Children rescued from floodwaters

Police and emergency services workers are being praised following a daring rescue which saved two young children from a vehicle washed away by floodwaters at Upper Wilsons Creek.

According to a police report, at about 11:15pm on Sunday a 42-year-old woman and her two children, aged six and four, were in a Mitsubishi Outlander when it was washed off a causeway about one kilometre north of the intersection of Wilsons Creek Road and Upper Wilsons Creek Road.

The mother managed to get out of the vehicle; however, the Outlander was washed away by floodwaters before she could remove her son and daughter.

Police and other emergency services attended, but due to the height of the floodwaters, it was impossible for vehicles to cross safely.

A local resident helped to string a rope across the causeway, enabling a senior constable and two Volunteer Rescue Association (VRA) personnel to cross on foot. The resident then led the police officer and VRA workers to the vehicle, which was trapped downstream about three metres from the river bank in extremely fast flowing water.

A VRA worker climbed onto the Outlander's roof and removed the four-year-old boy and six-year-old girl via the sunroof.

The children were then passed from officer to officer until they reached the safety of the river bank.

Acting Northern Region Commander, Detective Superintendent Max Mitchell, praised the police officer and other rescuers for their bravery and quick-thinking.

'The senior constable, VRA workers and the local resident worked together to ensure the incident didn't end in tragedy,' Det Supt Mitchell said.

'I'd like to congratulate the police officer for his actions, and also say thanks to all emergency services teams involved in the operation.'

Looking through the Voyeur

The Voyeur Byron's Fashion Exposé, a fundraiser for the Byron Community Centre, packed the house full of local fashionistas last Friday night. The event showcased 11 local designers, and 30 models rocked down the catwalk in uniquely Byron Bay based fashions. It was not all fashion; Circus Arts, local musicians, DJ Grant Smillie and the afterparty at La La Land made it a fantastic night out. This year's face of Voyeur Byron Bay is 23 year old local model Chloe Malouf-Dowse, pictured left. Pictured centre is Ellie, wearing this year's winning outfit from Muther Of All Things. Amanda Bennett, pictured right, is wearing an IDIS Design, who was this year's winning Voyeur Designer. For more photos visit offmyfacebook.com.au/ Photo Jeff 'Fashion Faux Pas' Dawson.

Ballina MP Don Page is taking residents' concerns about the proposed Plan of Management for Brunswick Heads crown land to the NSW lands minister and the Ombudsman.

The Land and Property Management Authority (LPMA) exhibition of the plan resulted in a public rally against many of the proposals.

'The concerns related to the effects of the proposed development on the amenity of Brunswick Heads and the residents of the Terrace and Massy Greene caravan parks,' Mr Page said in a press release. 'There were also concerns about certain information that was not included in the publicly displayed documents.

'I have written to the Minister for Lands and the NSW Ombudsman raising these concerns. I am awaiting responses to my representations.'

The information omitted from the public display documents included details about the proposed accommodation development and details about the mean high water mark and setback measurements used to determine the realignment of boundaries.

Organisers say over 200 concerned people turned up to the rally on Sunday September 19. Mayor Jan Barham and Crs Di Woods and Tom Tabart spoke at the rally and all expressed their grave concerns at the LPMA's

Council staff 'double standard' over tree removal

Hans Lovejoy

A stoush over the removal of trees came to a head last week after council staff – assisted by police – removed three trees from a Suffolk Park nature-strip.

David Hancock and Gabriel Rosati claim that despite approval for tree planting, they were asked to remove trees that they had planted in front of their property.

'A visiting building inspector advised us we were required to alter plans for the roadside cross-over after we planted five trees on the nature-strip. We had our draughtsman alter the plans and took them to council. On the August 31, 2009, the same inspector took our payment of $240.00 and signed the plans.

'A month later a letter arrived saying that only two of the trees were approved and the others had to be removed forthwith. We refused to remove the trees as we had a signed plan and receipt for it.'

Double standards

Mr Hancock claims GM Graeme Faulkner could give no rational explanation for council's decision to remove the three trees apart from vague reference to public safety.

'When I asked how Council could construe that a Cycad was safe in the streets of Mullumbimby but unsafe in Suffolk Park I again drew a blank. Cycads and Dragon trees festoon our suburb but ours have been removed for no discernable reason.'

The two say they had been building a house and had adhered to the process that it involves, including payment of all the fees.

Documents were 'whited-out'

'Later a senior compliance officer admitted to us that council had "stuffed-up", and despite our best efforts no attempt at negotiation resolved the issue. In an entirely illegal act, someone in council "whited-out" the original signature and re-presented the altered plans to us as the original. Senior Council management including the General Manager have acted like a cartel of schoolyard bully-boys,' says Ms Rosati.

Faulkner responds

Byron Shire Council general manager Graeme Faulkner said numerous requests to remove the trees on the Suffolk Park nature strip had been issued since the beginning of the year. He said the dragon trees and a cycad were planted as mature trees by the resident on Council managed land and were not Council approved.

'The original approval was issued for a driveway crossover as per the application. The five plants and a letterbox were not approved.' He claims three of the plants were assessed as unsuitable under Council's 'Planting and Landscaping on Footpaths and Nature Strips within Road Reserves and Drainage Easements' policy.

'The combination of height and spiny leaves could cause injury to people walking or cycling on the paths,' Mr Faulkner said. 'In order to retain the two grass plants a second approval was issued.'

'White-out' was to distinguish plans

Mr Faulkner said Council provided a second stamped amended plan in order to distinguish between the plans approved and to clarify that the two grass trees were now able to be retained.

'Unfortunately the unapproved trees were not removed by the residents and resulted in a fine being issued and Council removing the trees,' he said.

plans for Brunswick Heads. Crs Cameron and Richardson also attended the rally as did Greens MLC Ian Cohen.

'The Government's proposal for upmarket tourist accommodation to meet an unclarified industry demand defies the fact that the commercial sector will no doubt fill this gap,' said Cr Barham. 'The real priority for the state should be to retain affordable holidays for the people of NSW and camping and caravan sites are the preferred option, not upmarket cabins.'

Local resident of 80 years, D'Arcy O'Meara, spoke of his disbelief that a state government turned developer could steal public parkland from a community and turn it into a tourist resort.

Mr O'Meara said five generations of his family have enjoyed the natural pleasures of the Terrace Reserve but if the state government goes ahead with these plans the reserve will become a fenced and gated resort for fee paying tourists.

Local resident Patricia Warren spoke of her constant battle for over ten years with the LPMA and its ongoing presentation of inaccurate maps.

Among her other concerns was the lack of correlation between what was on public exhibition and maps used by Council in order to consider the proposed compulsory land acquisitions.

Ms Warren believes it is critical that public access along the foreshores be kept outside the operational area of the caravan parks otherwise it will be lost forever.

She also noted the failure to retain 30 per cent of the park for long term sites.

Kayaking for Pakistan's flood victims

Victoria Cosford

Two local men will shortly be paddling 700 kilometers for charity.

Managing Director of Byron Bay Dive Centre Perry Bartholomew, 33, and store manager Ken Eyles, 35, will be leaving Main Beach bound for Sydney on Sunday October 24 in a bid to raise awareness and funds for the flood victims in Pakistan.

They anticipate it will take them up to a fortnight to cover the distance, allowing for periodic stops and overnight camping on the beach along the way.

Floods are 'worst in history'

Ken was inspired to do something after hearing reports that the recent Pakistani floods were amongst the worst in history.

He donated straight away over the phone, but he wanted to do something more, so he came up with the idea of the paddle.

Friends Perry and Ken consider themselves 'relatively experienced' as far as kayaking goes, but say they have never done any distance like this before.

'We have been training pretty much every second day,' said Perry, 'paddling around Julian Rocks and to Bruns. The best training is to just get out there and paddle.'

While the men hope to finish the trip within 14 days, they are aware that unforeseen variables such as bad weather may hold things up.

'If we get a week of massive southerlies it will put the paddle in jeopardy,' says Ken.

Equipment for the journey has to be light, and the men will be carrying small one-man tents they can tie off the kayaks, safety gear, cooking gear, as well as dehydrated food, some canned food and fishing lines in the hope of catching their own fish.

Through Red Cross Australia they have established a website for online donations; out of their goal of $5000 the men have so far raised about $2200.

There are great prizes for everyone who donates, which is a great incentive, according to Perry.

Anyone who wishes to make a donation can do so by checking out the following link: www.everydayhero.com.au/ken_perry/

Festival site goes on exhibition

Plans for the festival site at Yelgun go on public exhibition this coming Thursday.

Planning NSW is assessing the proposal by Billinudgel Property Pty Ltd under the controversial part 3A of the Environmental Planning and Assessment Act, which covers major developments.

According to Planning NSW advertising, the proposal includes use of the site for 'educational and outdoor events with associated camping; water and wastewater infrastructure; a cultural centre; a conference centre and associated accommodation; and a comprehensive vegetation management plan.'

Among the outdoor events would be the Splendour in the Grass festival.

The public exhibition will run from October 7 until November 19 and environmental assessment (EA) documents will be available at Byron Shire Council offices, Byron Bay Library, and Summerland Credit Union at Ocean Village Shopping Centre, Ocean Shores.

A copy of the EA will be online by going at http://majorprojects.planning.nsw.gov.au/page/

Written submissions can be made to Department of Planning, GPO Box 39, Sydney NSW 2001, or fax (02) 9228 6540. Submissions can also be made online. See more in the advertisement on page 16.

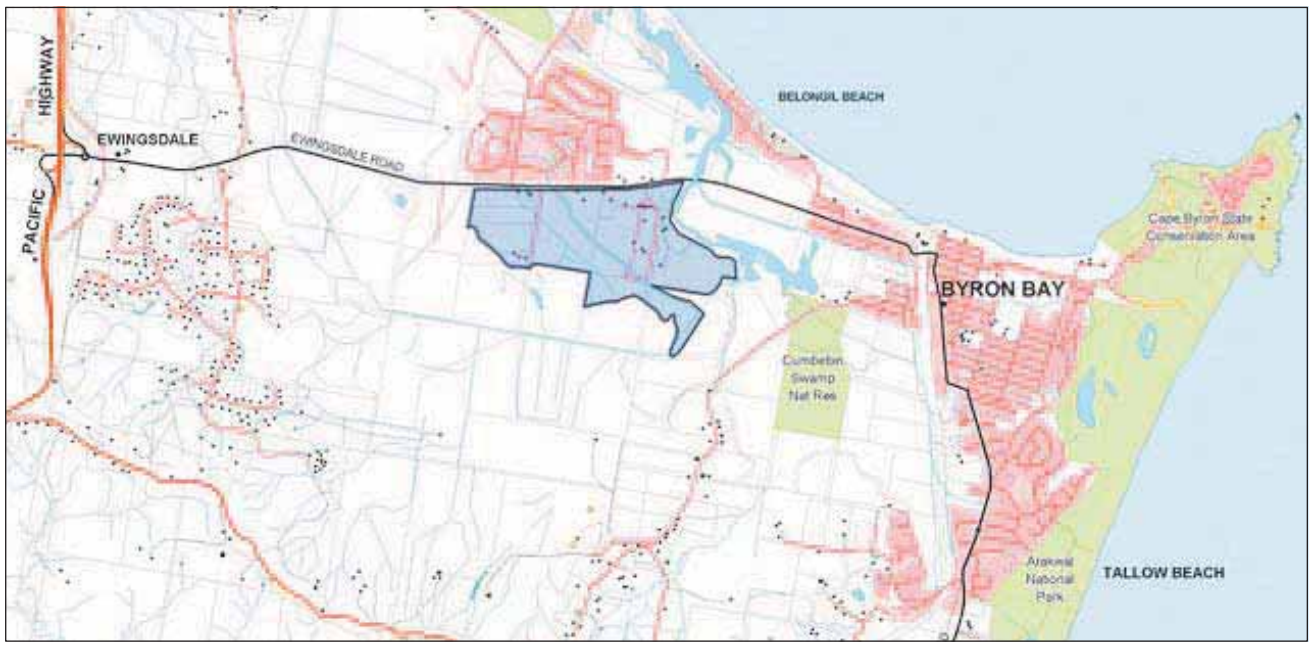
New Byron Bay urban development Q&A



Hans Lovejoy

A new urban development is in the works for Byron Bay.

The West Byron Urban Land Release Area is a 100 hectare site located 2.5 kilometres west of Byron Bay, across the road from the Arts and Industry Park.

