh geared up for the night in cowboy attire for a celebratory meeting of the local chapter of the Tom Mix Fan Club, whereat, as one would expect, they toasted their celluloid hero in a rootin'-tootin' fashion with a Wild West whisky more aligned to engine degreaser than to Scotland's finest. Our chap fell under its influence to an extraordinary degree, the miracle being that he was still capable of ambulatory activity which saw him reach the clubhouse with only three encounters with lamp posts and a run-in with a hormonal Pomeranian.

In Abbotsleigh's mind, however – or what we laughingly refer to as his mind, a random collection of cerebral misgivings – he was headed into the domicile of Mrs Trixie Doublepike, a retired circus contortionist who occasionally offered him some comfort in the area of home activities. Mrs Doublepike allegedly had advised Abbotsleigh he could put his shoes under her bed any time, which the sozzled man somehow interpreted as boots ON the bed any time.

The bed in question that night, gentle reader, was not that of the good lady saltinbanque but Sanders's. In his 'confused' state – the euphemism once in vogue among Australia's submariners – Abbotsleigh crashed into the butler's rooms, spurs a jingling jangling jingling. In an attempt to make a sobering cup of Darjeeling, he swept Sanders's 16th century Chinese teapot into the sink and the oblivion of a thousand crazed pieces.

Unfazed, Abbotsleigh then picked up the butler's stainless steel and black neoprene garden shears – part of an unusual martial arts practice called hedge-ki, a combination of topiary and kung fu celebrated in the film Crouching Gardener, Hidden Cabbage Moth – and made several unfortunate stabs into the trouser press. The shears dropped point first upon Sanders's brogues, Abbotsleigh spied the bed and leapt upon the antique eidern down, muddled cowboy boots and all. He threw an affectionate arm and leg across the butler's supine form, muttered, 'Come here, my lovely', and passed out, spending the rest of the night snoring like an elephant with trunk polyps. Sanders, possessed of sangfroid even in semi-consciousness, quietly slid out from under Abbotsleigh and went on to sleep happily undisturbed standing upright in a broom cupboard.

One can imagine Abbotsleigh's perturbation the next morning upon finding himself in the butler's bed and then enduring Sanders's chilling clarity at the dining table, but his punishment was not entirely over. We had Chef send up a covered tray. Abbotsleigh eagerly revealed its contents, expecting some reviving bacon and scrambled eggs, only to find his cowboy boots lightly steamed on a bed of OK Corral spinach. Much merriment all round.

'I shall never drink again,' proclaimed Abbotsleigh, holding his sore head between his hands. 'Pass me the port, would you, Digby, there's a good chap.'

The Byron Shire's eclectic weekend of sport

The Mullumbimby Pony Club held their end of year camp at Mullumbimby Showground. Riders from eight to 19 years attended the overnight camp, including Ellira McHugh, above left, riding in her first bending race on Tiffany. The 2010 sign for the club will be held on Saturday January 30 at the Mullum Showground from 10am till 2pm. The inaugural Brunswick Heads Woodchop Athletics Carnival was a great success with entries coming from far and wide, the youngest competitor just seven years old, the oldest 83. Pictured left are members from the Gold Coast Master in the 100 metres sprint event. Five times World Champion and current world title holder Mitchell Hewitt, above middle, put everything he's got into the finishing touches on this log during the final events at Saturday nights woodchop finale.

SURFING

Byron Bay Boardriders

Thanks to our team members that made the trip to Duranbah for the Jim Beam Surf Tag. The team was Danny Wills, Jarrad Sullivan, Luke Archibald, Torren Martin and Beau Walker. Everyone dug deep on the day with great performances from Jarrad Sullivan and Danny Wills. Unfortunately due to some strong heats from Snapper, Noosa and Kirra we didn't progress through our heat.

The Kirra Teams event is on from the 5th to the 7th with 6 opens and 2 juniors needed, would be great to see everyone up there to support the team.

