

Save the Federal church

Urgent public meeting at the Federal Hall June 16 from 7pm

Organisers are rallying for locals to attend a meeting to discuss ways of retaining the town's church after the Anglican Parish announced its intention to sell it.

'Over 100 years ago,' says organiser Susanna Freymark, 'local families donated to the community the land the old Federal Church is on.'

'What's more, the community then went on to build the church, again with their own resources. Now the Anglican Parish has decided they have the right to sell this land and building to pay debts not related to this community.'

'The church and the hall are part of our history and our village life.'

'The old church is about to be listed as part of a heritage precinct by Byron Council.

'The loss of the public use of this land and building will have a big impact on our use of the neighboring Federal Hall and of the shared grounds. Many of the community events which happen in the Federal Hall will be severely restricted if the church leaves the community's ownership.'

We have three choices – do nothing, convince the Church not to sell, or buy it back.

'The Church has given the community an opportunity in a short time frame to purchase it before it goes out into the market.' The meeting will be held at the Federal Hall on Thursday June 16 from 7pm.

'No community input' over proposed Ewingsdale hospital

Hans Lovejoy

Vice-President of Ewingsdale Progress Association, Bernard Grinberg, has lambasted both Council and the State Health Department for ignoring community wishes over the proposed Ewingsdale hospital. The hospital land is currently being rezoned by Council to suit the department's needs, and is located on Ewingsdale Road near the Country Energy substation. It also sits adjacent to residential blocks.

While acknowledging the need for a modern hospital in the area, he says the opportunity is being lost by a piecemeal, non-consultative approach by the Northern NSW Local Health District.

Furthermore, he claims, 'This health department cannot be trusted to consider the local community as they have reneged more than once.'

'The issues stem from dealings with the then-named North Coast Area Health Service (NCAHS) five years ago. We met with NCAHS's representatives in 2006. We then corresponded with them and the head of NCAHS.'

'In 2007 we met again with consultants. This last meeting was the charade of "community consultation" – given none of our inputs was taken into account, it was a sham.'

'Cannot to be trusted'

'At the original meeting, NCAHS indicated that they only needed about one-sixth of the lot to be rezoned for the hospital, and they would have no problems in providing for a large buffer zone so that no access would be possible from Parkway Drive.'

'The actual hospital plans show them taking up a bit more land, and stretching quite close to the residential lots, thus leaving little room for a buffer.'

'One representative spoke of a helicopter landing pad; another department head denied it in writing.'

'It makes sense to have one, but not next to residential lots. We also met with and wrote many times to Council's Planning Director and his staff, and were assured that community input would prevail. This is an unfortunate example of piecemeal and shoddy planning, with the community being treated adversarially by both NCAHS and Council. If they actually worked with the community, the results would be beneficial to all.'

Kirsten scoops Lennox comp

Suffolk Park's Kirsten Ogden, 16, won the Inner Beauty 16s and the Yoga for Surfers 21s division at this weekend's All Girls Surf Showdown. One of the organisers, Max Perrot, told The Echo conditions were decent with off-shore one-metre waves at Lennox Beachies, which is opposite the Lennox Pub. 'She took home $500 and a sensational trophy from Ho'okupu Byron Bay, and has potential for a great professional surfing career,' he said. For more on the comp, see sport on page 39. Byron library delay continues

Victoria Cosford

Bob Levett considers it another sad hiccup.

The president of the Byron Friends of the Library was referring to the continuing delay in the new library's construction because of too many tenders.

Bob had been told by Byron Shire Council that so many competitive tenders had been submitted that an assessment by a panel would have to be made.

'It's rather disappointing because we had hoped by late June the tenders would be sorted out and recommendations made to Council,' he told The Echo.

For more than 15 years Byron Bay Friends of the Library have fought to realise a brand new building to replace the inadequate – and temporary – one on the corner of Lawson and Fletcher Streets.

Council 'keen to do it'

It was originally promised in 1988 as part of the agreement to transfer the Byron Shire Council Chambers to Mullumbimby.

A development application for its construction was finally approved by Council in September 2009 and in December 2010 Member for Ballina Don Page announced a $200,000 grant towards the cost.

'We just hope the process continues to make its way,' Bob said. 'There's not a lot we can do. They told us yesterday that a report of the assessment should be made to Council by August, although a couple of weeks ago they told us it would be June!'

'Things were looking pretty good and Council is pretty keen to do it – so I do think we're on the road and it's going to happen.'

With respect to the recent news that the Library Act 1939 regarding the management of public libraries had been updated – and taken out of the hands of Lismore City Council – Bob said he thought it was a good thing.

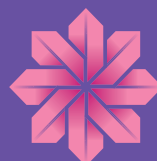

'Lismore's been taking control and under the old law there was nothing to stop them, but we would certainly like to see it go back to a county council model with a regional librarian, which worked perfectly well in the past.'

From social media apprentice to teacher

Max Haim is an apprentice who became a master at the Byron Region Community College.

Max, who has a background in online development and internet marketing, was recovering from a debilitating car accident when it was suggested he take a social media course at the college.

It wasn't long before the others students and the teacher were seeking the advice and opinion of Max whose knowledge of the subject far exceeded the course syllabus.

The college approached Max and asked him to teach the next course and the rest is becoming history.

Max now works full time in digital media and business development, an online marketing consultant and a speaker and trainer at the college.

'I have a passion for business,' says Max. 'I like to change and adopt customer strategies and get real usable understanding of the online social world we now live in.'

As part of the course students learn to use social media such as Facebook and Max creates a private page for them to experiment with. 'It is interesting watching both business people and individuals develop their brand online socially.'

'I like being a part of their confidence building on the internet, saving them time, expense and increasing online sale wins.'

Max says that digital media in the social sphere is not a fad; it is here to stay and will continue to develop beyond anything that we currently understand.

'If business does not adopt social media strategy and word-of-mouth marketing, someone else will be doing the talking for them and it will be on social platforms, and it will often be a complaint, so online reputation management is essential and to understand that social media is a listen first sell second communication tool.'

For more information about the social media or any other course at the college, visit: www.byroncollege.org.au or phone 6684 3374.

New rooftop windmills come to Byron

Ray Moynihan

A new generation of wind turbines, as small as two metres across, will arrive in Australia in August, as the move towards renewable energy gathers speed.

The small turbines use a new 'blade tip' technology, enabling power generation in areas with wind-speeds as low as a few kilometres per hour.

Recent wind mapping by Byron Shire Council suggests large-scale wind farms using conventional technology may not be viable in the Shire, though small-scale systems are feasible.

Australia currently has a renewable energy target of 20 per cent by 2020, and several new forms of wind turbines are emerging onto the market.

While wind is a growing energy source globally, it is controversial because of concerns about noise from turbines, impacts on birds and bats, and other effects on local environments.

The new small turbines will soon be available in Byron, and they are said to be almost silent and visible to birds.

They generate energy via the outer ring of the turbine housing using multiple small blades, rather than a central generator, and promoters say it can cope with the wind turbulence that occurs in residential areas.

James Sturch from Planet Energy Solar discussed the new turbines at the energy forum in Mullumbimby earlier this month, which resolved to set up a local renewable energy co-operative in the northern rivers.

High upfront costs of the turbine are said to be competitive with solar panels, potentially paying for themselves within a decade, according to Mr Sturch.

The costs of renewable energy were the subject of a report from Australia's Productivity Commission released this week, as the federal government edges closer to setting a price on carbon.

That report argues that subsidies to small-scale solar systems are an expensive way to reduce emissions, and while it found wind less expensive, emissions trading systems were seen as most efficient.

Assessing emission reduction policies around the world, the Productivity Commission found the United Kingdom and Germany leading the race, though their populations were now paying more for their power.

Germany offers generous subsidies to its renewable energy industry, which employs almost 400,000 people, and the nation is also leading Europe in wind energy production.

Byron library delayed again

He said that what they definitely did not want was Byron 'going it alone', citing limited book stocks and reduced service as two outcomes.