According to the owners of the site – Byron Bay West Landowners Association (BBWLA) – the land has been identified as a potential urban land release area for about 25 years.

Representative of BBWLA, Carylon Swindell, answered some questions for the future development.

Your website says 'most of this land is owned by the Byron Bay West Landowners Association.' Can you please be specific with names?

The majority of the landowners are long-term Byron Shire residents who own 97 per cent of the subject study area. The landowners have appointed a management team, led by Stuart Murray of Crighton Properties, to manage the development on their behalf.

In no particular order the owners are Tony Smith (Byron Shire local), Alan Heathcote (Byron Shire local), Richard Sykes (Melbourne based), Crighton Properties (Mid North Coast and Central Coast based), David O'Connor (Byron Shire local), Garry McDonald (Byron Shire local), Warren Simmons (Byron Shire local), Kevin Rogers (long-term Byron investor).

Your website says you are in phase two of the State Significant Site Study. When will you predict that it will be ready for public display? Is there any comment in the findings so far?

It will be up to the Department of Planning to determine the schedule of public display of the State Significant Site Study.

However, we anticipate being in a position to share information regarding current draft plans with the community outside of the statutory process in coming weeks. We will place paid advertising to inform the community when this occurs.

My understanding is that the DA was rejected from Council's draft LEP because of growth management considerations. The case was then taken to the NSW minister. Is this correct?

No. There has never been a DA submitted to Council. BBWLA initially sought to work solely with Council to commence the planning process through rezoning.

Because the land is identified as part of the Far North Coast Regional Strategy and meets the guidelines for consideration as a State Significant Site, the BBWLA chose to initiate the study process by making an application to the Department.

Council is not being excluded from the planning process. Council's adopted policies (e.g. affordable housing, biodiversity, economic development) are being considered, and Council's views on planning and housing outcomes sought.

We are also required to take all State and regional guidelines and policies into consideration as well.

We are committed to ensuring that the process adheres to the letter and the spirit of all legislation and policies appropriate to our work.

What reassurances can you give the public that traffic, for example, will not become an even bigger problem than it currently is with this new construction?

The land owners are committed to creating more affordable housing options with the highest possible social and environmental sustainability outcomes.

Detailed studies and expert analysis in these areas will be a critical part of the master planning process and traffic management will be a key factor in the master planning process.

I couldn't locate the actual plans on your website – I understand you are hoping to develop residential homes and a retirement home. Is this correct? How many homes, for example? Will there also be commercial development?

This sort of detail would be determined in a master-planning phase which is not yet occurring. We will consult with the community when this phase occurs.

Are you aware of any active opposition to the development? Are there any supporters? if so who?

We are aware that there are concerns with development on the site, some are opposed to it, but many are concerned with seeing the quality of the outcome.

We will continue to actively engage with the community at each stage of the planning for the site to determine the precise nature of the concerns and to address those as best as possible.

Draft policy riles festivals, business

Hans Lovejoy

A draft events policy put forward by Cr Basil Cameron will most likely be amended after it came under fire from festival organisers and the business community this week.

Originally the document appeared aimed at large scale festivals, however Cr Cameron told The Echo the proposed amendments remove the draft clauses that refer to 'large' events such as music festivals. 'It is likely that further amendments to the draft will be made at next week's meeting,' he added.

The draft policy's main points included not granting festivals that exceed 16,500 persons per day, and only allowing two major events to be held in the Shire per calendar year.

It also suggests not to allow festivals to be carried out on land that would be inundated in a one in a 100 year storm.

The policy was also proposed to be part of the LEP, something which Peter Noble from the Blues Festival claims will make it almost impossible to amend. 'Council's efforts are an attempt to enshrine in law the amendments so they cannot be changed by future councils – or even by the relevant state government minister without a significant process by changing laws in the future. Yes, this is not just a policy we are looking at here – it is potentially unrepealable.'

Byron United position

Byron United Vice President Ed Ahern says 'Our board suggests that the Events Policy should be included in the Tourism Management Plan, which is continuing to be reviewed by the Tourism Advisory Committee. Events and Festivals are fundamental to tourism in Byron Shire. The inclusion of the Events Policy in the LEP is unworkable and should not be considered.

'The suggestion in the policy that only two major events are held in Byron Shire annually with a limit of 16,500 patrons is not acceptable and discriminatory as far as our major event organisers are concerned, bearing in mind the considerable investment they have made in this Shire.

'The future viability of their organisations and many other businesses will be in doubt. The loss of Splendour in the Grass this year has taken approximately $20 million out of our community and we have seen a number of businesses close as a result of this move.'

Mr Noble claims the draft policy was formed without any community consultation. 'If you are involved in The Arts, Tourism, Culture in any way – or just care about justice – be mad, in fact be enraged about this policy.'

Council will be voting on the draft policy this Thursday.

Fantastic Fox lights up holidays

The Byron Bay Theatre company have been working hard these school holidays with a cast of 40 local youth to produce a Roald Dahl classic.

A number of local artists, including costume designer Tunja Lee, have volunteered endless hours of their time to the production. The play is an adaptation of the classic tale of a peaceful family of foxes having their underground home invaded by three mad farmers: Bogus, Bunce and Bean.

Fantastic Mr Fox opens on Wednesday morning and runs thorugh to Saturday, with two shows daily at 11am and 2pm. at the Mullumbimby Civic Centre. Tickets available at Mullumbimby Bookshop, Barebones Bangalow and Byron Toy Kingdom, or at the door which opens half an hour before show time.

Local with the X Factor

Victoria Cosford

A local boy has made it through to the top ten finalists in the popular national television talent show The X Factor.

Sixteen year old Trinity College student Mitchell Smith is a self-taught guitarist and pianist who writes love songs in the vein of Jack Johnson, according to his step-mother Caitlan.

'Music is in his family background', she told The Echo.

'His great grandfather was a famous American jazz musician.' She said that he had been thrown into the school choir and just loved it.

What he is loving now is the attention. 'He's got a huge following, especially from the girls', Caitlan said.

'He got mobbed by a bunch of 12 girls last Sunday at the live show in Sydney.'

Mitchell, who is in Year 10, is currently living in Sydney for the duration of the finals season and will be tutored in the house.

'Im very proud – I'm extremely proud', said Caitlan.

Wetland walk needs more work

Victoria Cosford

Soon visitors and locals in the Byron CBD who are seeking a peaceful sanctuary within strolling distance will have one nearby.

The Cumbebin wetland walk near the markets commenced ten years ago but has been left incomplete due to funds drying up.

Byron Environment Centre (BEC) and Cumbebin Wetland Trust treasurer Sharon Curry told The Echo that a team of volunteers will be working on the project for four days from October 22, weather permitting. They hope to complete the project by late October.

Five boards need to be replaced, the left hand fork of the boardwalk repaired and a closed seating area created, she told The Echo.

In addition signage will be fixed up, showing people the endangered species in the area.

In 2000 the BEC obtained funding for the project although it took two years to get it up and running, requiring as they did permission from the Arakwal people as well as planning approval.

'We ran out of funding because by the time we started building everything cost more', Sharon said, 'For ten years we've been planting trees, allowing regeneration to come back.

'There were so many weeds, and rubbish in the soil. We're proud of what we've done so far, but now we need funds for maintenance.'

BEC is hoping for a Community Building Grant from the government and meanwhile relies heavily on volunteers and donations.

Meanwhile, donations to the project can be made through the BEC website www.byronenvironmentcentre.asn.au

Sharing hope through Transplant Games

Touted by many and especially his family as 'The Best Chef in the World', Greg McQueen only gained his unofficial title as the result of a gift from a stranger.

Not long after Greg McQueen's last child was born late in 1992, the diabetes that had been part of his life from age seven took its toll on Gregs and he suffered renal failure which put him on the list for a transplant.

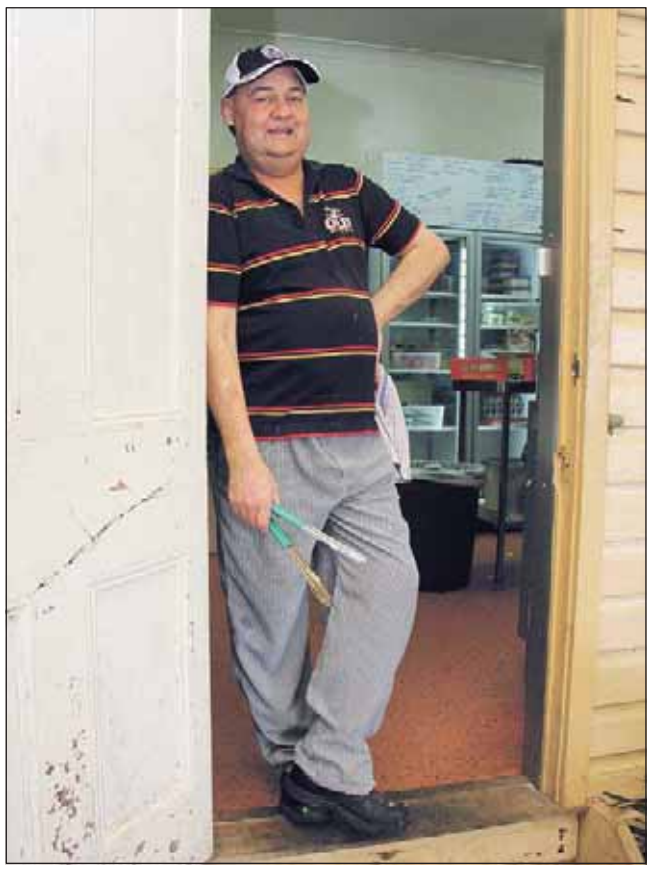
'It was terrible,' says Greg. 'I was unable to travel away from the dialysis machine.

'I would spend five hours on dialysis every second day while working a full time job, during a time when my wife Angela and I had three children under the age of five.'

Greg was on the list for eight months before being given the gift of life when he was the recipient of a kidney/pancreas transplant.

Greg was in hospital on and off for a further three months after the surgery due to complications, but since then he hasn't looked back.

Greg, who lives in Brunswick Heads and is the chef at the Billinudgel Hotel, feels that the transplant has given him a life that he wouldn't have had otherwise.



'Best Chef in the World' Greg McQueen will take time out from the Billi Pub kitchen to compete in the 12th biennial Transplant Games in Canberra this week.

'I have managed my own business as a caterer for over six years,' says Greg.

'I have been actively involved in my children's sport as a coach, trainer and I have been a rugby league referee and had various admin responsibilities within the local club. Most importantly I have had the chance to watch my children grow up to all finish school and start out their own lives.'

Greg will joins thousands of others and celebrate his organ donation when he to Canberra this week to compete in the 12th Australian Transplant Games.

The Games provide living proof of the success of transplantation and encourage all Australians to discuss organ and tissue donation with their families.

Greg will be cheered on by friends and family and hundreds of other spectators and athletes celebrating the greatest gift of all.

At the games which will this year are held from October 2-10, Greg will compete in the singles and doubles in lawn bowls, ten pin bowling, 8 ball (pool) and backgammon.

Competing at the games means a lot to Greg and his family.

'It's a fantastic opportunity to meet and compete against people with similar medical backgrounds and experiences,' says Greg.

'As a long serving transplant recipient it will be good to share hope with people starting out their journey and others who have been down this path for a while.'

Organ donation is something every Australian can discuss with their families and make a difference to the 1,800 Australians on our waiting list.

For more information about the games or becoming an organ or tissue donor, visit the Transplant Australia website: www.transplant.org.au.

Schoolies volunteers to recieve free first aid training

Byron Schoolies Safety Response is hoping again to recruit volunteers for one of Byron's biggest calendar events.

Schoolies HUB will be open 24/7 for 16 days and volunteers will be rostered on for shifts of four hours around the clock.

Last year 66 local volunteers worked the Schoolies HUB along with assistance from the Red Frogs and also local organisation YWAM (Youth With A Mission). This year the aim is to find 100 local volunteers who would like to give some of their time to the HUB.

The HUB is a large marquee, supplied by Byron Shire Council, that will be placed in Main Beach Park. Volunteers who sign up before November will have an opportunity to receive free training in First Aid.

'We believe the offer of free certificate qualifications to this year's volunteers is a great incentive and will also ensure that any young visitors that find themselves in trouble will have qualified vollies there to help them,' says HUB's Nicqui Yazdi.

The Schoolies HUB recruitment drive kicks off on Monday October 11 with a special information evening in the function room at the Byron Bay Brewery at 6pm.