Byron Shire Council
Seeking Committee Members
Section 355 Management Committees
Would you like to contribute to the betterment of our Shire by joining a Section 355 committee? These committees provide a mechanism by which interested persons can have an active role in the management of Council owned community venues.
Council is currently calling for nominations from community members wishing to assist already established Section 355 Committees with the management of the following venues:
• Durrumbul Community Centre
• South Golden Beach Community Centre
• Suffolk Park Community Hall
Nomination forms and Council's Guide to Operation of Section 355 Committees can be obtained at the Council Administration Centre, community access points and are also available on Council's website www.byron.nsw.gov.au/expressions-of-interest
All applications for nomination must be submitted on an approved nomination form.
Nominations close: Thursday February 11, 2010
Enquiries: Gayle McCallum 02 6626 7045

Now is a time of awakening
Byron Bay Satsang
 – Sitting in Presence with Isira
Saturday January 23, 2010

Isira is one of the modern world's spiritual masters, who lives and radiates Awakened Presence. Born in Australia, with higher consciousness already developed, she transmits the deepest essence of truth with ease and grace. Isira is here to touch as many people as possible to enable individual and global consciousness to be awakened: to live in awareness and impact the earth positively.

Inaugural Satsang at Budha-wana,
 in Myocum region
 7-9.30pm, Saturday January 23, 2010
 Details phone Joya-Rose 6684 7878
 Suggested donation $20

Now you have the opportunity to sit with Isira in Presence to receive/ remember Truth beyond words – the love, peace and humour – and experience freedom.

PETS FOR LIFE ANIMAL SHELTER

WHO AM I ?

We have named this beautiful girl "Hope", but we really don't know who she is because she was bought in from the pound. She is de-sexed, grey and white in colour and somewhere between 3 to 5 years old; she was found wearing a yellow collar with a bell. She is a very loveable girl who deserves to be in her home - if you recognise her please contact Lesa for the above. It is breeding season, and undesexed cats, driven by uncontrollable hormones, are out roaming. If you have lost your cat, please phone the Byron Shire Rangers Office 6626 7000.

Please make an appointment to meet them with Lesa on 0438 363 287 Billinudgel

BYRON

Land valuation notices are being issued for about 12,800 properties in the Byron Local Government Area.

'The total land value of the LGA as at 1 July 2009 was about $6.35 billion,' Valuer General Philip Western said.

'Real estate analysis in the Byron LGA has been extensive during the course of the valuation program with 287 residential, 23 commercial, 13 industrial and 107 rural sales analysed.

'The value of residential, commercial, industrial and rural land within the Byron LGA have generally dropped over the 12 month period compared to the growth over recent years.

'Typical residential land values were 841 square metres at Lighthouse Road, Byron Bay, valued at $2.6 million; 1,011 square metres at Booyun Street, Brunswick Heads, valued at $617,000; 601 square metres at Paperbark Place, Bangalow, valued at $264,000; 796 square metres at Shelly Drive, Byron Bay, valued at $380,000; 805 square metres at Dehnga Place, Suffolk Park, valued at $325,000; 787 square metres at Murumba Close, Ocean Shores, valued at $253,000; and 558 square metres at Avocado Circuit, Mullumbimby, valued at $209,000.

'Typical commercial land values were 297 square metres at Jonson Street, Byron Bay, valued at $1.78 million; 303 square metres at The Terrace, Brunswick Heads, valued at $630,000; and 303 square metres at Byron Street Bangalow, valued at $640,000.

'Typical industrial land values were 1,330 square metres at Wollongbar Street, Byron Bay, valued at $495,000; and 3,334 square metres at Smith Street, Mullumbimby, valued at $533,000. Values firmed on demand at Billinudgel with $272,000 for 1,074 square metres at Bonanza Street.