Section 12 of the Library Act 1939 currently requires one council to manage library services that are collaboratively provided by two or more councils, as is the case with the Byron Shire libraries as part of the Richmond Tweed Regional Network.

Earlier this year Lismore City Council took 'ownership' of the network, and disbanded the committee.

The change to the Act will allow councils to jointly manage regional library operations.

Mullum art gallery opens

Potters and patrons were pleased as punch with the long awaited opening of the Mullumbimby Community Art (MCA) Gallery on Sunday afternoon.

The gallery looked first rate and the work on display was of an extremely high standard.

The gallery came into being when, six months ago, the empty Audrey Hoving Studio behind the Old Drill Hall in Mullumbimby became a space of vision for the small group of potters using the adjacent work room.

The idea was born to have an area for locals featuring 3D art works. Now that the gallery is officially opened, the group will occasionally use the space for exhibitions of individual artists and groups. The first is planned for September.

The gallery is run by a sub-committee of Mullumbimby

President of the Mullumbimby Community Art Gallery committee, Ellen Flounders, and potters Malcolm Gotjes and BC with some of their art works.

Adult Learning and Potters Association Inc, but it is not just about pottery.

The MCA Gallery is independent and intends to display a wide range of local art. All artists in Byron Shire are also welcome to get their art on the group's website, as Friends of the Gallery. The gallery will initially open from 10am to 4pm Tuesdays and Thursdays, and on Mullumbimby Market Days.

For more information, visit the website: www.mullumbimbycommunityartgallery.com.

Bangalow school upgrade

MP Justine Elliot officially opened a $2.125 million upgrade for the Bangalow Public School on Friday.

The funds went towards a new multipurpose hall and covered outdoor learning area, as well as a refurbishment of school facilities.

All these resources were delivered as part of the Gillard Government's Building the Education Revolution (BER).

"These projects provide valuable learning opportunities for our children and supported the employment of many local workers. This is what we strived to achieve - this is the essence of the Economic Stimulus Plan," Justine said.

She added, "The BER has given schools like Bangalow Public School the resources they need to help ensure that a quality education can continue to be provided by our hardworking teachers in our local schools."

After five and a half years with the Anglican Parish in Mullumbimby, the Reverend Ben Gilmour was farewelled on Sunday during a luncheon with parishioners.

The Anglican community took the opportunity to show Ben their appreciation for his time and service.

"Ben's easygoing, caring and compassionate nature has endeared him to young and old alike," says parishioner Anne Wareing.

"The parish now has a thriving youth group and a welfare program that serves those in need. He has been involved in ecumenical services bringing the various Christian churches together in worship.

"His drive, vision and energy have lifted the profile of the Anglican Church within the community and seen the completion of several initiatives such as the restoration of the bell tower and solar power for the parish."

Ben says that though he is looking forward to his new post at Paddington in Sydney, he will miss the community he is leaving behind.

"I love how the people here pull together in time of need," says Ben.

"It is a privilege to be a part of these people's lives from weddings to baptisms and even funerals. I am going to miss the generosity, the love and the compassion shown by the people in this area."

Three months on, the Fukushima radioactive spill continues

Saturday June 11 marked three months since the earthquake and tsunami hit Japan, which triggered the nuclear meltdowns in Fukushima.

Radiation is still pouring into the sea, ground and air.

Despite the inclement weather, a few hardy souls assembled at Main Beach, Byron Bay this week, to show solidarity with the people of Japan.

An organiser said, "Both the Mirrar people of Kakadu, Australia - where some of the uranium used in the reactor was sourced - and the Ainu people of Japan, have expressed their strong intention to see an end to the uranium cycle."

Byron Bay anti-uranium activists will be visiting Canberra for the Beyond Nuclear Initiative on June 14. For more info visit www.beyondnuclear-initiative.com/2011/05/22/june-14-canberra-rally/.

Deciphering Council hieroglyphics

Council's agenda-packed day was a gruelling schedule; it lasted from 10.38am to 6.28pm. All councillors were in attendance. Here are some highlights – the minutes from the meeting are available on council's website: www.byron.nsw.gov.au.

South Golden Beach Hall acquisition

A successful motion by Cr Richardson and Mayor Barham will see whether Section 94 funds can be used to acquire the land that the South Golden Beach (SGB) hall is built on. Market valuation and consultation with the state government will also be sought.

Council will also seek clarification from the relevant state government body as to the possibility of securing a long-term lease.

Mayor Barham said it was about the control of assets. A foreshadowed motion by Crs Tucker and Morrissey called for SGB hall committee and Crown Lands Division consultation.

Cr Tucker said, 'The land is owned by the Crown, and there is no threat from it being taken away. It's whipped-up fear and poor politics.'

Cr Tucker had a completely different take on the YAC building in Byron Bay from Mayor Barham. 'We didn't manage it well,' he said.

Only Cr Tucker voted against the motion.

Ewingsdale hospital land rezoned

The Ewingsdale hospital took one step closer with the rezoning of the land purchased by the NSW Health Department.

To be called a 'Special Uses Zone', it will be for the purpose of a Health Services Facility.

The proposal will be amended prior to submitting to the Department of Planning to allow the Byron Shire Local Environmental Plan 1988 (LEP) amendment of the dictionary definition of 'Health Services Facility'.

One keen council camper. After morning public access – where residents address council – the gallery thinned out to one solitary member by mid-morning. After midday, Fast Bucks, aka John Anderson, left the building.

Furthermore, input from the Roads and Traffic Authority (RTA) and Local Traffic Committee will be sought along with further noise and air quality assessments.

Byron Swimming Pool lease

Council resolved, as Reserve Trust Manager, to grant a further 12-month lease and management contract to current managers Fishheads.

Byron Bay Services Club lease

Council has authorised the General Manager to directly negotiate an offer of a lease of land to Byron Bay Services Club. It will remain in Council's ownership, in perpetuity, for the purpose of traffic management in Byron Bay.

All voted in favour except Cr Cameron.

Telstra's monopole replacement

A DA (Development Application) to replace an existing 30 metre monopole with a 35 metre monopole in Dalley Street, Mullumbimby has passed.

An amendment by Cr Cameron to seek specifications of the new tower was put to the vote and declared lost.

'The item should be deferred because Telstra have not answered questions,' said Cr Cameron, 'the transmitting power and radiation output is unknown, and we haven't heard a straight answer from Telstra on this.'

Cr Tucker dismissed Cr Cameron's concerns. 'The problem is poor mobile reception. Why ask technical details you know nothing about?'

'It's unnecessary to the DA... It's grasping at straws as to why it can't go ahead. Staff recommended it.'

Quiet signage in Butler Street

Council have agreed to allow signage along Butler Street to remind those returning by foot from the Byron Bay Brewery & Buddha Bar that local residents live in close proximity to the road leading back into town.

In response, Fast Bucks leaped to his feet and handed councillors his solution – a cartoon drawing of a face saying 'Shhhhhhh.'

'That should be the sign,' he said to amused councillors afterward.

Paid parking

Council have endorsed the expenditure of $94 funds to carry out a complete review of car parking rates. Council will also defer consideration of new on-street paid parking across the Shire for a period of 12 months to allow for an assessment of other options for revenue raising, traffic mitigation and tourism-created infrastructure cost mitigation.

On-street paid parking will also be studied as part of the detailed traffic analysis for the Bangalow and Brunswick Heads townships.

Council will defer consideration of on-street paid parking within Mullumbimby for a period of 12 months after the opening of the Woolworths supermarket.

DCZMP Withdrawal

Council's Draft Coastal Zone Management Plan (DCZMP) has been withdrawn.

Council will prepare a draft 'emergency action subplan' for the coastline between Tyagarah Nature Reserve and Cape Byron by November 30, 2011.

In other news, the toilet block outside the editor's Mullumbimby office has been repainted bright pink and the roof retiled. It is hoped similar renovations will happen for Byron Bay's amenities asap.

Lennox Head skaters celebrate opening

The Lennox Head skate park had its official opening celebration Saturday June 11.