For more information contact Schoolies HUB Coordinator, Nicqui Yazdi on 0402 0131 77 or email byronschooliessafetyresponse@yahoo.com.au.

Are humans essential?

I'm looking forward to reading Tim Flannery's new book Here On Earth. It's a naff title but, judging by Flannery's interview with Kerry O'Brien on The 7.30 Report, it contains some interesting arguments in favour of humans surviving.

Flannery reckons we will get over the climate change hurdle – probably like some desperate steeplechase horse stumbling into the shrubbery on the last bend.

In pursuit of his arguments, Flannery looks at different takes on evolution: reductionist approaches by Charles Darwin and Richard Dawkins and wholistic overviews from Alfred Russell Wallace and James Lovelock. He believes that we need to learn from evolutionary history in order for our civilisation [sic] to survive. Learning from any sort of history would be a good start, I reckon. Humanity's selective memory tends to screen out the lessons of, say, Easter Island or an endless series of wars. Clive Ponting's 1991 book, A Green History of the World, delineates our amnesia in depressing detail.

Flannery is more of an optimist. He even sees the human race as essential to the planet's functioning. He told O'Brien that if humanity disappeared 'we'd see a cascade of extinctions because we and the works we do are all that stand between extinctions of a whole lot of animals in this area and plants, and their survival. So, we have become indispensable and we'll become increasingly so, and I think if we look far enough out and see if we can imagine a humanity working within the Gaian system, we can actually sort of nudge the system towards more productive and more stable and sustainable outcomes, because we – in a sense, we are the intelligence of the planet.'

This strikes me as a rather human-centric view of the planet, especially so from a scientist who should have an idea of our insignificance in the scheme of things. It is in tune with the religious view that our intelligence requires us to be custodians, as if the bacteria couldn't get along without us. It is perhaps an earnest wish of our species, just as we as individuals avoid confronting the inevitability of the 'linked, never-ending dance of death', as Herman Hesse so encouragingly described it.

There would be some extinctions, granted, the number depending on how quickly we disappeared. Our livestock would be whittled away by predators – good pickings for the dingoes – and some toxic disasters would take out other biota. And yet I think Gaia – Lovelock's controversial hypothesis of the Earth as a self-regulating system – would get by just fine without us. She'd survive the loss of Paris Hilton and Woolworths and get on with evolving some interesting new lifeforms to fill the 'gap'.

Face it, Humanity, Gaia's just not that into you. There are only 5,400 species of mammals and about 400,000 species of beetles. She's into bugs, OK?

More challenges ahead for Julia

Julia Gillard can afford to be reasonably satisfied with the first week of the rest of her government.

She might have lost a procedural vote of no real consequence (although The Australian seemed to regard it as an event only marginally less devastating than the floods in Pakistan) but in general her troops stuck together and she managed to open up a crack in the opposition.

Peter Slipper insists that he promised nothing at all in return for Labor's support for his election as deputy speaker; well, having seen the battering his old foe Alex Somlyay received during his own negotiations for the position, he would, wouldn't he. But Slippery Pete, as he is now universally known, has form: he ratted on the National Party to join the Libs and has since shown an insatiable appetite for the lurks and perks associated with his job.

And the mere fact that he was prepared to accept nomination and then defeat the choice of his own side suggests that his commitment to the cause of Tony Abbott is less than total. The embarrassment caused by his elevation is reward enough in itself for Gillard, but it would not be surprising if there was some more tangible quid pro quo involved further down the track.

But for the moment it does not appear that Gillard will need one in the near future. It is true that, since Abbott reneged on his original agreement, when Harry Jenkins, rather than Slipper, is in the chair, her theoretical majority on the floor of the house is just one. But it needs to be remembered that on the crucial matters of votes of confidence and the guarantee of supply Bob Katter is also committed to abstention, if not support; this raises the figure to two or three, and the Western Australian Tony Crook cannot be counted as rock solid for Abbott either.

So there is a bit of a buffer, and it is likely to remain: if Abbott is serious about trying to woo the independents to his own side his hairy-chested, ferocious, take-no-prisoners approach is precisely the wrong way to go about it. Assuming party discipline holds rather better on the government side than it so far has on the opposition, Gillard's survival is not an immediate issue.

> If Abbott is trying to woo the independents his take-no-prisoners approach is the wrong way to go about it.
> by Mungo MacCallum

But her legislative program certainly is. Even last week there were clear warnings that the crossbenchers not only had minds of their own, but that they were ready and eager to exploit their temporary power bases whenever the opportunity arose. Andrew Wilkie's articulate and passionate denunciation of Australian's kneejerk participation in the Coalition of the Willing and its reckless and illegal invasion of Iraq and his consequent rejection of the Afghanistan adventure was matched only by Adam Bandt's thoughtful and heartfelt plea for serious action on climate change.

These are two areas where the government is both vulnerable and sensitive and which are likely to grow in importance during the life of the parliament.

Afghanistan is the more manageable because although Tony Abbott appears to have abandoned strict bipartisanship with his call for more troops, at least he and Gillard appear to agree that withdrawal, as demanded by Wilkie, is not an option. Unless and until the increasing rate of Australian casualties becomes a public issue on the something approaching the scale of Vietnam 40 years ago, the serious arguments will be about the size of our contribution, not about its rationale.

But climate change is more problematic. Since the Greens forced Gillard to take the issue off the backburner and put it back front and centre where it belongs, the debate about putting a price on carbon (which does not necessarily mean a tax – will someone please tell Tony Abbott) has already replaced the National Broadband Network as the focus of parliamentary debate and the major difference between the parties.

Technically Abbott is correct when he accuses Gillard of breaking an election promise, although the postponement of action on carbon was never presented as the core of Labor's re-election platform – it was always something forced upon the government by a recalcitrant senate and political circumstances. But there is no doubt that the proposed inter-party committee on the subject makes a lot more sense than Gillard's people's assembly, even if Abbott has forbidden his own colleagues from taking part.

Given that the need for a carbon price has been strongly restated by the treasury and is now openly espoused by the large majority of the business community as both good policy and good economics, Abbott's stance is not necessarily a winning move, and it would be surprising if some in his own party (and not just Malcolm Turnbull) were not already telling him so. And not just in Australia; for his first junket Abbott is in England to talk to the British Prime Minister David Cameron, a Tory who campaigned on the need for action on climate change.

But Abbott being Abbott, he is not going to be persuaded; if he eventually does make yet another backflip on the subject, it will be for reasons of urgent opportunism rather than logic. For the moment mindless opposition suits his program better.

Gillard, meanwhile, is in Brussels talking to 43 assorted leaders; once again climate change will be high on the agenda. And on her way to Brussels she dropped in on Kabul, apparently to see if president Hamid Karzai could give her any tips for the debate on his unhappy country. Or perhaps it was just to collect a few thoughts on political survival under cruel and unusual circumstances.

Last week will have brought some reassurance, but the fascinating thing about the situation which now prevails in Canberra is its unpredictability. Thankfully we have the footie finals, the test cricket and the Commonwealth Games to bring us back to normality during the break. Now that's real action. Politics, shmolitics.

In the news – pokie players are to be fingerprinted and limited as to how much money they can deposit into the machines.

This system should go international in stock exchanges.

It wasn't the pokie player gamblers who got us into the global credit crisis.

There should be 'Do you have a gambling problem?' signs all over the stock exchange wall too. I'd like to see that.

Cramp free

Watching the news on TV the other night I saw a story concerning people suffering from cramps. I used to suffer from cramps but, after regularly taking magnesium in tablet form, I don't any more.

Please don't take my word for it, speak to a naturopath or health care worker. I hope those who do get cramps don't suffer from cramps any more.

Worth a try

Many years ago I viewed popular singer Tom Jones on stage, dodging panties being thrown to him by hysterical fans, with an implied message that only the most naive would fail to understand. I was a trifle envious at the time, might I say, for no young women in my experience had treated me in such a manner. I suppose that I lacked the vocal skill and physical attraction of Tom Jones.

Whatever, this memory was brought back to me in recent weeks when I noted that the practice of throwing panties had been revived in Mullumbimby. Evidently quite a few friendly local ladies were expressing their admiration for a contentious development by attaching their very personal gear to a safety fence in Station Street.

As a one-time marketng man, might I suggest to these enthusiastic ladies that they just might have greater success if they simply pinned a brief note to the garment, listing a phone number, and a brief message: 'Woolies, I love you.'

Regrettably, though the site workers would be flattered by these invitations, I guess that their existing female partners would be unlikely supporters of positive response on their part. Yet, it's worth a try.

Supporting East Timor kids

This is an open letter to thank all the wonderful families and businesses who have donated to the East Timor swimming education program. The program ran over July/August at the Prime Minister's residential pool in Dili, providing children, mums and bubs with a fantastic resource, great water quality and security.

Every day the children (orphans, sourced from Childfund) turned up for class often an hour early, showing their commitment to the learning of swimming strokes – and for free, thanks to the Byron Bay community!

Each child was a joy to teach and through demonstration, they learnt the basics of swimming for life.

It was amazing to see each child progress in such a short time. The next planned trip will be in November.

The challenge now is to secure a pool to teach swimming education programs in Dili, the capital, to provide the kids with ongoing support. We have started the Academy of Swimming Education East Timor – ASEET, as a tax deductable, non-profit association and invite you to become a member. Contact me for more details at mfisk101@live.com or 0408 833 988.

Clearing things up

Lyn Diehm (Letters, September 28), your claim to be part of a 'silent majority' that desires a Woolworths in Mullumbimby is eminently refutable. In fact you are not silent, or a majority, otherwise 1. you would not have written a letter, and 2. we would not have a popularly elected council that rejected the proposal when put to them.

While I respect your right to hold your opinion, I wonder if you afford that consideration to others, or if in fact you do just wish we would all move away in a puff of realisation. You flirt dangerously with the concept that all anti-Woolies folk are people who were not born here. Does this mean their opinions don't count? In fact people who moved here can, and do love the place just as much as you.

Allow me to help you with the underwear and its 'mentality'. It is an example of symbolism and a useful tool to get across a message. The underwear is mildly offensive to you, but used to highlight the greater offence. This is of course the unwanted concrete box and the corporation it will contain.

I hope that helps clear it up a little for you, and gets a few thinking caps cogitating.

Off to court

I apologise to those readers who rely on me for a glimpse of what really goes on behind the froth which The Echo regards as sufficient and appropriate reportage; I've been busy trying to deal with the significance of the political mugging I recently received as the result of an unholy alliance between the Greens, the Council permanent staff and my old mate Ross Tucker, who for different reasons decided it was time to shoot the messenger.

I apologise also to the ratepayers for the strong possibility that once again they will be subsidising what to me is a very clear case of politics. The last time Council prosecuted me over illegal development (the 2000 doof party) it cost ratepayers $100,000. I never got around to checking who voted in favour of that particular prosecution, but you can bet that Ross Tucker was one of them, despite his urging (when it suits him) that Council reduce its legal costs.

In the current case the Council vote took place secretly, without any chance for me to make submissions or to comment on the well over 100 pages of stuff which the staff

(secretly) put before the councillors, and without any reasons being given by any of the councillors, they unanimously voted to hand me over to the tender mercies of the General Manager Graeme Faulkner.

The above is shocking enough, but what I've had particular difficulty in dealing with is the fact, which I now have from two impeccable sources, that the Greens profoundly regret having chosen Faulkner for GM (out of 40 applicants) and that the mood between them is tense. (I don't know why it took the Greens so long; I had him pegged very soon after I saw him in action.) What I'm saying is that leaving my fate entirely at Mr Faulkner's discretion is under the circumstances an extremely cynical act.

But of all the things which get to me it's this which goes round and round in my head: Jan Barham at that particular meeting actively set out to minimise my opportunity to speak. There was an item on the agenda that day which proposed that an unnamed rural landowner be prosecuted over illegal dwellings, but as I'd received no notification I assumed that it couldn't be me. I booked to speak on this item only in the abstract, to complain that this was carrying confidentiality to extremes. In the event the only item Jan eventually allowed me to speak on was the Roundhouse – The Echo carried a photograph of me at the lectern in its next issue. Had I known that the prosecution item involved me I would have physically prevented the meeting going ahead until I was given my procedural rights.

By the time you read this I will be in Sydney to appeal in the Land and Environment Court against orders which Mr Faulkner has now made against my property and I will have spent well over $1,000 already, without involving any lawyer. For what? Do Ross Tucker, the staff, the Greens imagine that I will go quietly to my fate?