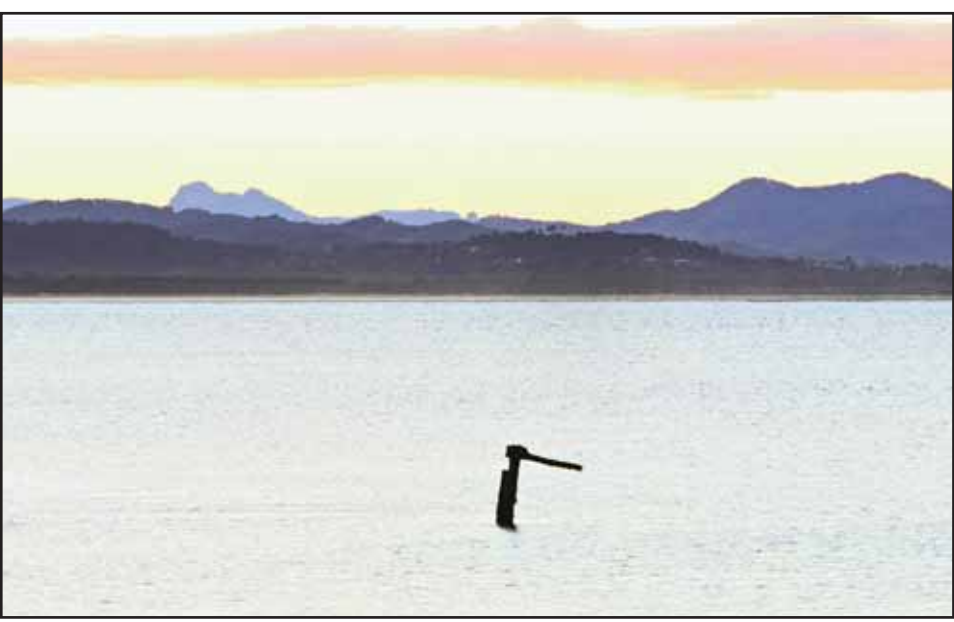

'Typical rural land values were 52 hectares at Federal Drive, Byron Bay, valued at $705,000; 69 hectares at Tyagarah Road, Tyagarah, valued at $905,000; and 1.17 hectares at Huonbrook Road, Huonbrook, valued at $293,000.'

TWEED

By comparison, the total land value of Tweed shire as at 1 July 2008 was about $11.2 billion.

'Real estate sales analysis in the Tweed shire has been extensive during the course of the valuation program with some 709 residential sales, 137 rural sales and 34 commercial and industrial sales analysed,' Valuer General Philip Western said.

'The residential market within the shire remained strong over the 12 month period, especially is highly sought after areas such as Tweed Heads, Fingal and Casuarina/Salt.

'Specific locations such as Point Danger, Greenbank Island and elevated sites at Kingscliff also showed growth in the market, while there were more modest increases in land value in density sites throughout the shire.

'The valuations are dated at 1 July 2008 and are based on relevant land and property sales data. In most areas the value of commercial land remained stable or increased marginally, while industrial values strengthened across the shire due to strong demand and scarce supply of desirable properties, the exception being South Tweed's

Expo Park Subdivision.

'Values for rural land remained stable or increased, depending upon the land type and location, with smaller, rural residential type allotments in coastal locations and in reasonable proximity to Murwillumbah in demand.

'Limited supply, coupled with strong demand, has resulted in a strong increase in the value of rural residential and well located rural holdings.

'Land values for typical residential housing sites were $189,000 at Castle Field Drive, Murwillumbah; $241,000 at Muskheart Court, Pottsville; $259,000 at Franklin Street, Banora Point; $262,000 at Kennedy Drive, Tweed Heads

West; $362,000 at Diamond Place, Tweed Heads; $336,000 at Second Avenue, Tweed Heads; $1,250,000 at Hill Street, Tweed Heads; and $198,000 at Durigan Place, Tweed Heads.

'Typical rural property land values ranged from $241,000 at Kyndalyn Court, Nunderi, to $1,070,000 at Reardons Road, Cudgen.'

Property owners will receive a leaflet with their valuation notice that explains the valuation process. People who have a query about their valuation are encouraged to call the toll free number 1800 110 038.

More information on land valuation and a land value search service can be found on the Land and Property Management Authority's website at www.lpma.nsw.gov.au.

Exclusive St Helena Road

St Helena road, traversing the ridgeline south of Byron, offers unsurpassed northerly coastline and hinterland panorama. The very limited number of properties sprinkled along the ridge are tightly held, and opportunity to purchase is rare. RP data have recorded only 2 sales since May 07 at $3.825M and $3.2M respectively. The structurally solid house, on this spectacular 5,400sqm level site, sits on expansive lawns adorned with ancient Moreton Bay Figs and Oak trees. Architecture is classic 1970s, and the simplicity of the square, 2 story design with flat roof, allows great flexibility in renovation. Includes large living areas on each level, 3 beds, 2 bathrooms, office, separate dining and outbuildings. To be offered at Auction on site, Saturday February 20, at 11am. The agent comments that price is expected to be significantly less than half the average price achieved in the street in recent years. Currently rented at $500 per week. Please contact Wal Leeke on 0411 707 616 or sales@byronshirerealestate.com.au to arrange inspection.

Property in Focus
Possum Creek Privacy

Soak up the atmosphere and tranquility of this magic 16 acre parcel of Byron Hinterlands best country.

The owners selected the property some 30 years ago and thoughtfully planted every rainforest tree exposing the site to both winter sun and summer sea breezes. Their children have been nurtured by nature's best and have left the nest - it's time to down size and sell up.