Residents enjoyed a Lennox Lions BBQ, raffles and skateboarding demonstration by Ballina's Truck Stop Sk8.

The celebration raised money to go towards extra park facilities such as seats, a shade shelter and a drinking fountain.

The Lenx Sk8 committee of Louise Owen, Gary Fox, Craig Parry, Blake Gilmore, Ryan Kelso and Taylor Hession organised the celebration, which also included a sign up for the Lenx Sk8 club.

Lenx Sk8 encourages club skaters to wear safety gear, and provided this is done membership includes insurance for injuries.

There is also skateboard coaching available and Lenx Sk8 is offering free coaching for the Lennox Head Public primary school in term four.

Louise Owen said the Lenx Sk8 committee would promote the skate park as a positive sporting and leisure area for the community.

Though there has been some concern about the skate park becoming a nightly youth hangout, Ms Owen said the committee is determined to make sure the park has a positive community atmosphere.

'We've been very quick to jump onto any negative activity and we've also got strong support from the police,' said Ms Owen.

'The skate park has had a settling-in period, but people are aware that we're doing something positive for the community.'

Lenx Sk8 member, Blake Gilmore, said the skate park is a great space for the community and Lenx Sk8 would help foster youth involvement.

'We want to get the younger guys on board, to get them involved in their community,'

Kai Kearney backflips his scooter out of the new skate bowl.

he said.

The Lenx Sk8 committee is planning to organise events throughout the year for Lenx Sk8 club members and together with Skateboarding Australia promote Lennox Head as a skating hub.

Designer of the Lennox Head skate park, David Clancy of Oasis Skate Parks, said the town had waited a long time for such a facility.

'It's been a long slog for the community to get their park and they've finally got it and they're very happy with it,' he said.

The park includes a 1.5m-deep mini-bowl, banks, ledges and grind rails. Lenx Sk8 has just received $15,000 from the government to improve the aesthetic appeal of the skate park.

Current ideas include a sculpture or a mural.

The skate park cost approximately $180,000 and was built as part of the Lennox Head Cultural and Community Centre development by Ballina Shire Council.

Book launch by local historian

Frank Mills says his new book, Echoes of Aquarius, is not strictly a regimented history text of the Shire, but rather the recollections of a man who has witnessed the history and cultural changes in the area for eighty-plus years.

'When the surfies arrived in the 60s and the hippies in the 70s,' he says, 'it was the first time since white settlement that people were moving into the area who were not here to farm.'

'Obviously, we had people here who didn't make a living off the land, and some of the new residents were into "farming", but basically, they arrived and brought a huge change.

'This book is my way of expressing how important I feel this period in time was, and we need to remember it.'

The book will be launched at 3pm as part of The Echoes of Aquarius festival, to be held at Durrumbul Hall, Main Arm, on Saturday June 25.

Profit from sales of the book will help the Roundhouse Action Group offset some the costs incurred when preparing the plan for the Ocean Shores Cultural Centre.

More on the entertainment line-up for the festival will be announced in next week's Echo.

Durrumbul WhaleFest on this Saturday

WhaleFest 2011 is set to take place on Saturday, June 18, from 2pm until late at Durrumbul Hall, Main Arm.

Three music stages, market stalls, workshops, food stalls, bonfires, a chai tent, fire twirling, a chill-out area, circus acts and movie screenings are all planned. The festival marks the start of the humpback whale migration along the east coast of Australia, and will also be the launch of a new environmental organisation, Positive Change for Marine Life.

Steve Foreman makes waves for the next gen

Victoria Cosford

Steve Foreman is one of Byron Shire's longest-serving elite surfing coaches, having coached and mentored local surfers from grassroots to elite competition level.

He was also one of the pioneers of the first free community surf schools in Byron Bay, developed and ran the Sport & Rec Learn To Surf camps at Lake Ainsworth for ten years, and has tirelessly volunteered his time coaching and mentoring for no money.

sponsored by say Quiksilver you'd need a big budget if you were a parent... but it's similar in most sports. And most surf coaches these days do get paid.

Any other significant changes in the industry?

Now there's no longer such personalised coaching – for example, Billabong and Quiksilver have their own coaches.

It became cool to coach but back then you used to be a dickhead if you did. Back then guys were a lot more hard-core – the attitude was, you can't coach surfing.

What are you up to now?

I've sort of done a shift – for the past three years I've been trying to put Koori surfing programs together that they don't have to pay for, so I've been applying for funding.

I've been retiring for the last five years but someone always comes along – I still do a bit with Adam Melling and James Wood but you're more just offering your opinion to them.

What are some of the highlights of your career?

Highlights of my coaching and mentoring have been the friendships I have made along the way, the World Titles like James Wood, Pauline Menczer and Layne Beachley.

The wonderful part is that these people still enrich my life today. I've been lucky and privileged to work with some of these people.

How did you become 'elite'?

I started at the elite end because that was the people I was around at the time. This was the very early 80s. I was part of the very first learn-to-surf community-based courses and we were putting these on for Surfing Far North Coast.

And we had some really good surfers come through the programs, like Danny Wills and Kieran Perrow. The cream in any sport will always rise to the top! Then because there weren't many elite coaches back then it was like bees to honey – I was the closest one available. So I was coaching talented kids. I coached young boys who went on to win world titles. You feel very proud and privileged. And from that, because I was doing well, that attracted a lot of people.

You were coaching girls as well, at a time when they didn't have much of a voice in surfing...

Yes. In the early days the women were downtrodden – there was a much worse attitude toward them then.

Surfing is now Big Business – what are your thoughts on how dramatically it has changed over the years?

It was inevitable it was going to go that way. Parents pushing the daylights out of their kids and companies sponsoring huge amounts.

There's good and bad – the good thing is people are earning a living out of surfing which they never did before. But now it's a user-pays system. You don't want it eventually to be a rich-kid's sport.

How did you come to start coaching surfing?

My mother was a swimming coach and I first started coaching swimming alongside her when I was 16.

I moved up here in the 70s and was working as a swimming coach – mainly for single mums who couldn't afford to put their kids into professional coaching – then as a soccer coach.

I liked surfing more than I liked swimming so I moved on to coaching that.

New food festival for Byron Shire

Victoria Cosford

A new food festival will take place in Byron Bay on September 10.

Called 'Sample – A Taste of Northern NSW', it will be held at North Byron Events at North Beach (the former Becton site), and will feature a farmers market, restaurant marquees, cooking and lifestyle demonstrations and a gala dinner in the evening.

Food festivals have been markedly absent from the Byron Shire since 2007 when the Lions Club-organised Taste of Byron was held. That two-day event was held at Denning Park, Main Beach, and attracted around 10,000 people.

Organiser of the Sample festival, Remy Tancred, told The Echo that the gala dinner was already a quarter sold, and the festival would be catering for everyone.

'There'll be a kids' area with alpacas and rabbit-petting,' she said. 'There'll be live entertainment and professional artist

Mark Waller is coming to do a huge mural with the children.'

The twenty restaurant marquees will operate from 9am to 3pm, serving up $5 and $10 tasting plates which will then be assessed by judges Belinda Jeffery, Steve Snow and SMH's Good Food Guide editors Joanna Savill and Barbara Sweeney.

There will be cooking classes for both adults and children with Leah Roland, principal of the Bangalow Cooking School, and garden and kitchen tips shared by gardening 'guru' Phil Dudman and Julie Ray.

For more information and to book the gala dinner visit www.samplensw.com.

Local community fundraisers

The Mullumbimby Christian School will be hosting a fundraiser on Thursday June 16.

All the funds raised on the evening will go towards helping cover medical costs of a school mum, say organisers.

The fundraiser will be at the school on Main Arm Rd, Mullumbimby, from 4.30pm to 7.30pm.

Musician Pete Murray's first gig in the area in three years will be performing for the Eureka Public School fundraiser.

Tickets are available from the Eureka Public School on 6688 4272 or the The Mullum Bookshop on 6684 1413.

The event is on Friday June 17 at The Mullumbimby Civic Hall from 7pm.