Of course not; all they've done is lock me in to further combat. It may not cost them any money, but it will certainly cost them, that I can guarantee.

Our greatest moral issue

We are at war whether we like it or not. This is a war we just cannot afford to lose, the problem is, it is hard to realise the enemy is at our very door when we just can't see them.

This is the Great War to end all wars – the battle to reduce our carbon footprint and avoid catastrophic climate change events around the planet.

At the front line is enemy number one: us and our own addiction to energy combined with a type of apathy that infects most of us when we don't live in countries that will bear the brunt of rising sea levels or countries that will face famine and drought with changing weather patterns.

Enemy number two – the fossil fuel industry which has a reasonable argument: we cannot be concerned about the billion or so people who may face starvation around the world if we ourselves are unemployed and unable to feed our own families with a failing economy.

So what to do? First we need to know there is a war to be fought. We need to have fear, yes that's right, FEAR. It's against everything we have learned. Lack of fear now has us sitting in a group meditation, chanting holy ummms while the bombs are going off all around us, or having a group discussion about how to arrange the deckchairs on the Titanic. A rational fear that can motivate us to action, not paralyse us, is what is called for now.

We need to do it ourselves, we need to make a noise, and it needs to be loud and constant. The voice of ordinary people has been heard before; great changes on our planet were bought about by 'the people'.

The people are gathering all around the world on October 10. So far there are 4,376 events in 173 countries around the world calling for action as part of the 350.org global day of climate action. Scientists measure carbon dioxide in parts per million (ppm) and 350ppm is considered to be the number humanity needs to get below to avoid runaway climate change.

I have agreed to host an event in Byron to be held at 10am on 10/10/10 on the beach in front of the Surf Life Saving Club for one hour until 11am. We will be forming a '350' on the beach with the lighthouse as a backdrop. We ask that people bring a colourful umbrella, sarong or their surfboard – cover it with brightly colored paper or alfoil to be part of this historic photograph.

I really need your help, though. I need all the local groups who have campaigned for various issues in the past, all the landcare groups, the sustainable farming groups, the farmers market groups to send out an invitation to your people to come together on this day. We must become a single unit to make our voices heard.

Email me on rose@redros-erealty.com and I will forward you a flyer with details. For other 10/10/10 events around the world see www.350.org or call me on 0427 016 451.

Brunswick plans

Re concerns expressed over the Draft Plan of Management for Brunswick Heads Parks. I have studied the proposals on the Department website and I have spoken with Derek Sinclair, Director with Integrated Site Design.

His role has been to design the proposed alterations to the parks and I found him very helpful.

As I live on The Terrace I felt it was important to go straight to the official directly responsible for this planning and this is what I was told.

The closure of the road reserve in The Terrace is sensible because the road was originally wide enough for bullock teams going to the river to use. When such a wide road was no longer necessary the road reserve became part of the caravan park. This is the section now being offically closed and will be used for caravans and improved parking.

The entrance to the caravan park in Fingal Street where the office now is was also designated road reserve and this will now be closed.

The suggested new path on to the footbridge through Terrace Park will remove the general public away from the entrance into the caravan park. It will give safer access for wheelchairs, prams etc

Improvements are planned for all parks and as the draft plan states that Massey Greene is operating at a loss, such improvements would appear very necessary.

There is also planned a pedestrian walkway from the boat harbour along the river foreshore. At present access for the public to the foreshore is not easy or encouraged.

Anyone who would like to find out more should either speak to the Director, Derek Sinclair, or email him at dosin@i-site.com.au. It is much safer to speak with the people who have most of the responsibility for this planning rather than rely solely on other people's interpretation of the situation. I could certainly find no evidence of any planned 'land grab'.

Threats to Israel

Moammar Mashni (Letters, September 21) exaggerates in alleging that 'Israel proceeded to asphyxiate Gaza by cutting the 1.6 million Palestinians off from the rest of the world'.

There has never been a time when humanitarian supplies (food, water, clothes, medicines) have not been allowed into Gaza, even during military operations. Furthermore, most of Gaza's electricity is supplied by Israel, while hundreds of Gazans continue to be treated by Israeli doctors in Israeli hospitals.

Although Hamas won democratic elections in January 2006, it seized executive power from the PA in a violent coup in July 2007 and stepped up rocket attacks against Israeli civilians, triggering the restrictions of which Mashni complains.

Since then, Hamas has imposed a reign of terror on the Gazan population in general and its critics in particular.

Gareth Smith (Letters, September 21) is similarly uninformed.

He says 'Sderot was built on the ashes of Najd after its 620 Palestinian inhabitants were expelled on May 13, 1948', yet neglects to mention the fear generated beforehand by the announced threat of an invasion of Israel by Arab forces. The invasion began on May 15 and was completely illegal.

The premier historian of those times, Benny Morris, noted: 'It cannot be stressed too strongly that … the events cumulatively amounting to the Palestinian Arab exodus occurred in wartime and were a product, direct and indirect, of that war – a war that the Palestinians started. The threat of battle and battle itself were the immediate backdrop to the various components of the exodus.'

The ultimate cause of the war, he said, was 'the intention of the Palestinian leadership and irregulars and, later, of most of the Arab states' leaders and armies in launching the hostilities in November-December 1947 and in invading Palestine in May 1948 to destroy the Jewish state and, possibly, the Yishuv (the Jewish community in Palestine) itself.'

Nature of bullies

I agree with the gist of WB Crompton's letter re Jai and the 'truth' about his death, except where he writes 'strong kids have been bullying weak kids since Cain and Abel.' I think the writer did not correctly choose the words he was using here. Strong kids do not have the need nor desire to push other kids around without serious justification.

It is only some mentally and emotionally weak kids who have enough pent-up aggression and feelings of inferiority to want to humiliate and physically abuse other kids in order to have that fleeting 'high' of superiority and control.

They like to target the intelligent, the artistic, the popular, the foreigners, the fragile, lonely ones if no-one else is about. This is not strength; merely aggression.

At school, where subjects are graded, they are usually found in the lower grades. Some get hooked if not confronted quickly and continue their aggressive addiction into adulthood where many of them find they have what it takes to succeed in the corporate world and are duly found and guided by 'big men'. In the good old days when it really was a 'mans' world' bullies abounded in big and small business and government and though times may be a-changing you can be sure bullies and big men everywhere will not be replaced without, predictably, a fight.

So many markets

Regardless of the merits of who runs the markets, with the extra Byron market there are now 37 markets every month within a three-quarter hour's drive from Byron (40km), ten of them in Byron alone plus at least ten special event ones during the year. When I started to have stalls at the markets in 1994 there were five or six! Besides, in Mullumbimby, one on Friday, one on Saturday and Byron on Sunday.

Is it any wonder that it has become hardly worthwhile? As a tourist would you go to a market every day? A classic case of killing the goose that laid the golden egg.

Pesticides under review at meeting

Jo Immig

Do you really know what's in your rainwater tank? While some regions have obvious pollution sources like big factories belching out smoke, people don't often associate the use of pesticides in agriculture as an industrial activity that also pollutes the environment and can harm our health.

The National Toxics Network (NTN) and the Environmental Defender's Office Northern Rivers (EDO) often receive calls from people distressed about pesticides (which includes insecticides, fungicides and herbicides) being sprayed near them. They want to know what their rights are and why it's 'acceptable' that pesticide pollution is allowed to occur at all, even when levels are apparently 'safe' according to regulators.

As land use patterns change and there's more intermingling of people and pesticide-intensive agriculture, these problems are bound to occur.

Desktop audit

In response to these concerns, the EDO and NTN have carried out a desktop audit of the pesticides used by different industries in the Northern Rivers to give a snapshot of the pesticide load in the region. Where possible we've sought the assistance of the industries in question to provide an accurate picture.

Agricultural industries such as macadamias, sugar cane, tea tree, stone fruit and forestry, all use synthetic pesticides and fertilisers, unless they are producing organically. Herbicides are also widely used in the region for weed management.

Disturbing discovery

While not unique to this region or our agricultural industries, it was disturbing to discover that some of the most dangerous pesticides, many of which are banned overseas, are used right here. These include endosulfan, atrazine, 2,4-D, carbendazim, carbofuran, dimethoate, paraquat and parathion.

Awareness about the negative impacts of pesticides is growing and people are choosing organic produce and sourcing local food through farmer's markets where a direct relationship of trust can be built with those who grow the food and look after the land.

There's also an avalanche of scientific studies now pointing to concerns about the long-term dangers of pesticide exposure.

Most disturbing of all, studies now that show babies are born 'pre-polluted' with hundreds of chemicals, including pesticides.

Recent research has found links between pesticide exposure and ADHD as well as Parkinson's disease for instance. The hormone disrupting impacts of some pesticides are also extremely concerning because they can occur at such low levels of exposure (parts per billion) and have profound impacts on wildlife and people.

Toxic residue

Once a pesticide is sprayed it doesn't just disappear without a trace. It breaks down over time, some take longer than others, and they can also break down into more toxic elements.

Pesticides can also move 'off target' at the time of treatment as spray drift or vapour drift. Once in the air residues can be highly mobile depending on the weather conditions. Residual pesticides wash off into watercourses attached to soil particles where they can harm aquatic life and they also impact soil health, which has long-term consequences for farm fertility and biodiversity.

With high rainfall in the region and numerous creeks and rivers, there's a high risk that pesticide residues are ending up in our waterways where they can have devastating impacts on fish and other aquatic creatures. Frogs are also highly susceptible to pesticide exposure.

While water supplies from reservoirs are filtered to remove pesticide residues, many people in the region (up to 30%) rely on tank water, and there's a real risk pesticide residues are finding their way into household drinking water.

Free event

A free community event Working with Nature: Ecological Restoration and Chemical Awareness in the Northern Rivers, will be held on Wednesday October 13 from 6pm to 8.30pm at the Mullumbimby Civic Hall to discuss these issues and to hear some inspiring stories from locals who have achieved great success in restoring the land without a drop of pesticide.

The free community information booklet 'Getting the Drift: A Community Guide to Pesticides Sprayed in the Northern Rivers' will also be launched at the event.

Entries now open for WetlandCare art comp

WetlandCare Australia has now launched its fourth annual National Art and Photography Competition to celebrate World Wetlands Day.

The competition, which receives entries from across Australia, is open to children and adults in both art and photography.

There are a number of categories, including NSW Catchment Management Authorities Open Art with a first prize of $1,500; Central West Catchment Management Authority Children's Art Senior with a first prize of $1,200; Murray-Darling Basin Authority Children's Art Junior with a first prize of $1,200; and NSW Department of Environment, Climate Change and Water Open Photography, with a first prize of $1,200. In addition to these major sponsors, many regional natural resource management groups and private companies are also supporting the competition.

Nicci Carter, general manager of WetlandCare Australia, says, 'The competition is an excellent opportunity for all Australians to consider the importance of wetlands and what wetlands mean to them, in this time of water shortages, drought, and other impacts of climate change.'

The theme of the competition for 2011 is Forested Wetlands: their importance and wise use. This corresponds with the United Nations theme for World Wetlands Day 2011.

Competition entry forms and further information can be obtained from WetlandCare Australia's website www.wetlandcare.com.au.

The closing date for competition entries is December 3.

The winners of the competition will be notified on December 23, 2010 and then publicly announced at an award ceremony at the CSIRO Discovery Centre in Canberra.

WetlandCare Australia describes itself as the leading Australian not for profit wetland conservation organisation, and has for over 20 years been dedicated to supporting every Australian to protect and restore our precious wetlands.

Tamsin's CD benefits kids

The welfare of children is a cause close to Tamsin Wolf's heart and as the writer and producer of children's music, she has just released a new CD, which will see ten per cent of all proceeds from the sales go to the African LEAF project.

For the Love of Kids has been a joyful project for Tamsin who says that she just loves being around kids.

Tamsin says that her seven year old son Finnian is the inspiration for much of her work but she also wants to help other children.

'The African LEAF project is a local charity that arranges sponsorship for orphaned and vulnerable children in Africa,' says Tamsin.

'They also support a kindergarten in the area and in October I will travel to Nairobi to visit the project in person.

'I will also go to Uganda to visit my long-time sponsored child through World Vision. I am very excited to have this opportunity and hope to be able to direct my help in the most practical way, after having witnessed the situation first hand.'

Anyone wishing to buy a copy of the CD can purchase it through the website www.fortheloveofkids.com.au.

Non Specs stage reunion

Jane Flower

A scene forn the first NSP production, The Bomb.