The long tree lined drive delivers you to a neat as a pin 4 bedroom home featuring cathedral ceilings, wide shady decks, polished timber floor and views everywhere.

Enjoy a picnic on the banks of your own crystal creek or take the short drive down the hill to Byron's world class beaches or enjoy a coffee in Bangalow just 5 minutes away.

In a nice little twist, the winner of the People's Choice Award in the 2010 Byron Arts Classic competition was Rosie Gordon who won the same award ten years ago – for her charcoal artwork entitled 'Boy and His Father'. Rosie was also indispensable in the organisation of the event as assistant to Tess Cullen.

You may be interested to know that the family of Georgia Enter, who was arrested for calling a police officer 'dude', fought the law and won. The police backed down, withdrew all charges and erased Georgia's name from their computer. The family had the offer of a barrister from Sydney to defend Georgia for free, so incensed was he at the actions of the police. See Jane Enter's letter on human rights on page 12.

Our photographer managed to forget the Bruns Woodchop OH&S ring rules and left her sensible shoes at home. Doh! Bouquets to the Australian Geographic photographer who lent our snapper a nice pair of covered toe slip-ons.

A reader asks: 'Can someone tell me why cars have the best view of the main beach in Byron Bay? How about simple beach style restaurants, cafes, bars, good sounds and the stunning view for, er, actual people? You know, like they do in the rest of the world. I'm sure the cars don't like being left out in the sun all day, especially with their windows closed. Maybe the way to change this gobsmackingly gormless situation is to launch a movement against "Cruelty to Cars". Council might pounce on that.'

With more than one million mobile phones sold in the leadup to Christmas, Australia Post is urging Australians to dig up their old mobile phones and take advantage of MobileMuster, a free mobile phone recycling service offered through its outlets. Australia Post spokesperson Ruth Snelman says there are about 16 million old mobile phones sitting in people's cupboards and drawers. Old batteries can be recycled to make new batteries, circuit boards include small amounts of gold and silver that can be used to make jewellery, and handset casings include plastics that can be used to make fence posts. 'The gold recovered from 16 million mobile phones could be used to create nearly 24,000 wedding bands,' says Ruth. For more information visit www.mobilemuster.com.au.

Australian astronomers are hot on the trail of 'dark energy' – a mysterious entity that is causing the universe to expand faster and faster. Professor Michael Drinkwater (University of Queensland) is leading a team studying dark energy with the Anglo-Australian Telescope in NSW. Their project is called WiggleZ.

A reader saw this as a bridge-building possibility until the authorities freaked out: 'A senior official from the Iranian football federation has offered to resign after he accidentally sent a New Year's greeting to Israel's football team. Israeli football officials say they could not believe their eyes when they saw the greeting. However they decided to make the most of it and replied with similar good wishes to, in their words, "all the good people of Iran" and ending the message with an email wink.' – BBC.

The 9th Annual Australian Air Guitar Champs (AAGC) are up and running. Visit www.airguitaraustralia.com and find out how to enter – the closest heat is at the Jubilee Hotel in Brisbane. You could be the next Eric Clapton of the imagination.

Grail Quest

Introduction to Grail Quest (an 8-week course) which is the opening term of the two year part-time foundation course.

GRAIL QUEST offers a modern form of adult education based on the work of Rudolf Steiner. Through a deepened understanding of the inner workings of the world and ourselves, inner development and soul transformation are brought about. This in turn leads to an enhanced capacity to transform the outer world.

The course consists of lectures, discussions and workshops which are expanded through artistic experiences in music, painting, sculpture, story telling, speech, drama, craft and the new art of eurythmy. No previous artistic experience is necessary. The emphasis of the course is away from competition and is focused on individual growth. The course aims to teach through the heart, hand and mind and to bring our efforts to fruition through love of the deed. GRAIL QUEST is also the prerequisite for the Steiner Teacher Training programme.

...a journey into the Spiritual Science of Rudolf Steiner...

Some of the themes explored in the course are:

The Quest for Meaning. The Elements. The Temperaments. Sacred Geometry. The Origins of the Earth & Humanity. The Evolution of Consciousness. Christology. Mystery Schools & Mystery Centres. The Birth of Modern Consciousness in the Renaissance. The Search for the Holy Grail. Life Phases: an Exploration of Biography.

8 week Introductory Course: $600