ABC TV's Kerry O'Brien will be MC for Mullum High's fundraiser gig on June 18.

Entertainment will also be from Lisa Hunt and band, and all funds raised will go towards the purchase of a sunshine coach for the Support Unit at Mullumbimby High School.

The tax-free benefits of donating to public schools

Victoria Cosford

Thanks to its P&C, Byron Bay Public School has come up with a project to raise money for general school facilities.

It has developed two tax-deductible funds to facilitate the private funding of areas not covered under the normal school or public education system budgets.

One is the Library Fund and the other is the Building Fund.

A recent article in The Sydney Morning Herald discussed the significant contributions made by P&C committees in public schools.

It cited that some Sydney P&C groups were contributing more than $200,000 a year to their children's schools, raised through fetes, fireworks nights and cake stalls.

Principal of Campsie Public School Phillip Irvine said that when schools were travelling well they usually had a healthy P&C that contributed and worked with the principal.

Byron Bay Public School's P&C Committee is appealing to the public to make donations to the Library Fund and the Building Fund, both tax-exempt.

Third lowest in funding education

Committee member Iphraim Sella told The Echo that he had been informed that some parents who had chosen the school over private ones have decided to donate the amounts they would otherwise pay in fees for as long as they could afford to do so – and that perhaps other parents could follow suit.

Major funding programs established under the Rudd government are due to finish in the next three years.

According to an analysis of the federal budget by a University of Sydney academic, Dr

Jim McMorrow, federal support for public schools would fall as much as six per cent in real terms during that period.

An OECD report on education shows that Australia spends less money on public education than most other industrialised countries, ranking it third lowest among 28 countries in funding for public schools.

This is despite Australia being the fourth highest in funding for private schools.

President of the Byron Public School P&C Committee Tim Gotterson told The Echo that the idea behind the tax-deductible funds was to make them more attractive to invest in.

'The gist is that over time public school funding has been eroded and therefore this need has arisen,' he said.

'Technology is an always expanding area and we need to fund that – there's this time-lag when public school funding comes through at a time when technology becomes obsolete.

'So this is to try and bring us more in tune with technological advances.

'Electronic whiteboards, for example, can be of great advantage for learning and the P&C Committee has been fundraising to acquire these.'

Anyone wishing to donate to either of the two funds is asked to call the office of Byron Bay Public School on 6685 6557.

Rocking chairs rock

While researching gadgets for a feature I came across the latest incarnation of the rocking chair – the prototype Empower, designed for public places.

Ryan Kilner's invention, made from recyclable materials, can be set up from a flatpack in, say, airports or council reception areas, and used as a recharger for portable devices such as mobile phones and iPods. The kinetic energy generated by rocking back and forth is stored in a lithium ion battery attached to the recharger. LED lights let you know when your device is charged.

What most gadget reports don't mention is the benefits of the gentle exercise and serenity achieved through rocking. It's perfectly acceptable public behaviour for the stressed who might otherwise curl up in a foetal position, especially in the council reception area while waiting for a development application to be assessed. It's also a sneaky way for parents to engage their gadget-obsessed children in physical activity; in a sense a rocking chair re-creates the comforting yet exciting sensation available from those electric ponies which once graced the fronts of supermarkets and shopping malls.

Whether a device for recharging gadgets or not, the rocking chair could be an essential tool in the transition from a high-carbon, high-pressure, high-bullshit society to a more earth-friendly one. It's an easy way to unwind and release stress without screaming or bashing pillows – an acceptable public therapy. It encourages friendly conversation, and possibly even cuddling, when rockers are in tandem.

Old folks – and I will be among them shortly when I get my longed-for Seniors Card – intuitively understood the value of kinetic energy on a slow scale, the rocker's yantra of mellow motion which soothes the savage breast.

The rocking chair revolution will not be televised. It will come upon us quietly in parks and gardens and reception areas.

Next week: the value of whittling and shouting obscenities from the front porch.

Michael McDonald, factotum

Carbon price confirmed as way ahead

Tony Abbott is taking what comfort he can from the Productivity Commission's report on carbon pricing.

Yes, it shows that Australia is not lagging behind the rest of the world as Ross Garnaut and others have warned; actually we are about in the middle ranking.

And the Greens' insistence on promoting renewable energy is a high-cost and inefficient way of cutting greenhouse emissions.

And no other country has embraced an across-the-board carbon tax, and in particular none of the other big coal exporters are considering taxing their miners. So far so good.

But then comes the crunch: if you want to get the best bang for your buck in reducing carbon emissions, by far the most cost-effective measure is putting a price on carbon.

Other ideas, like planting trees, burying carbon, subsidising solar panels or putting agricultural ethanol in petrol may sound more appealing, but in practice they are a horrendously expensive way of achieving very little.

If you are serious about policy, rather than politics, you will implement an emissions trading scheme, or, as a first step, a carbon tax.

And herein lies Abbott's dilemma. He claims that he is indeed serious about the policy: he accepts that climate change is real, that the scientific verdict must be accepted, that man-made carbon emissions have upset the normal balance and that they should be tackled.

He has a so-called direct action plan to do so, a plan which, in the short term at least, is totally painless.

He has been able to get away with this because much of his support comes from people who are among the sceptics, deniers, and self-interested; they either do not believe that climate change is real, or if they concede it is they either don't care or they don't believe we can or should do anything about it.

But this is not Abbott's posi-plans are, if anything, even sillier than his and telling Tony Windsor that corn-based ethanol has been condemned as an unconscionable ripoff.

Or, of course, everyone could just keep on playing politics until it becomes too late for even the most drastic measures to help.

Business as usual.

Abbott will have to either formally join the sceptics or perform the greatest policy backflip of all time.

by Mungo MacCallum

tion – or at least, not his public stance. He wants to be seen as action man, and until now has been able to claim that his plan is an acceptable alternative – sure, his opponents have criticised it, but they would, wouldn't they? We need an objective report.

Well, now he has one.

Notably he has not tried to discredit it: the Productivity Commission is, after all, a highly respected independent body originally set up by the coalition – the very authority Abbott himself appealed to in his earlier attacks on the National Broadband Network.

Instead, he has cherry-picked the findings that suit him while disregarding the killer watermelon at the heart of the findings.

But it won't work; eventually he will have to either formally join the sceptics or perform the greatest policy back flip of all time.

He will at least have the satisfaction of watching Julia Gillard explain to the Greens that their own direct action

John Faulkner's despair at the present state of the Labor Party is hardly news, but it just may be the signal for some of the party's heavies to accept that the time for reform has finally come – that if the ALP is to have a viable future as a broad-based political movement, it must give its dwindling membership some genuine say in determining its policies and in selecting the people who will attempt to implement them.

Given the widespread loathing of the current crop of faction bosses, not only within the party but among the general public, the atmosphere should be propitious.

The only problem is that the revolution needs the support of the leadership, and Julia Gillard, who owes her prime ministership to the aforementioned warlords, is hardly the person to provide it. The victims – Kevin Rudd, and in New South Wales, Nathan Rees and Morris Iemma – are ready to stand up, but by definition no longer have the clout to rally the troops.

And this lack of leadership is part of the problem: even if the machine were reformed to empower the rank and file, why would anyone want to join the Labor Party – or the Liberal Party, or the National Party – in the first place? There is no longer any real sense of purpose and direction, let alone excitement or fun. If you are an idealist in search of a cause, formal politics are a very bleak alternative to what is available outside – GetUp being the most obvious example.

The malaise need not be permanent – 2007 showed that there is still the enthusiasm out there, waiting, almost begging, to be harnessed. But it will take more than a few structural rearrangements if Labor is ever to recapture that first fine careless rapture.

As the casualties mount, our political and military leaders continue to talk up Australia's commitment to the war in Afghanistan.

But there are signs that public support is on a steep decline. And why not? At the time of the invasion nearly ten years ago, the aim was clear and well defined: break the power of Al Qaeda and capture or kill Osama bin Laden.

Both, it appears, have now been achieved; so why are we still there?

Well, to train the Afghans to defend their fledgling democracy, or something equally vague and unlikely. We're there because we're there.