Part of Mullumbimby's colourful history during the 80s and 90s was a performing theatre group called the Non Specific Players, affectionately known as the Non Specs and NSPs. For many this group of players entertained with wild extravaganzas and sometimes more serious performances.

The NSPs was created after a group of young Mullumites, who had been performing in The Sentimental Bloke put on by the more traditional Pacific Players, decided that they had so enjoyed working together they wanted to carry on a less formal group with the freedom to create for themselves. So the new group began with just a handful of players.

Their first production was a short play called The Bomb which they performed in Lismore and Mullumbimby. Encouraged by their success, more keen players joined and over the years the group swelled. People who thought that they would never perform fell under the NSP spell and took part in many colourful productions.

Now with a larger group the NSPs began meeting regularly, every Tuesday night, at the Mullum Civic Hall. The next full length production was The Three Secrets, an environmental play about a clean versus dirty town. Taken from a script for youngsters, the NSPS added their own blend of great acting, inventive stage sets and props.

One of the later productions had the whole front of a plane crashing through the wall at the Civic Hall. There was even dancing on the wing!

In what was probably the most professional production The Alien Tapes, there were robots, spaceships and a huge jukebox, the setting being the much loved Popular Café, which in its heyday had a jukebox and was the centre of the coffee and real handmade chip community. In fact, for many Non Specs before meetings, dinner at the Popular was mandatory, fish suppers or bags of tofu chips, while after rehearsals a race to the the bar at the Top Pub for drinks and more laughter became known as 'Act 3.'

Those nights were a blend of hilarity, friendship and great creativity. It was very Monty Pythonesque.

Over the years the list of productions grew and the talent was not just with the actors. NSPs included great musicians, singers, photographers and set and poster designers. Posters and photographs are now collectors' items. The audiences too were part of the shows as everyone was encouraged to dress to suit the performance and often take part unwittingly!

The group also helped with fundraising and other events, talent nights at Durrumbul Preschool, Camp Quality at Lennox Head, Chincogan Festivals and the Echo Awards. After the NSP demise, some of the players began their own groups and were very successful.

After 20 years, plans are afoot to have a reunion, not a production but a party. Sadly as the years have passed the group and township have lost bright lights and friends and recently some more NSPs had close shaves, so before anyone else leaves, an invitation is out to bring actors, friends, supporters and anyone interested to 'A Night to Remember – The Non Specific Players'. It will be held on Saturday October 16 at Mullumbimby Civic Hall, starting at 6pm. Tickets are $5 and are on sale at Mullumbimby Book Shop and Oski Trading, Byron Bay, October 13.

Delicious food will be for sale on the night. There will also be music, displays, stories to share and connecting old friends together to remember those nights of fun and great community spirit.

Dave takes orangutan trek

Mullumbimby bush regenerator Dave Rawlins will be embarking on one of the biggest challenges of his life.

In March of next year he will be travelling to the island of Sumatra, Indonesia, to take part in a life changing experience – the Orangutan Adventure Trek, raising money for Rainforest Rescue to help save Orangutan habitat.

The challenge involves trekking through treacherous rainforest for five days, visiting an Orangutan viewing centre and witnessing firsthand the reforestation projects being carried out by Rainforest Rescue. Dave will also plant ten trees while there.

This year alone Rainforest Rescue has donated $40,000 to this cause and has been working in partnership with the Orangutan Information Centre for the last three years to restore 500 hectares of palm oil plantations.

The project employs 45 young men who use chainsaws to cut down the oil palms. They then get to work propagating and planting trees to restore the rainforest and the Orangutan habitat.

So far 430 hectares of the oil palms have been cut down and this area is now being actively restored. The time has come for the last stage of the project. Rainforest Rescue intends to remove the final 70 hectares of oil palms and restore the rainforest.

Dave says, 'Earlier last year I learnt about the demon of palm oil and decided I really wanted to make a contribution to fighting against it. Palm oil plantations are wiping out the Orangutan.

'Not only that, they are also eliminating the trees that are offsetting the western world's carbon emissions and contributing a large amount of emissions, as the forest is being burnt down as a cheaper means of clearing.

'Currently it's estimated that an area of rainforest equal to 300 soccer fields is being destroyed every hour in South East Asia. The worst thing is that it is not required by Australian law to have palm oil listed as an ingredient, so consumers are unknowingly buying into and supporting this destructive trade.

'The Sumatran Orangutan is critically endangered as a result of palm oil and there will be none left in as little as five years if we continue on with this rate of deforestation.

'I have pledged to personally raise $6,000 for this event and along with the challenge of raising the money I need to get really fit, so training five times a week is now a part of my routine.'

If you can support Dave with donations or corporate sponsorship to help Rainforest Rescue save the Orangutan, please contact him on 6684 3925 or visit www.everydayhero.com.au/dave_rawlins.

Rainforest Rescue is looking for more people to take the challenge and join the trek. For more information visit www.rainforestrescue.org.au or call Jeni on 6684 4360.

Walk your way to health

Physical activity does not have to be vigorous or done for long periods in order to improve your health. A 2007 study of inactive women found that even a low level of exercise – around 75 minutes per week – improved participants' fitness levels significantly, when compared with a non-exercising group.

Walking is a suitable physical activity for most people. Regular walking can help you lose body fat, maintain a healthy weight, improve your fitness and reduce your risk of developing conditions such as heart disease, type 2 diabetes, osteoporosis and some cancers.

Walking is low impact, requires minimal equipment, can be done at any time of day and can be performed at your own pace. You can get out and walk without worrying about some of the risks associated with other more vigorous forms of exercise. It's also a great form of physical activity for people who are overweight, elderly or those who haven't exercised in a long time.

You carry your own body weight when you walk. This is sometimes called 'weight bearing' exercise. Some of the benefits include:

- Increased cardiovascular and pulmonary (heart and lung) fitness
- Reduced risk of heart disease and stroke
- Improved management of conditions such as hypertension (high blood pressure), high cholesterol, joint and muscular pain or stiffness, and diabetes
- Stronger bones and improved balance
- Increased muscle strength and endurance
- Reduced body fat.

To get the health benefits, try to walk for at least 30 minutes as briskly as you can most days of the week. 'Brisk' means that you can still talk but not sing, and you may be puffing slightly. Moderate activities such as walking pose little health risk but, if you have a medical condition, check with your doctor before starting any new exercise program of physical activity.

If it's too difficult to walk for 30 minutes at one time, do regular small bouts (10 minutes) three times per day and gradually build up to longer sessions. If your goal is to lose weight, you will need to do physical activity for longer than 30 minutes each day. You can achieve this by starting with smaller bouts of activity throughout the day and increasing these to sessions of more than 30 minutes as your fitness improves.

Chiropractic Art & Science

The skills associated with the practice of chiropractic come partly from an innate interest and capacity of the individual chiropractor; however, these skills are honed and developed under the guidance of our teachers and mentors as we go through the five years of training in the chiropractic degree course. This 'Art' of chiropractic continues to develop through the lifetime of service that being a chiropractor involves.

The 'Science' of chiropractic is the essence of the degree and our science is the same science as all health care professionals but enriched with 'Chiropractic Philosophy'. Chiropractors have utilised X-ray imaging since its inception in the late19th century and recent developments in digital technology mean that we can now store your digital images such as X-ray, CT, MR, Ultrasound or view them online at radiology. This ready access will enable us to further improve the quality of service that we provide. We at Byron Bay Chiropractic Centre are committed to serving the health and wellbeing of our community now and into the future.

AtlasPROfilax

Today, we know the importance of the Atlas regarding our health and mental balance. It is the gate where cerebral nerves, finest nerve tracts, veins, spinal cord and fluid flow through the base of the skull. A wrenched Atlas leads to restriction, disturbed flow and reduced information through the body. The natural balance is lost. Moreover, the defective position leads to problems concerning the whole spine and causes repercussions with muscles, eyes, ears, jaw, nerves, circulation and organs. The spine also compensates with a rotation down to the pelvis. Since each vertebra is connected with the organs and emotional patterns, such a twist of our inner axis is able to unbalance our perception of the world. However, having the Atlas in its correct position, the body can obtain a new dimension of health.

Did you know that the first cervical vertebra, the atlas, is out of alignment in most people?

ATLASPROFILAX®
by René C. Schuemperli

This circumstance leads to a variety of physical and psychological ailments and illnesses. Atlasprofilax is a neuromuscular technique that liberates the Atlas with only one application Accurately, Safely and Permanently. This powerful relocation immediately activates a self-healing and harmonising process. It is holistic in nature, promoting wellness and rejuvenation on all levels, mind, body and spirit. This method is non-medical, non-chiropratic.

One treatment can be life changing. The Atlas supports your head and governs structural alignment. A misaligned Atlas causes restriction of the brain stem, spinal cord, cranial nerves and arteries. This limits our potential for wellbeing and creates tension, restricting the free flow of energy. When the Atlas is installed correctly, the body begins an unwinding process, releasing holding patterns and enabling the body to heal and regenerate.

To take a giant step towards your health and wellbeing, contact Sidika Ashauer, Brunswick Heads clinic.

For anyone who's got a vagina, or is just a devoted fan, then this show is for you. Vaudeville of the Vagina is a comic cabaret with Laura Doe and The Wondrous Vulva Puppets. Being a teller of the odd vagina joke myself I couldn't help but ask Ms Doe a few questions.

Tell me what the inspiration was for Vaudeville of the Vulva?

It all started with my mum, who wrote to me when I was pregnant to tell me to exercise my pelvic floor. She wanted to help me avoid being the one out of every three women that suffer from stress incontinence after childbirth. This was before Poise had seen the dollar potential of, 'LBL' and Whoopi had told everyone that it was 'normal'. I needed to find a way to remember to exercise so I wrote a catchy little squeeze-along song called Do the Kegel. The Voices of Gaia performed it and women really loved it. Then a Californian woman called Dorrie Lane asked me to sell her Wondrous Vulva Puppets on my website (yoni.com). I found myself living with the largest collection of silk and velvet vulvae in the southern hemisphere, and before long they started to talk to me!

Puppetry of the penis gets away with a lot of what it does because it's not sexual – the show is actually pretty clean. Have you followed the same themes for Vaudeville of the Vulva?

Ok – to set your mind at rest as regards themes – there's no stretching, squishing or other ingenious manipulation of my vulva in the show. In fact there is no nudity at all. Vaudeville of the Vulva is family entertainment for the sexually mature, or those who'd like to be!

Why do you think Vaginas should be centre stage?

They are pretty central to the propagation of the species, yet many people are terrified of even acknowledging their existence. I think this is a problem. A lot of women's issues can be traced to a lack of comfort, a feeling of 'not rightness' and sometimes, complete disassociation from the central core of their femininity. And on a lighter note, I think vaginas should be centre stage because boys really like them – and so do some girls. And personally I think that those who think they don't just haven't had enough exposure.

What has happened to women's vaginas?

I think we've lost touch as it were.

Do you think the Brazilian thing is necessarily negative?

Each to her own I reckon. Personally I find Brazilians hot – but then I've always been a sucker for samba! I think it's disturbing that neatness is so highly valued – whether it's lawns or pubes – and that people have such a thing about hair, and see removing it as preferable to what is actually natural.

What about labioplasty etc? Why do you think women are at war with their twats?

The whole designer vagina thing is a real worry. It's already pretty sad that we're bombarded with unattainable images of feminine 'beauty' but at least when it comes to bodies and faces we also see the full range of unmanufactured versions around us on a daily basis.

It's a different story when it comes to vulvae. Most women have no idea what a fabulous range of shapes and sizes a 'normal' vulva could come in. They think their's is 'wrong' because it doesn't match up to the classic porn pussy. And to compound the problem – this is also what a lot of guys look for because it is

YOU'RE KILLING ME!

Last night I nearly died. Not on stage after telling a lame joke – that's a regular occurrence, I'm virtually immune.

It was driving back from a gig in Ballina with my fellow comedian Ellen Briggs at the wheel and my teenage daughter slumped in the back texting her lovestruck boyfriend.

Ellen and I love a chat. We were having one of those incredibly deep and meaningful conversations that two highly intelligent well educated women have at 10.30pm, subtitled 'How fricking cheap is Aldi!' The two of us were busy comparing our husbands' newly found Aldi Addiction, or Aldi-iction. I was telling Ellen how once a week my partner John dumps the weekly groceries on the table and then becomes the host of the Post Aldi Quiz show. He calls it 'How much do you think this cost?' I say '$250'. He says 'Lower'. '$200'. Lower. '$120'. He looks disappointed, like I'm not playing properly. 'Higher'. $150' He's like 'Yep. It's amazing. I reckon it's a third cheaper'.

Ellen tells me that her husband has just bought a mower from Aldi and about 300 toilet rolls. I tell her about the violin that I almost bought for $60 and the week I saw a wheelchair at Aldi and how I tried to buy it but it had someone in it.

In the middle of this gripping critique on the German superstore of random unidentifiable goods, a ute travelling at well over 120 km an hour lost control cornering and headed towards us. We saw it at the same time, there wasn't even time to speak.

The ute careered head on over to our side of the road. Ellen moved ever so slightly and the other vehicle missed hitting us by a couple of milimetres. Fortunately she didn't brake; if she had, we would have been history.

I still don't know why we're not dead. We should have been killed. At that speed and the angle of the impact we would have been slammed. Ellen and I were both in shock. Zoe hadn't noticed. When middle aged women talk about Aldi, you just zone out. Imagine that. Our last moments on the planet could have been defined by talking about bargains. I would have been whisked off to the in between talking about a self controlled mower.

What's the chances of losing two Mullumbimby mothers who also happen to be smart-mouthed standup comedians? I was suddenly suspicious. Who was behind the wheel of that approaching ute? Was it a Woolworths PR consultant sick of my constant slagging? Or a Steiner parent, tired of all the nasty jokes Ellen and I make about kids being able to crotchet a book but not read one. (I really don't mean it, it is just a joke.)

Was it someone from the anti-swearing lobby, performing a form of verrnacular cleansing? Was it the teenage boy who regularly yells 'Mandy Nolan's a slut'? Was it the satire-impaired woman I upset by saying how much I hate Junior Masterchef? (I performed a rant on how they should call it Master Shit because those kids aren't real. They're precocious middle class kids who will always achieve. Being amazing isn't amazing. They're born to be amazing. Where are the ADHD kids or the kids with behavioural problems, or kids from lower socio-economic groups? The kids who struggle? Aboriginal kids? Here's a Masterchef challenge, it happens in poor families every day. Here's your mystery ingredient, kids, see what you can do with this box of Weet Bix.' Anyway she demanded her $10 back because I was telling Aboriginal jokes. Jesus.)

Or was it a ute full of male comedians tired of Byron Shire being held hostage by the constant oversupply of Mandy Nolan? You see, it just seemed too weird. If I were to die, I have willed all my jokes and my comedy empire to Ellen. I hadn't thought about what would happen if Ellen and I were killed together. Some bloke would be centre stage doing gags about the Brazilian that went horribly wrong and the embarrassment of having to show his vagina to the 'hot' doctor.

Anyway, whoever was driving that out-of-control approaching vehicle: we're still here. Vaginas rule. By a pubic hair.

the only imagery that was available for their adolescent sexual fantasising. Statistically only a small minority of women actually look like that! In my show I was just using one style of vulva puppet until I realised I that I needed to represent the diversity that I am talking about much more clearly. And as far as wars go, I think a war has been waged for a millennium or three against the enormous capacity that women have for pleasure.

In the 'west' the war has been well and truly won, to the extent that the commonly accepted myth is that men have a higher libido than women. In many countries in Africa and the Middle East, however, the practice of Female Genital Mutilation is widespread. This is where the genitals of young women are partially or completely removed in order to spare her (and her community) from her naturally 'excessive' sexual feelings. In my view this is a (war) crime and I am organising a raffle and committing a portion of the proceeds from Vaudeville of the Vulva to help stop the practice of FGM.

What is the perfect vagina?

One that understands her own unique beauty.

Are vaginas funny? I mean, should we be laughing at the business downstairs?

I think we should be laughing at our reluctance to laugh at them or even to discuss them. Laughter helps in breaking down taboos.

Is talking about your vagina shameful?

Sadly for many people it is. According to one research study only seven per cent of respondents considered the vagina a body part that is freely mentionable. Another reported that 53 per cent of women 'felt some discomfort using the word vagina'. For me as a young woman it was certainly acutely embarrassing. I'd never had any practice nor heard anyone else doing it!

What should women do to familiarise themselves with their vaginas and break the mystique?

If you feel a bit estranged from your yummy bits it is a great idea to take some time to get to know one another. Set an intention that is supportive and empowering. Choose a space and time when you won't be disturbed. Create a mood: candles, bath, oil things that make you feel relaxed and feminine – and adopt an attitude of wonder and innocence. Forget everything you've heard or been told. Explore. Breathe. Find out what she likes.

Don't worry about the mirror unless that's your thing - use touch and tenderness. If thoughts or ideas come into your head that don't support your intention, notice what they are but tell them that you will attend to them afterwards. If you like you can take a moment to write them down so you can investigate later any beliefs that may be blocking you. And return your focus to the sensations in your body and enjoy.

The other fantastic thing to do is start exercising your pelvic floor on a daily basis. Some experts say that pelvic floor fitness 'is the most important factor in a woman's lifelong physical, sexual and emotional health'. I don't know about that but I certainly believe 'It's good for you, it's fun and it's a breeze'.

'What sort of show should we expect? Is it funny, sad, moving...?

Vaudeville of the Vulva is funny, bordering on hilarious. It's a comic cabaret featuring the unusually vocal velvet vulvae of the Vulva Underground with music by The Chaps, otherwise known as Andrew Cox on piano and Anando Bharti on bass. People who watched the sneak preview said they left feeling elated, uplifted and inspired. There are plenty of opportunities for a good singalong!

Didn't they say it all in the Vagina Monologues?

The Vagina Monologues was groundbreaking but I don't think you'd suggest that people stop painting sunflowers just because Van Gogh did it so beautifully. Respectful, empowering artistic works that depict or talk about feminine genitalia are pretty few and far between. I'm just adding my 10 cents here.

Vaudeville of the Vagina*, at the Byron Bay Theatre, at the Community Centre on Friday and Saturday. Tix are $20/25 at the theatre.

Dinner For Schmucks

The title for a start is enough to turn away any punter with half a brain, but a school holidays release would suggest that its intended audience is, in fact, strictly one of puerile pin-heads. But Jay Roach's adaptation of the French film Le Diner De Cons is smarter than that, even if it is in equal parts hilarious and stupid.

The set-up is that to further his career in a high profile but precariously balanced finance company, Tim (Paul Rudd) must find a schmuck to invite to the boss's annual dinner, at which an award is given to the most entertaining but unaware fool. Serendipity has Tim run into Barry (Steve Carell) – literally, he knocks him over when Barry steps in front of his car to save a mouse – and the couple are immediately destined to attend the banquet together.

The movie had been plonking along for half an hour before anything remotely resembling a smile crossed my face, with Barry being, for the most part, just too silly for words. Typically, the box-office American comedy (at which Roach is a master) always overdoes it in drawing such characters, and there are no prizes for guessing that Barry will turn out to be the idiot savant who teaches Tim life's most important lessons. Not many actors could pull it off, but in the hands of Carell, a consummate performer, Barry's ridiculousness is not fatal and, playing to Rudd's impeccable straight man, the chemistry between the two men somehow begins to work. David Walliams as Müeller the Swiss millionaire – what happens to his index finger is an absolute cracker of a sight gag – and Jemaine Clement as Kieren, the sex obsessed society artist, are fabulous caricatures, while Stephanie Szostak, with an adorable lisp, is lovely as Julie, whose relationship with Tim is rattled by the plot's far-fetched confusions and absurdities.

As a taxidermist, Barry stuffs and dresses mice before framing them in tableaux that poignantly reflect episodes from his failed marriage and from the new circumstances in which he finds himself. As a narrative device it's as kitsch as can be, but (there being no accounting for taste) I thought the works exquisite and it was they as much as anything that drew me into proceedings. Free (almost) of the desensitising coarseness that blights so many mainstream, buddy rom-coms, this is an inviting and warm movie that made it all too easy for me to get down off my high horse and, despite everything, enjoy heaps. ~John Campbell

The Disappearance of Alice Creed

A film that pushes us to the edge of our seats from the start and never lets up. Gradually, as the full story is revealed, new elements are introduced to add complexity and new layers of conflict. The film opens with two men going about setting up a London flat for what purpose? Soundproofing walls, a bed bolted down… and it's all carried out in silence! This is a thriller that has all the ingredients of a raw British crime flick, but with a sharp edge of unpredictability. Gemma Arterton, as the kidnap victim really steals the show with a physically demanding and emotionally draining performance as Alice, the young woman whose life changes in a few seconds as she is taken and bundled into a van on her way home. Top performances, assured direction and a gripping music score make this a riveting, satisfying emotional journey.

Legend Of The Guardians: The Owls Of Ga'Hoole

The jury is still out in the great debate over whether it is nature or nurture that most contributes to the shaping of a child's 'fragile egg-shell mind'. Reduced to its bare bones, this is the story of a major conflict between two tribes – one good, one evil – and how that conflict can only be resolved through violence. To employ a word that is currently getting more runs than Bradman, is it not possible that we might at least make an effort at shifting the paradigm? Then again, ever since the ancient Greeks (in western culture), we have been in the thrall of war, murder and bloody fighting. And it is not drawing too long a bow to make such an allusion, for this movie is steeped in the traditions of oral history, epic struggle and interventionist mythology (and the owl was emblematic of Athens). Based on Kathryn Lasky's trilogy (why can't kids' writers do one book and leave it at that?), the story's hero is Soren, a barn owl who, along with his brother Kludd, is abducted and taken to the Isle of St Aggie's where, with other stolen owls, they are to be brainwashed to fight for the outfit that wants to take over the world. But Soren and a handful of escapees, including cute Gylfie, flee to Ga'Hoole, a castle in the middle of the raging, wine-dark sea, which has been designed by a goth-rock album-cover artist. Willingly staying behind at St Aggie's, however, is resentful Kludd, brewing up the filial enmity that will be at the centre of the climactic scene. There are some truly ethereal moments, but boring passages too. The 3D is as breathtaking as we have already come to expect – you can be quite startled by the impression of birds whooshing over your shoulder – and the animation in general is beautiful, though the absence of bright, primary colours has the cumulative effect of gloominess, making the insertions of up-tempo, sweet-voiced pop music most welcome for their light relief. An all-star cast of mostly Australian actors, speaking au naturel, do the voices, but I only recognised Sam Neill's Alomere and Geoffrey Rush's theatrical Ezylryb. Actually, there were a few too many owls for me to keep track of, but one of them, the Dreamer, reminded me of my dog, so I was over the moon when I saw that he'd survived the Big Battle. He was odds-on to make it I suppose – only the Japanese or some sicko Eastern European director would have had the little bloke skewered..

1. Will Smith is in the secret service's sights in Enemy Of The State (Prime, Friday, 8.30pm), a decent espionage thriller.
2. Amanda Bynes is at her charming best in She's The Man (NBN, Saturday, 7.30pm), a sort of remake of Shakespeare's Twelfth Night, in which genders get bent, folded and mutilated.
3. Richard Ayoade plays the über-nerd Maurice Moss in the new season of The IT Crowd (ABC, Wednesdays, 9pm), which rates up there with Black Books in the pantheon of strange comedy.

Mungo's Crossword first published in The Week.

With this week's Sun, Saturn, Mercury and late week new moon in Libra, make it beautiful is the mandate and Venus activities rule…

♈ ARIES: The worst use of this week's Mars in Scorpio animal instincts is unleashing the beast. Second worst is caging it. Best of all is using it as a powerful ally in achieving this weeks aims, whether they're mattress action, business initiatives or personal exploration.

♉ TAURUS: With the planetary emphasis in the sign of togetherness this week's magic moments are in connection with others, whether one on one or group activities. Socializing is rosiest late week when exciting new introductions could be just the ticket for furthering current projects.

♊ GEMINI: As Mercury moves forward, so do you. Frozen projects thaw, obstacles slide aside and with astral energies at play in your house of pleasure life's looking good like a Gemini's should. Especially with Mars and Venus in the house of lust stimulating your inner sinner…

♋ CANCER: Cancerian Iris Murdoch wrote that people on distant planets tuning into our human wavelength might hear a continuous scream. And another time that people from a flowerless planet would imagine us mad with joy to live in such beauty… Your view this week depends on mood control.

♌ LEO: If family dynamics or office politics are turning life into a pressure cooker of dummy spits and hissy fits and you're playing lead negotiator, you'll get the best results by avoiding blame, accusation or venting. Control of the mind-to-mouth highway is crucial this week.