This was the kind of justification we were asked to believe in the latter years of the Vietnam commitment and we all remember how that ended.

So this time let's give our troops in Afghanistan the support they deserve and need. Bring them home.

Canine capers north and south

■ On Thursday June 2 there was a Biodiversity and Sustainability Advisory Committee meeting. It was concerning the off leash dog walking beach at New Brighton.

They allowed representation at the meeting for any interested parties. NPWS was represented and also Belongil Bird Buddies as they have an interest. Fair enough.

As the president of BARCO Inc (Brunswick Area Responsible Canine Ownership) I was very interested in making a representation. But when I phoned the council the Monday before they (without going into detail) avoided answering me and said they would get back to me. I was waiting for a phone call to advise me that I could go along, but alas no call. They did not enquire as to who I was or show interest.

Therefore this meeting, as far as I am concerned, was run in a biased and unethical manner. All of the people who live in Byron Shire should be alarmed at this one-sided attitude. How often does this happen? Everyone in the community has the right to make representation if it relates to them. This was totally undemocratic and unjust.

For the record, the Advisory Committee will recommend to Council that the New Brighton Beach dog walking area to be severely reduced down to approximately 600m.

This is not acceptable. We are justified in demanding fair representation to present reasons for maintaining the need for existing or equivalent dog walking beach exercise area.

■ What was meant to be a relaxing walk around the Bangalow oval with my Cocker Spaniel Billy on Sunday afternoon ended up in a battle with a Staffy X – not on a lead and under no control by its owner! The dog came in leaps and bounds towards Billy (who was on a lead), so I swiftly picked him up into my arms and spent the next few minutes trying to protect Billy and control this ferocious dog. This is while the owner watched on (along with two other ladies), crying out, 'I don't know what to do!' Doing something would have been better than nothing, I say. Maybe scream out its name, pull it away, break it up somehow?!

That would be my natural reaction. It took her far too long to grab her dog so Billy and I could escape, and even then she was shouting out that she couldn't hold on for long – 'Just run.'

Statistics show that Staffordshire terriers are in one of the top four dogs involved in dog attacks in Australia. We hear so often that they make a great family pet, but they are potentially very dangerous to other dogs and people also. It is the responsibility of the dog owner to have control over their much-loved pet in public places to protect other dogs and people. Clearly this dog owner at the Bangalow oval had none!

She reportedly also had the audacity to say that it was my fault and that if I had thought that there was going to be a problem, I should have walked the other way. This would not have happened if she simply had the dog on a lead, which is the rule at the Bangalow oval. Has she not seen the signs?

Billy and I were very fortunate to escape with little injury. Both of us are just dealing with the shock and trauma of it all. It is the last time I will ever take Billy to the Bangalow oval.

Walking your dog is meant to be a relaxing pastime but unfortunately due to some selfish dog owners it can become a bloody battle! It's not for me.

Act for animals

Not surprisingly every decent person confronted by images of animal torture in Indonesia has shown outspoken dismay.

What should not be overlooked is what has not been disclosed. It should not be a case of 'out of sight, out of mind'. We should not need to be confronted with more images from Hell to know of the horror that right now faces sheep, as well as cattle, in other recipient countries. The Meat and Livestock Authority has known of and accepted this situation for years! We have to realise that Australia is a willing party to cruel exploitation of animals for profit.

For those sickened by the the horror I would ask, 'What are you going to do about it?' It is not enough to share feelings with friends. For change to take place everyone must actively write to, or phone, parliamentarians and demand change. Otherwise it will be as always. The dust settles and the trade and horror continues.

Fun weekend

Last Saturday I had the privilege of watching Sharon Shostak's film on the making of The Echo. For her first feature-length film this is an incredible achievement. All the archival film brought 25 years ago into the present. It was great to see what many faces in the audience looked like then.

The history in them that Main Arm hills is shocking. It made me realise that it was The Echo newspaper that gave everyone a voice and made this community indi-bloody-vidual. I wouldn't be surprised to see Sharon winning awards for this compelling piece of history. Essential viewing for everyone who lives in this Shire. Congratulations, Sharon.

More fun was to be had in Mullumbimby on Sunday with the Swap Market, celebrating World Environment Day. What a great idea! Even though we didn't swap because we made the mistake of taking electrical items which they don't accept (fair enough), we still had a great day. There were lots of fascinating stalls, a reptile show, and a working model of the water catchment. We were even given a book about the history of the Brunswick River.

Next year I'm taking down those things that I don't wear but are too good to just give away and pick up some new stuff – free! But the score of the day would have to be our compost turner for $14. Hubby went home and used it straight away. Bargain.

Wouldn't it be great to have some sort of swap market happening in Mullumbimby on a monthly basis? The Council chambers area was delightful, with plenty of room and shade in the middle of the day. There are quite a few places that could host such a venture. Let's show the other end of Station Street what the majority of Mullumbimby residents really want. Quality of life is why we're here.

Has it occurred to him that people like Mungo, Ray, Victoria, John, Mandy, Mary et al, who have weekly columns, actually have qualifications other than being whingeing stirrers?

I look at his letters each week and see the same old list of complaints. Until he has something new to add to a debate, I propose that The Echo should be made a 'Bucks Free Zone'.

Little green frogs

I had little green frogs coming to sit on my veranda the past two nights. I have to be careful where I tread.

They do this every now and then. A couple of years ago I kept a diary on them and they seemed to always turn up like this a few days before seriously heavy weather. Today is Tuesday, June 7. It'll be interesting to see if they are still on the mark regarding the weather.

Stop the drainage

Re George Graham's letter last week about the dirty brown drainage swamp on Main Beach and the festering unsafe water that Council has refused to deal with. The buildup of physical rubbish that flows from the storm water pipe onto Main Beach is not being removed by Council.

Instead when the council grader digs a trench to release this toxic water into the ocean, they are also grading the rubbish (plastic, cigs, etc) directly into the ocean. This is being done in the wee hours of the morning when no-one can supposedly see. Rates include a storm water levy. For what?

Unexpected voting

A few weeks ago I challenged anyone to find an instance where Ross Tucker and the Council staff had disagreed over a planning application. Well it's finally happened!

The matter under consideration was a recommendation by the staff that Byron Services Club be granted a five-year lease over its parking area which is currently owned by Council. The controversial bit, as pointed out by a concerned local businessman, was the further proposal that the club be given the option to buy the land after five years; such a sale would alienate, they said, the last remaining exit point for any future bypass.

Now given that only last year

Council voted to grant the club a lease with the express provision that with 12 months' notice such lease could be cancelled, it was a bit cheeky of staff to propose such a radical turnaround. Their reasoning was that since Council last year voted to withdraw from the bypass plans as then extant the land in question would not be needed. Mmmm.

The debate proceeded with amendments and questions from the councillors (the staff report, as ever, was silent on crucial points) until Cr Tucker, surprisingly, moved that Council retain ownership of the land in perpetuity. In other words he directly contradicted what the staff proposed and I notice that Cr Staples was as stunned as I was.

Though Ross Tucker is not 'the boss' of the Council staff, one notes that he is the longest serving councillor, that he has his own publication the Saturday Sneer, and that no-one from his side of politics ever really crosses him in the way that we on the left routinely do our own. Add to this the observation that no-one from his side of politics has ever run against him without directing preferences his way, and you have a figure which incoming staff might well regard with some awe. Let's just say that there has been an amazing 'synchronicity' between what he wants and what the staff end up recommending as desirable.

So what went wrong this time? Maybe Ross simply saw the writing on the wall, realised that the sale wouldn't be supported, and feared too that he might ultimately be blamed for foiling a bypass. Certainly with Mullum Woolies soon to open he probably has enough controversy on his plate right now. If the community boycott succeeds even partially, he'll end up with a certain amount of egg on his face.

Call it a day

Twice recently I have sadly viewed on ABC TV at parliamentary question time politicians presenting eulogies covering the latest batch of servicemen who have died in the futile Afghanistan conflict. First there was a sergeant who was killed (and six of his group wounded – maybe horribly maimed) and then a further two killed in separate happenings.