♍ VIRGO: Your boss planet Mercury's move to Libra increases your objectivity and ability to view of matters from all angles. And this week all information should be questioned, examined, researched and verified. Don't let people's changes of mind or mood (or your own) throw you off balance.

♎ LIBRA: Mercury, Saturn and Sun in Libra tip this week's scales in favor of self reinvention, one of your favorite things. Late week Libra new moon's your annual opportunity for not so much a new look (you've got that nailed) but a new look at the inner you.

♏ SCORPIO: This week sends you on a personal journey of self discovery which involves acknowledging and amending past mistakes. Something that isn't fair needs to be set right. And with the twin themes of justice and fun operating, this could be much more enjoyable than you thought.

♐ SAGITTARIUS: Plenty of social attractions and sensual distractions this week, just when you really need to start focusing on how to work smarter rather than harder and get better results by doing less more efficiently. An in-depth overhaul of current operating strategies is what's needed…

♑ CAPRICORN: Relationships may take a bit of work this week, but you're also likely to find others reasonably open to the idea of rejigging business agreements or altering personal parameters, more willing than usual to discuss compromises and consider alternatives. How about you?

♒ AQUARIUS: This week's Libran emphasis is on the importance of inviting more beauty into the Aquariusphere on every level. Or in the words of Libran spokesperson Yogi Amrit Desai, doing everything with so much love that you never want to do it any other way…

♓ PISCES: Piscean superbrain Einstein considered the difference between genius and stupidity is that genius has limits. In the midst of spectacular global idiocy, this week calls for honest self evaluation. Avoid past comparisons: you're not trying for who you once were, but who you're meant to be.

CHESS by Ian Rogers

Play at Byron Services Club, Mon 7-10pm

The chess world will continue on its current course following the overwhelming re-election of Kirsan Iljumzhinov as president of the world body FIDE.

To an outside observer a contest between Iljumzhinov and former World Champion Anatoly Karpov did not look like a difficult choice; Karpov can play chess competently, does not meet with aliens nor claim that they delivered chess to the world, and has never been accused of ordering contract killings of his political opponents. In addition, Iljumzhinov is about to be replaced as president of the Russian republic of Kalmykia, so the source of his chess sponsorship was about to end.

Re-elected FIDE president Kirsan Iljumzhinov

However, Iljumzhinov, who has held the office of FIDE President since 1995, is a consummate politician and with a combination of bribery and intimidation managed to convince 95 of the 160 FIDE delegates – each member country of FIDE has one vote – that their interests were best served by staying with the incumbent.

The Karpov campaign tried to have Iljumzhinov disqualified at the Court of Arbitration for Sport in Lausanne but lost the case after the court ruled that FIDE's statutes were so vague that the qualifying conditions supposed to apply to the candidates were merely advisory.

At the chaotic election, held during the Chess Olympiad in Siberia, the Karpov camp claimed that FIDE was breaching its own statutes.

Karpov, a former KGB informant who made many enemies during his time at the top of world chess, was hardly the ideal candidate and ran a patchy campaign. Sources within the Karpov camp claim that the election was only decided for the Iljumzhinov camp a few days before the vote when he won back the wavering Middle Eastern/North African bloc.

Yet when a country like Australia, which does not rely on FIDE favours and which has never voted for Iljumzhinov, appeared too afraid to publicly commit themselves to the Karpov camp, there was probably no hope for change.

This week's game from the Chess Olympiad sees Australia's number one go down in flames against world number four Levon Aronian.

Khanty Mansiysk 2010
White: L Aronian
Black: Zhao Zong Yuan
Opening: Catalan

1.Nf3 Nf6 2.c4 e6 3.g3 The Catalan, once considered staid, is now an opening of choice for four of the top five players in the world. 3… d5 4.Bg2 Be7 5.0-0 0-0 6.d4 dxc4 7.Qc2 a6 8.a4 Bd7 9.Qxc4 Bc6 10.Bf4 Aronian has also tried 10.Bg5, with little success. 10… a5 11.Nc3 Na6 12.Ne5 Bxg2 13.Kxg2 Nd5 14.Rad1 c6?! Rather passive; the immediate 14… Nab4 is more reliable, intending to meet 15.Bc1 with 15… Nxc3 16.bxc3 Nd5 17.Qb3 Nb6 18.c4 Qe8! 15.Bc1 Nab4 16.e4 Nb6 17.Qe2 Nd7 18.Nf3 Re8 19.h4 Qb6 20.Ng5!? Starting an attack which decides the game, but 20.Bg5 may have been objectively stronger. 20… h6 21.Rh1! Bf8! 22.e5 f5? Cracking under the pressure. Black could not take the knight – 22… hxg5 23.hxg5 g6 24.Ne4 followed by 25.Nf6+ – but the counter-attack 22… c5! would have left White with nothing better than 23.Nf3 with balanced chances. 23.Qh5! Re7 24.Qg6! hxg5 25.hxg5 c5 There is no other way to stop 26.Rh3 and 27.Rdh1 since on 25… Qd8 26.Rh3 Qe8 27.Qh7+ Kf7 28.g6 is checkmate. 26.Nb5! Qc6+ 27.f3 cxd4 28.Qh7+ 1-0 After 28… Kf7 29.Nd6+ wins the queen.

In Praise Of Breakfast Chefs

Victoria Cosford

The next time you are out for breakfast, spare a thought for those unsung heroes, the breakfast chefs. Often, to be sure, their rank has not even risen to the title of chef – they are cooks, behind-the-scenes and rarely seen. They have probably been in their kitchens since 6am and have already put in several hours of prepping before you have even begun to saunter, newspaper under arm, to your seat.

They rarely achieve anything resembling celebrity status – who does, after all, rhapsodise over a poached egg? It's hard to find an ambitious chef on the breakfast shift given the limited opportunities for creativity. On the contrary, this is when the work-horses come into their own, although work-horses of the speediest kind, capable of keeping an eye on grill, stove-top, toaster and oven all at the same time. Exceptional organisational skills are required, in order that the multi-tasking can be one seamless flow. And then it's a matter of pumping out, machine-like, dish after dreary dish of breakfast foods, usually involving eggs (whose timing is crucial), to a General Public which is tentatively moving into its particular day. And as most of us know, people are often not at their loveliest in the mornings.

I remember the hours spent in composing breakfast menus for the Avalon cafe I co-ran. I was determined to offer imaginative and inspired dishes which diverted from the standards – the Benedicts and the Florentines, the banana bread and the friands. Very few of our customers, however, were interested in sage-seamed rosti topped with laboriously simmered caramelised onion, slow-roasted thyme-fragrant tomatoes, pickled eggs and made-from-scratch taramasalata – all they ever wanted was scrambled eggs. Worse, they wanted their wretched scrambled eggs – and Sunday mornings were a veritable nightmare of scrambling – at a time when all I really cared about was 'creating' a gorgeous new cake, or pickling eggs, or whizzing roe, milk-soaked bread, a little garlic and olive oil into a creamy puree of grey mullet's eggs. Clearly I was never cut out to be a breakfast chef.

In another cafe a chef taught me how to perfectly poach two dozen eggs at a time, dropping them in to a deep pot of simmering water and scooping them out at exactly the right time before settling them into buckets of cold water, ready for the orders to come in. It was intensely stressful; I spent the entire time hovering anxiously over the pot with implement poised to scoop, never completely sure the time was right, anticipating disaster.

I was recently in a local cafe waiting for my takeaway coffee. Harried young cooks weaved in and out of each other's way in the narrow space which served as the semi-open kitchen. There were four breakfasts lined up, all variations on Eggs Benedict, it appeared, waiting for collection. When the waitress materialised she asked which was the well-cooked egg, ('The customer insists it be hard!'), which the medium and which the soft. There seemed to be something flinty, or did I imagine it, in the eyes of the head-chef as he pointed out which was which – and the possibility occurred to me that he may even have spat on top of the offending 'hard' egg before smothering it in the forgiving hollandaise. Or certainly been tempted to. Demanding, fussy, precious customers bearing an entitlement that their most outlandish requests be met; they are, after all, paying are they not? Most modern breakfast menus offer a bewilderingly wide selection of choices – and then along comes someone who only wants a slice of toast with jam. Haven't these people got toasters at home?

Perhaps, next time you are breakfasting out and have really enjoyed your Big Breakfast or your Tofu Scramble or your mile-high slice of toasted banana and raspberry bread, you could send your compliments back to the kitchen, back to that nameless faceless person who created it.

Bitemark through the cut-up machine

Horatio Bitemark

American author William S Burroughs is famous for his use of the cut-up technique.

Cut-up is performed by taking a finished and fully linear text and cutting it in pieces with a few or single words on each piece. The resulting pieces are then rearranged into a new text. It had an earlier outing at a Dadaist rally in the 1920s when Tristan Tzara offered to create a poem on the spot by pulling words at random from a hat.

As an example, we offer a rearrangement of parts of a Horatio Bitemark text of December 2007. Some readers might notice the difference:

Vine-swinging. Like a black old in-street Bugatti. Clad of a rescue pantry. Our Naugahyde dory the return world. 'Sir Collops, December returned appropriate g-strings.'

SNIPPETS

A NEW WAITER'S FRIEND

Contrary to appearances, there continue to exist many wine bottles which have not been converted to screw tops and which retain their corks – particularly among the top-end wines.

Local man Jeff Toering has designed a state-of-the-art wine knife, or waiter's friend, following twelve years of research, design and development, and called it Code-38. It blends high grade stainless steel and free form lines, featuring a bi-load leaf spring and French-made precision spiral. According to Jeff, a great wine knife is as important to a waiter as a chef's knife is to a cook – a claim borne out by the increasing number of fine restaurants in Australia and overseas whose sommeliers are using it. Rockpool Bar & Grill in Sydney, Cutler & Co in Melbourne, the Restaurant at the Byron at Byron and the Pierre Hotel in New York are just several. Jeff Toering is a trained aircraft instrumentation engineer and successful designer and manufacturer of both Athlegen medical treatment tables and the highly popular 'Cafe Wedge'. He designed the Code-38 Wine Knife to be enjoyed by anyone serving or enjoying quality wine.

For further information about the wine knife, Jeff can be contacted at jeff@code-38.com.

Byron SLSC juniors at the Dolphin

Byron Bay Surf Life Saving Juniors enjoyed the chance to participate at the BMD Northcliffe Dolphin Ocean Classic. Club members Moby McMullan, Luke Falconer, Sean Sewell, Dean Templeman, Guy Falconer, Jy Timperley , Max Hulbert, Josh Brown and Isabel McMullan all had a great day.

A small but enthusiastic group from Byron Bay Junior surf life saving, travelled north to Northcliffe Surfers Paradise Queensland last Saturday the to compete in the BMD Northcliffe Dolphin Ocean Classic.

Weather conditions were far from ideal with the driving rain and cold blustery winds forcing the board and ocean swim courses to be reduced in distance, with some board and swim events being postponed or cancelled due to rough surf conditions.

Josh Brown from Byron Bay led the way in the first event of the day and took out first place in the under 14s Ocean Board Paddle and made it a double by also winning the under 14s Ocean Swim.

A great day for all those who faced the surf at an event which included ironman champions like Zane Holmes and Elizabeth Pluimers.

New and Existing members are still welcome to sign up with the first official Nippers Club Day being held this Sunday October 10 at 9am.

Club days focus on surf education, improving individual skills and participation in team events. All children aged between 6 and 13 years are welcome to come along and join.

Anatomy of a grand final a play of great disappointment in four quarters – by Eve Jeffery

The Players:

A family of Poms – they came last week for a casual visit and enjoyed the spectacle so much, they returned with visiting grand-pa pom, for a replay.