After ten years when we were first swept up in the paranoia of the USA following 9/11 and entered Afghanistan, we still seem to have failed miserably to curtail the activities of the Taliban (once our friends, might I say). We were there to eliminate Osama Bin Laden and train the local military to look after themselves and their country – along democratic lines of course. Well, Osama has had the chop (probably leaving behind a dozen good lieutenants) but as for the military – they must be slow learners.

As a side issue, there has been no attempt to destroy the extensive poppy fields which are the source for maybe 25 per cent of the world opium demand as well as providing funds for the Taliban.

A puzzling thing (in my dull comprehension) is that both political parties in federal parliament dance to the same tune – we must stay in Afghanistan until the job is done. What job? For another ten years?

The Russians had for some years previously applied great pressure in Afghanistan and

The Child Care Rebate helps meet the cost of child care.

There are now new payment options.

The Australian Government offers two types of financial assistance for child care: the Child Care Benefit and the Child Care Rebate.

You may still be eligible for the Child Care Rebate even if you don't receive the Child Care Benefit.

It pays up to 50% of your out-of-pocket expenses per child per year up to an annual cap.

The Rebate helps to cover the costs of any approved child care, including out of school hours care.

If you use approved child care for work, study or training, you should check your eligibility.

From July the Rebate could be paid fortnightly, directly to your child care service or to you. You could still choose to receive the payments quarterly or annually.

For more information on what you are entitled to and how to claim, visit australia.gov.au/mychild or call the Family Assistance Office on 13 61 50

Nuclear power and clean energy

■ I was amazed to read Wal Dyer's letter (Echo, June 7) promoting nuclear power after the Fukushima meltdown and the loss to Japan of a 60 km wide swathe of its limited territory and sea for thousands of years. Need I mention the hundreds of thousands of additional cancer deaths which will accumulate into the future. If nuclear is fine let's all eat the Fukushima seaweed sushi rolls – it's going cheap for the next thousand years. Or wait a while, the radioactive atoms are being transported around the planet via all manner of living things.

Wal must be reading the fossil-fuelled literature which is desperately trying to concoct credible fantasies opposing and delaying renewable energy. His example of exclusive solar thermal is a distortion because proposals are for half the power coming from wind. Also it avoids acknowledging that the seventh largest desert in the world is in India: Thar Desert. I doubt that India would have a problem setting aside a patch of that for solar thermal. By my calculation, 20 per cent of the Thar Desert would power the entire Indian population to our level, including 100 per cent electric transport and industry. Meanwhile life could continue under and between the mirrors.

The Andersol plant Wal mentioned uses the outdated parabolic trough mirror system and was not the Gemasol lar power tower plant which I referred to. This system collects heat more efficiently and stores heat at higher temperatures for more efficient conversion to electrical energy. It is one of the downsides of the internet that people can envelop themselves in a narrow belief bubble concocted and sustained by regressive money machines busily dragging our ecosystem towards oblivion.

■ Being a custodian of the land is not exclusive to the Australian native people. I do not feel like an intruder; I take responsibility to live in harmony with nature by developing the human side in a 'bionic design' as part of the grid.

My lodged development application for a Byron ECO Park (BEP) will do exactly that. It will demonstrate how it can be done the ecology way as spoken by Albert Einstein: The world we have created is a product of our thinking, therefore cannot be changed without changing our thinking.

Byron ECO Park becomes the model for a new way with total common sense. In 2007 as a member of the water committee I presented the council with 'anaerobic surge – treatment plan', making energy rather than having to spend a lot of it to destroy biomass energy and pollute the air. Now time has proven that I'm right.

paid scant regard to collateral damage yet, in the end they slunk away defeated, as we will in due course. The Russians must be laughing their heads off at our naivety in pursuing an impossible dream, elimination of a presumed terrorist threat said to be centred in Afghanistan, ignoring the obvious that there are probably hundreds of could-be terrorists strategically placed in many countries around the world, even in Australia.

Why can't we call it a day, withdraw our tiny and ineffective forces, and allow the Afghan states to settle their own affairs as they have always done? How many more mothers' sons must die before we admit defeat and eliminate those painful eulogies which now seem par for the course in federal parliament?

Driven crazy

I will probably be pilloried for saying this, but I am so over

Our community wants the change, demanding local electricity and more. September elections are coming up, stop believing in future election promises. Already the BSC has the pipelines and biomass to start renewable energy, making money out of that for a change!

For me, that makes common sense. I'm used to being efficient and open to suggestion here at Eagle Farm. People can buy shares and stabilise our energy costs. Remember: new product of our thinking – we have to change our thinking!

■ While it is morally incontestable that Australian should take back the spent reactor rods from Fukushima that our sale of uranium spawned (Echo editorial, June 7), it is conversely morally indefensible to store them in the backyard of a community that does not want them.

That is the inference of what shall be debated in the Senate in the next few weeks when Labor's National Radioactive Waste Management Bill is on the agenda. The repository for the storage of nuclear waste is planned at Muckarty Dump near Tennant Creek in the Northern Territory. The traditional owners of the site are currently in the Federal Court in dispute about who has the right to give consent to the proposal.

Jill Keogh

hearing people railing against 'crazy drivers'. Is this the latest whinge fad? Move on already!

I am the first to admit I am not the best driver in the world, but geez even I get crazy on the roads around here sometimes. Is it really necessary to drive 20 in a 50 zone, or 60 in the 80 zone, 70 in a 100 zone?

I know it is great for all you slowpokes out there with nothing to do and all day to do it in; you can check out the scenery or look at what your friend has hanging on their clothes line,

The Bill overrides Northern Territory law as well as important Indigenous heritage and environmental protection legislation. The vexed question is what to do with nuclear waste? Do we want it here in Byron Shire? Is it fair to ask others to harbour it? Do we want to mine uranium at all when there is no answer to the disposal of high-level waste any where in the world?

But make no mistake about it; despite Julia Gillard's soothing sounds about 'no nuclear power in Australia' post Fukushima, Labor is hellbent on continuing uranium production with Martin Ferguson, Minister for Resources, asserting only yesterday that it is vital for Australia's future. He may have been listening recently to the outgoing CEO of Woodside, backing the call by the chairman of Rio Tinto 'for Australia to embrace nuclear power' (SMH, May 7), just the boys to get it all happening for him!

Frackin' hell, when will the mining industry stop plundering this gorgeous planet, trailing their toxic taint? Even the seabed next year will be subjected to the gouging of robots foraging for minerals in the waters of Papua New Guinea (Catalyst, ABC1, June 9) with no idea of how to repair the damage done or even what it will be. Give Gaia a break!

Jill Keogh

but please have some consideration for those in this shire who do have jobs or appointments to go to.

Be considerate and pull over and let others pass while you navel gaze.

We would be extremely grateful and then perhaps not 'drive like idiots' because you have not gone 15 to 20 km/h under the speed limit and braked for every corner.

Taken for a ride on paid parking pros and cons

■ Everyone in our tiny shire benefits from Byron's biggest industry – tourism. Yet the Byron Bay CBD does a lot of the heavy lifting.

Byron CBD mostly has a one-hour parking limit when the Shire's other townships enjoy two-hour parking. The retail rents in Byron CBD are around $10,000 a month for a typical shop – many times more than any other shire CBD.

That means a shop has to turn over around $25,000 a month just to cover the rent!

And that doesn't include wages, power and other overheads. These rents may have been OK if retailing had remained on the upward trajectory of ten years ago – but it hasn't. Byron has fallen from favour, especially for families. The GFC changed spending habits. Ten years ago credit was easy and Australians were spending $1.10 for every dollar we earned. Now we're only spending 65 cents in the dollar and paying off our mortgages.

The strength of the Aussie dollar is keeping foreign visitors away in droves and encouraging us to holiday overseas. Over seven million Aussies took their holiday money offshore last year. The last two holiday seasons in Byron actually saw retail turnover fall during school holidays because regular visitors went overseas! And the La Nina weather pattern didn't help. The markets have been a disaster.