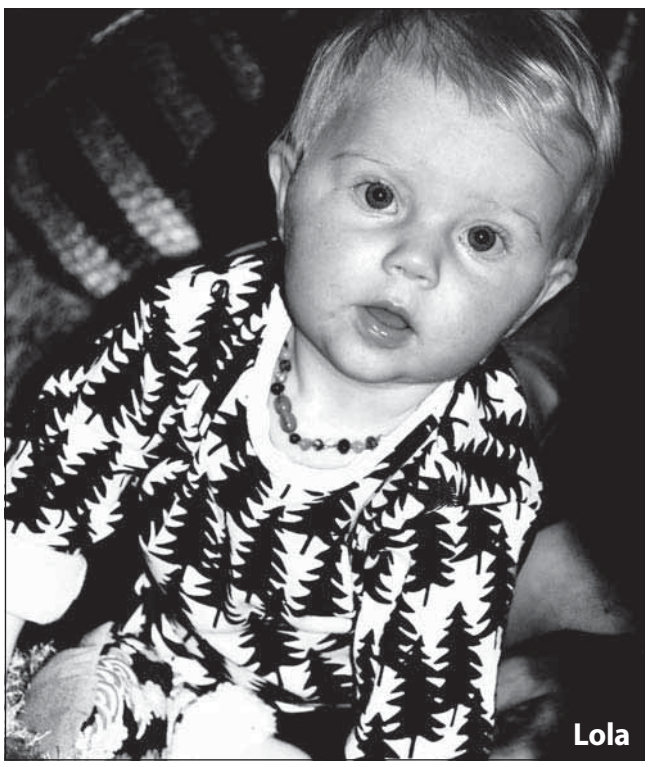
Mad Danni – If ever there was a one-eyed Pie supporter it's her.

Miss Giddy – Danni's offspring who witnessed the previous week's screaming at the telly as a possible tantrum action for future reference.

Dear Brooke – who left Melbourne for the weekend to get away from the AFL nausea.

Uncle Joshy – who plays 'real football' (that is soccer), for Brisbane and is only interested in the halftime munchies, and

The Heroine (yes that's me), another one-eye who has been waiting 20 bloody years for the Pies to get over the wobbles and win a Premiership.



Lola

The stage is set as Mad Danni and the Heroine, two football tragics, prepare to witness what they hope is the ultimate prize during the trauma and drama of the AFL replay after a draw that saw them basically go nuts at the wide screen and neighbours from surrounding houses line their wall with egg cartons in anticipation of the explosion about to erupt.

The scene opens in two locations, the MCG and the lounge-room of Mad Danni. Enter the heroine with bourbon and notebook in hand.

Daddy pom makes a ridiculous comment out the greatness of the the Saints to which she responds with a selection of fingers, all of them middle, and a sideways snear.

As the one-eyes get ready to get vocal, Dear Brooke rolls her eyes and wonders if staying in Melbourne might have been safer after all while Uncle Joshy finds a snuggly place on the couch close to the chips and in view of the oven waiting for the pastry to heat.

Mad Danni practises a few profanities and says that the lentil pies should be warm enough to eat by half-time. Mmmmm Hot Pies!

The Heroine skulls the first of her many cans of Jim Beam and does her best to ignore Silly Daddy Pom, whose wife has the sanity to wear a white polka dotted black dress, though her fashion faux pas, the finest of slim red leather belts at her waist, shows her true colours – traitor!

As it turns out, Baby Pom Lola is the only saving grace of her race in a black and white jumpsuit.

Mad Danni and the Heroine sidle up together on the brown suede lounge and Ms Mad yells, 'You are revolting,' as the Saints captain strides across the big screen and the siren blares for the game to begin. Mad Danni and the Heroine immediately get vocal at the umps as Miss Giddy notices that no-one is watching the guacamole and chips.

Collingwood scores the first goal and Smart Arse pom daddy thinks it an opportune moment to start singing, 'Oh when the Saints, oh when the Saints,' at which time the Heroine tells him where to go.

'I've got the hots for you O'Brien,' screeches Mad Danni as the Pies make it to 14-1. Their guts take a moment to settle.

Another point by the Saints before the end of the first quarter doesn't do too much to faze the one-eyes but last week's events were still stinging their senses; they would not let up on the barrage.

The second quarter begins and Grand-pa Pom looks to his son-in-law for an explanation about the lack of fireworks, as he had been promised a rip-roaring good ol' time watching the Mad Danni and the Heroine beat their chests, tear their hair and screech profanities at the incompetence of the umpires. Alas, Collingwood scores first in the second and the harridans sit back on the couch and wonder how long before the pastries will be ready.

The only excitement of the quarter is when the Saints hit the post yest again. 'I'm not worried,' says Mad Danni. 'I'm not even gunna sit forward.'

At half time out come the pies – warm and lentilly, they make fine fare smothered in chilli sauce and tomato chutney and as the siren blasts for the third term, the punters wonder when the fireworks will flare.

The pies and Pies prove that they are hot, hot, hot and and a sequence of goals by one team and none by the other, turns their attention to Miss Giddy who has pretty much most of the avocado dip either in her mouth or on her clothes and Mad Danni wanders off to find a replacement shirt and a lid for the dip.

Feeling relaxed as the score hits 41-14, the Heroine thinks it might be timely to check her Facebook and put the kettle on.

Grand-pa Pommy Steve wonders what the bleeding hell is going on as Mad Danni pulls out the mop to clear up the rest of the dip and the the goals keep on barelling along like a juggernaut.

As the siren again blasts for the start of the last term, Ol' Mate Daddy Pom plays with baby Lola, Grand-pa Steve Pom heads outside for a glass of red and a view of the river, Uncle Joshy eats the rest of the platter, Dear Brooke decides that New South Wales was the better option after all, Mild Mannered Danni, scoops up the last of the corn chips and changes Miss Giddy and the Heroine signs out of the net and plays Word With Friends on her iPhone – in the dying minutes of the game, the crowd at the G collectively file their nails until full time, the final score Pies 108, Saints 52, yada, yada, yada.

Brunswick Surf Life Saving Club celebrates 75 years

Celebrating 75 years – Above: Current members of the Brunswick Surf Life Saving Club gathered at the clubhouse two months ago for a 'family' portrait, a piece that was photographed in two sittings. Left: Andrew Arthur and Kris Southwell were awarded life memberships for service to the Brunswick club, both receiveing life membership badges during the celebration at the bowling club on Saturday evening and both new and old life members gathered around to cut the 75th anniversay cake, below. Far below, it all begins with Nippers. Photos Tree Faerie.

Hundreds gathered at the Brunswick Heads Bowling Club on Saturday evening to celebrate the milestone 75th Anniversary of the Brunswick Life Saving Club, to pay homage to members past and to honour new life members.

Dinner at the club was a celebration of 75 years of service to surf lifesaving. Members old and new enjoyed the chance to reminisce about the beginnings of the club which held in its first surf carnival on November 24, 1935 with teams from Yamba, Evans Head, Casino, Ballina Lighthouse, Lismore and Byron Bay life surf clubs taking part. One of the biggest non-holiday crowds on record attended the carnival with over 400 on the beach.

The first clubhouse consisted of several hessian bags wrapped around tree trunks and was soon replaced by and old shed. The first official clubhouse was a fibro construction that was opened in 1939 and extended in 1945. The current facility was opened in January 1969 and extended in 1973 and again in 1992, and the finished product that we see on site today was opened on January 2nd 1993.

Current president Craig Reid was excited to celebrate the anniversary and happy that that everything had gone to plan in organising the event. Craig congratulaed both former and exisiting club members and supporters without whom he said the milestone could not have been reached. 'I am proud to be president of this club and proud of every member,' said Craig. 'I thank you all for your support and hope that the future of the Brunswick Surf Life Saving Club is as productive and pleasurable as the last 75 years.'

Craig took a moment during the dinner to pay tribute to Reg Byrnes who had already undertaken the task of writing the first two chapters of the club's history in the books, 50 Years of Service and the second installment, The Next 10 years. Reg had intended to write the third chapter to make current the record, when he sadly passed away in May this year after an illness.

Before he died, still taking care of business, Reg asked Ray Linabury to continue with the tome and, thankfully, Ray accepted the challenge.

Guests at the event on Saturday were given the opportunity to be the first to see the revised version of the club's history – the book whose first two sections are exact replicas of the first two chapters created by the late and great Reg Byrnes – was completed by the inclusion of the third chapter bringing it up to date, by club member Ray Linaberry who said he was honoured to take over the project since Reg's passing.

Another highlight of the evening was the induction of two new life members. Long time club members Kris Southwell and Andrew Arthur were honoured with life memberships and badges for their long and outstanding service to the club. Kris is also notably the first woman to receive a life membership, both she and Andrew expressing their gratitude to be rewarded in such a way on such an auspicious occasion.

Byron ranks highly in coastal property performance

In recent times the capital city residential property markets have been recording strong levels of property value growth, but this hasn't necessarily been reflected in those regions outside of the capitals.

According to the RP Data-Rismark Home Value Index results for June, capital city property values increased by a total of 10.5 per cent over the year. House values increased by 10.3 per cent and unit values were up 11.4 per cent. That Index release also highlighted that the performance of the housing market outside of the capital cities was significantly different with house values in regional areas increasing by just 5.1 per cent over the 12 months.

Over the last ten years house prices in these coastal markets have typically seen strong levels of growth. However, over the last 12 months the performance has been much less impressive. For houses, the top performing coastal market of the 12 months to June 2010 analysed has been Busselton in south-west WA. Busselton's median house prices have increased by 15 per cent over the year.

By comparison Byron's median house price rose by 6.5 per cent over that time, with a median house price of $530,000 compared to Busselton's $525,000. While median rents actually decreased in the Byron Local Government Area (LGA) by 2.2 per cent for the year to June 2010, the five year rental change is startling – up 35.4 per cent!

Coastal units in Byron saw a 5.7 per cent rise over the 12 months, with a median price of $462,500. They were fetching a median rent of $430 a week.

For the June quarter sales, the Gold Coast still dominates the market, according to RP Data. GC shifted 1,187 coastal houses and 1,544 units, compared to 73 and 40 respectively for Byron. In the nearby house markets, turnover was good in Ballina (97) and Tweed (201).

Weak new home sales signal need for steady interest rates

New home sales fell for a fourth consecutive month in August, clearly signalling the appropriateness of keeping interest rates on hold.

The latest HIA – Jeld-Wen New Home Sales Report, a survey of Australia's major residential builders, showed that the number of new homes sold fell by 2.6 per cent in August 2010. Sales were down by 13 per cent over the three months to August to be 11 per cent lower when compared to the same period in 2009. Building approvals were down by over six per cent for the three month period to July 2010, with further weakness to come.

HIA Chief Economist Dr Harley Dale said that the new home market was entering a period of softer demand. 'Previous interest rate hikes and the withdrawal of fiscal stimulus have dampened new housing demand, while there has been insufficient progress made in reducing the supply side barriers that raise the cost of new housing,' Dr Dale said.

'An array of leading housing indicators, including new home sales, is signalling a fall in housing starts in 2011, even if interest rates remain steady. That outcome will mean there have only been two years in the last ten, 2002 and 2010, when new home starts have grown.

'A premature hiking of interest rates would exacerbate the impending decline in new home building.

'At the same time, renewed weakness in new housing highlights the opportunity to act, rather than an excuse to sit back, when it comes to creating a more flexible and less costly regulatory environment than the one which is currently pushing people away from new housing towards existing property.'

The Mullum Music Festival 2010 program is now out in paper form. It brings the excellent news the Festival is offering a number of mentorships for young musicians in different genres. The chosen artists will get a rehearsal session with their mentor, tickets to one of their mentor's shows and a 20 minute spot at the festival. It's to die for. Applications are available at www.mullummusicfestival.com.

Just after 'Backlash mentioned it, the Facebook page 'Byron Shire Youth Road Toll A Tribute To Our Local Fallen Friends R.I.P.' disappeared from cyberspace. We don't know why – we thought it a good idea – and if anyone can enlighten us, drop a note to editor@echo.net.au.

Those who remember the Non-Specific Players will be interested to know there is a reunion of the slightly eccentric drama group at the Mullum Civic Hall, home of many of its productions, on Saturday October 16 at 6pm. Tickets for only $5 are on sale at The Bookshop, Mullum, and at Oski Trading, Byron Bay. Read more about it on page 16.

It will come as no surprise to locals that communities across NSW are so disillusioned with the planning system that they don't think it's even worthwhile becoming involved. A study, which was ironically commissioned by the NSW Planning Department, said residents are frustrated by the department's decision to remove planning powers of local councils to approve projects of state significance with no right to appeal.

Nimbin residents recently protested at the over-use of police drug-sniffer dogs in the colourful village and they say it is driving off tourists and business. The local area commander vowed to give the village a 'cleaner' image when he took charge some years ago. In possibly related news, the federal police were recently given approval for a police dog-training complex at an industrial estate near Murwillumbah, just a sniff away from Nimbin and Mullum.

Headlines 20 years ago: Brunswick Byron Health Service may have to ration services due to lack of resources, NSW government is to restore sleeper carriages on the XPT to Murwillumbah [remember trains?], and the Brunswick Valley Rescue Squad receives its first-ever government funding of $8,000. – The Echo, 10/10/90