While other towns in the Shire on much lower shop rent can hunker down, put off staff, or even close up shop in the quiet season, Byron CBD has to keep trading just to pay the rent!

Byron Bay retailers are bankrupting or hanging on by their fingernails. Many shops are losing staff or closing down, with knock-on consequences that affect us all.

Losing 46 CBD parking spaces last year was 'unhelpful' and needs to be reconsidered. Using parking fines as a major revenue earner is an assault on our visitors, and shows an appalling lack of gratitude and common sense. Many millions more circulate through the Shire from happy visitors than is raised from lousy fines. The introduction of paid parking may well be the straw that will break the camel's back. I support the stand being taken by Byron United and implore Council to thoroughly investigate the impact of paid parking before introducing a measure that may just kill the town.

Michael Balson
Upper Wilsons Creek

■ Interesting to hear the concerted howl over a Council proposal for parking charges.

In Byron Shire everything is the council's fault – even the closure of Byron's only CD shop, according to its owner.

A few facts:

Byron Shire has a very small rateable base of around 14,500 dwellings. We have one of the highest rainfalls in Australia which combined with being the state's second most popular tourist destination means we have the state's most holey roads.

Our tourists add massively to the Shire's overflowing bins. Recreational areas too are clearly under tourism pressure.

Yet if you compare the number of nights locals sleep in Byron beds each year with tourists sleeping here, the tourists make up 28 per cent – all using Byron's facilities. And that ignores day tripper costs.

The Labor state government repeatedly refused to allow a bed tax on tourism. So who picks up the 28+ per cent impost that tourism, our biggest industry, adds to Byron Council's ratepayers?

All Byron Shire needs is one dollar a year from every tourist that comes here.

But how, without State government legislation?

Questions:

Q1. When are the council's critics going to demand state government provide Council with adequate income or allow a bed tax?

Q2. When are those who profit from tourists coming here going to make a voluntary contribution to our Shire's costs? In particular I am thinking of our very big festivals, our very many backpacker and other accommodation providers, our very popular pubs, the bus companies that pour visitors into Byron, the nightclubs, language schools, audio schools, the surfing and kayaking schools.

Q3. How much? Proportionate to profitability seems sensible. Why aren't the big boys, living in the mansions around our hills (and many in cities beyond our Shire and state), contributing more than rates? Many believe in giving back to the community. Many don't.

If all the above is irrelevant, would our Council's countless critics please explain how Council is supposed to fill our potholes and empty our bins?

Positive interaction with your teens

Mandy Nolan

North Coast parents are not alone in feeling confused about how to resolve problems with teenage behaviour.

Media reports often focus on the negative behaviour of adolescents. Parents are then in the spotlight for not containing their offspring.

This is hard when there appear to be few answers to work with. Arguments and negative emotions often erupt when parents try to establish boundaries.

Parents realise they need to have some input into their adolescents' lives, but they're often put off by their teenagers' attitude and behaviour.

Why have a conversation with them, if it's going to morph into an argument?

Michael Hawton of Parentshop and adolescent psychologist Peter Chown have teamed up to create 'Engaging Adolescents', a three-session workshop for parents to help them gain practical skills for managing their teenagers' difficult behaviour.

Peter Chown believes that parents are desperate for new strategies. 'My experience was that many parents were floundering in managing the challenging behaviours that adolescents often display.'

'Under pressure from their teens, many parents find themselves resorting to strategies that don't work and sometimes even undermine the relationship with their adolescent.'

'We wanted to find a way of helping parents to develop more effective skills and strategies for managing their teens' behaviour while at the same time looking after their own needs as parents.'

So what does engaging an adolescent actually mean, and how does a parent ever manage to do that effectively?

Peter believes that teenagers tend to 'flex their muscles' when it comes to asserting independence and need to establish that they have an identity 'separate' from the family.

'This presents parents with a great challenge. It means we need to engage with the adolescent in a different way – a way that still maintains the safety by providing clear boundaries, but also allows for their developing independence.'

'As a teenager gets older, the role of the parent becomes one more of influencing rather than directing.'

'In the course we talk about ways of "engaging" your adolescent in a dialogue around key issues that often create conflict – ie going out at night to parties.'

'We teach parents a model for engaging their teen in a difficult conversation and managing the often strong emotions that arise around their issues.'

According to Peter, the biggest challenge for a parent is to maintain authority without becoming an 'authoritarian'.

'It's about providing the structure and boundaries that a young person needs in their growth to adulthood, while at the same time allowing them reasonable freedom and independence to grow in their own sense of identity.'

For parents who have had few boundaries with their children, Peter believes that while challenging to establish, it's never too late.

'I think it's never too late to start claiming your power as a parent and to build appropriate boundaries.'

'A lot of it is about building the relationship with your teen. In a sense, realising that after they reach adolescence, you are dealing with a "new" person in a way, not just the child that he or she once was.'

'One of the main problems is that parents often lack the skills or a method for how to approach setting boundaries and managing challenging behaviours.'

Structure and boundaries

'What worked when the child was little just doesn't work anymore!'

'So our aim is to teach parents a set of skills for managing the conversations they need to have with their teens around these difficult issues.'

'But we also spend time looking at how to promote and foster a positive relationship with adolescent.'

Join Peter Chown and Michael Hawton for three consecutive Monday evenings, running from Monday June 30 from 6.30pm to 9pm at the Byron Shire Council Training Rooms at the Arts & Industry Estate. For further information contact Parentshop on 6680 8910, or visit the website www.parentshop.com.au.

Not the end of the world as we know it

Marie & Philip

The rising full moon can be a pretty spectacular site and always attracts regular observers. The next is on Wednesday June 15. However it's the setting full moon on Thursday June 16 that will be really worth an early call when a rare Total Lunar Eclipse occurs. and It will be visible from eastern Australia before sunrise.

Lunar eclipses can only occur on a full moon when the Earth is in between the sun and the moon. When the distances are just right the shadow of the earth passes in front of the full moon sometimes turning it orange or copper. The curvature of the Earth can clearly be seen as the shadow moves across the moon's surface. The attraction of Lunar eclipses is that they are perfectly safe to watch, are visible over a large area and generally last a long time.

Lunar eclipses offer great photo opportunities but you will need a camera with high magnification on a tripod or steady base. Most small digital cameras will not be able to capture such a small object. A digital SLR with a 135mm + lens is best. For visual observation find a spot with a good view of the western horizon and binoculars if you have them. The eclipse starts about 4.30am, is total about 5.30am and the moon will still be eclipsed when it disappears over the horizon at 6am.

■ Marie and Philip are from the Starry Night Planetarium. They offer free viewing nights at Brunswick Heads every first quarter moon. Details www.starrynight.com.au or 0413 779 223.

Contaminating the medical evidence

Ray Moynihan reveals how exaggerated findings are poisoning medical science

In the world of medicine, if you're trying to weigh up the pros and cons of a treatment, the best evidence is said to come from a 'systematic review'. This is a summary of all the relevant research and generally more reliable than a single study. Systematic reviews – freely available through groups like the international Cochrane Collaboration – have become something of a gold standard for medical evidence, and there are now thousands of reviews – covering everything from cholesterol-lowering drugs to acupuncture for low-back pain.

But while summarising the evidence is a good idea, what's too often ignored is the fact that a vast and growing proportion of the original studies being summarised were funded by manufacturers, which means they tend to exaggerate their product's benefits and play down its harms. Summarising that bias doesn't make it go away. Medicine's prized evidence base has become debased.

Hidden bias

An international team of researchers from across Europe and North America recently examined almost thirty of these reviews – also known as meta-analyses – which had summarised the results of over 500 original studies of top-selling drugs for conditions including cancer and heart disease. But when the researchers took a close look at those 500 original studies, among those which revealed where their funding came from, almost 70 per cent were funded in some way by pharmaceutical companies.

So how many of the systematic reviews made any mention of the role of drug companies? Only two of the almost thirty recent reviews reported on who had funded the original trials, which means in the vast majority of cases, the sponsors' influence over results was hidden. These alarming findings were published in the prestigious Journal of the American Medical Association, JAMA, earlier this year – with researchers concluding key information about potential bias was being left out of influential meta-analyses.

If anyone is in any doubt that study sponsorship is associated with more favourable outcomes, you needn't be. As the authors of the JAMA paper make clear, extensive research has shown 'conflicts of interest can influence the results and conclusions' of medical studies. A growing body of reliable data suggests commercial sponsors tend to get the outcomes they desire, raising serious questions about how we are supposed to trust the evidence our doctors are working with.

Sponsors get the results they want

In the early 1990s, researchers examined over 50 trials comparing popular anti-arthritis drugs, and showed that not one of those trials found its sponsor's drug to be inferior to a comparator. By 2003, leading researchers demonstrated there was a 'systematic bias' across the medical literature, with company-funded studies far more likely to find favourable results for their products than more independently-funded trials. In 2005, long-time editor of the British Medical Journal Richard Smith wrote 'the evidence is strong that companies are getting the results they want'.

In 2007 a review of almost 200 studies comparing blockbuster cholesterol-lowering drugs found company funding greatly influenced a study's outcome. If a study found a positive result for a drug, that study was 20 times more likely to have been funded by the drug's maker than by the maker of the comparison drug.

In 2008 research confirmed the world was being fundamentally misled about the benefits of widely prescribed anti-depressants, revealing that many studies with unfavourable results had simply not been published. And now, in 2011, the JAMA paper suggests the vast majority of meta-analyses fail to report the funding source for original studies.

Disclosure not enough

Making funding sources clearer is important – but simply disclosing bias doesn't make it go away either. Of particular concern are the many sponsored trials which recruit large numbers of people and find very small benefits – where hidden bias could make a useless and potentially harmful pill appear to be an effective treatment.

Just as tobacco companies polluted the literature on smoking, and polluting industries try to distort climate change science, pharmaceutical giants and the doctors on their payrolls are poisoning too much medical science with overly positive findings. And it's likely such bias exists in the studies of many therapies – including complementary medicines.

Clearly what's needed are more rigorous and independent studies, and less marketing disguised as science.

Christchurch deals with aftershocks

Belinda Meares

I have just returned from two weeks visiting my family who live near Christchurch and inevitably became immersed in the earthquake saga.

I went to the city twice not with the specific aim of wallowing in the wreckage, but to reconnect with friends. What ruins and eradication I did see made my stomach churn and my heart ache.

The aftermath of the disaster continues daily, in obvious and less obvious ways. As we know, once the media spotlight moves on to the next breaking story, past disasters slip into obscurity but are far from over. They are ongoing. The Christchurch nightmare began in September last year, when the first earthquake struck. It turned out to be a mere scene-setter. While aftershocks continued, people coped, cracked hardy and willed their lives and their city back to normal as quickly as possible.

Christchurch's famous cathedral in ruins. Image: www.celsias.com

But normal never happened. When the devastating February 22 quake hit, the illusion of normality was stripped away.

The psychological shock has been as bad as the tangible loss of life and physical havoc.

It may not be over yet: geoscientists are predicting a 23 per cent likelihood of another six-plus aftershocks in the coming year.

Cruel illusion

The challenge is to provide some assurance that lessons can be learnt and the city will be made more quake-proof.

Evidence of deep trauma is percolating to the surface of this once stoic citizenry. Irrate and anguished letters in the daily Press newspaper, reports about increasing domestic violence and alcohol abuse, and an exodus of 'quake refugees' indicate the gravity of the situation. There has also been looting, so a large police presence – although welcome – adds to the sense of malaise.

How to fathom the fact that the quake has 'munted' up to 1,000 buildings in the city's heart? These will be demolished if they haven't been already. Many wonderful old stone heritage buildings, the pride of the city and symbol of our attachment to tradition, are irreparable. Their apparent solidity and permanence have proven a cruel illusion. Even the iconic Anglican Cathedral may go, as it is far more damaged than earlier thought. One of the most heartbreaking dramas playing out is the fight with the government über-agency CERA (Christchurch Earthquake Recovery Authority) to let people into the dangerous 'Red Zone'.

Since the quake a police cordon surrounds the city centre.

Businesspeople whose premises fall within the cordon have had trouble gaining access to salvage equipment and stock, making it difficult for them to re-establish elsewhere.

Positive aspects

There are positive aspects to the situation if you can focus on the long view and cultivate patience. The Red Zone is steadily shrinking as dangerous buildings are secured or demolished. And while some businesses are lost for good, others have relocated, including the Christchurch Press which now operates from a rabbit-warren of portable offices out by the airport.

Immediately after the quake there was an outpouring of public goodwill and readiness to help. Though fatigue and, for some, despair are now setting in, the heightened sense of neighbourliness persists.

People are voicing their hopes and anxieties more or less in the same breath – the hope is that from this great adversity will emerge a model city of the future that is sustainable, people-friendly, attractive and still distinctively Christchurch.

The fear is that this grasp for genuine, inclusive democracy may be frustrated and that decision making will be a top-down, stitched-up affair between bureaucratic power-brokers and big corporations.

Despite the potential for conflict, I like to think that the gutsy and down-to-earth people of Christchurch have as good a chance as any of getting it right.

You can manage menopause naturally

Mandy Nolan

Internationally renowned herbalist Ruth Trickey believes that menopause has been poorly managed by traditional medicine and that hormone replacement treatments (HRT), while hiding symptoms, do nothing to manage the varied health complaints that develop at the onset of menopause.

Ms Trickey is a guest of SCU for a series of Professional Development Seminars for natural and complementary medical clinicians with a 'More than Hot Flushes' talk scheduled that is also open to the public.

The major symptoms of menopause are insomnia, mood change and hot flushes. Ruth believes these can be very effectively managed with a more natural approach.

'Research indicates that if we get women to address their lifestyle before they are symptomatic, then menopause will be less severe. If you eat well, sleep well and exercise then the severity is a lot less. In reality what happens is women are floridly symptomatic when they arrive, they have often have a full-time job, adolescents, ageing parents, in short they have a complicated life.'

According to Ruth there are herbs that can give relief to menopause. 'The main one for menopause, Black Cohosh, is a very effective herb for hot flushes, although it does interact with a lot of drugs and can be a problem for the liver. It's not something we want people to self-prescribe; it's always significantly better if someone is under the guidance of a professional who knows what is going on.

'The other herb is for mood change – St John's Wort. It's interesting the two herbs both interact with a lot of drugs. For women who are very well and not on a lot of drugs they are easy to slot in, but we don't advise putting in two reactive herbs without management.'

Ruth notes that thin women will often experience more extreme menopausal symptoms.

'We have a saying in practice: beware of the thin, anxious menopausal woman. Women put on a bit of weight around menopause, you convert androgens to estrogen in fatty tissue and muscle. It's ideal that you have good muscle bulk. If you are slight and skinny and anxious you tend to get worse menopausal symptoms.'

At her public forum Ruth will be addressing bone density, how to manage mood change, the recommended Mediterranean diet and cardiovascular disease.

'Cardiovascular illness kills more women than men and has done since 1985 and no-one really talks about it.'

Friday June 24 at SCU Room at the Byron Community Centre at 6pm. For more info phone 6620 3634 or email carla.robinson@scu.edu.au.

Smarter by default – Employer Default Super

For Staff

Years ago, you had to accept the super fund your boss selected for nine per cent super contributions. Put up or shut up, basically! Laws came into effect in 2005 which gave you the power to tell your boss where they could invest your super: it's called super choice. There's an exception for some working under industrial awards that force your boss to use certain super funds. NO CHOICE FOR YOU! We can't all be free!

When you begin work, your new employer should give you a choice – (1) use your own super fund (usually from a previous employer), or (2) use their default super fund.

It's a good idea to look into your employer's default super fund before making a decision. The default fund may have a few nice surprises like ethical investment options that might give you good returns and good karma or perhaps a no-questions-asked insurance policy!

The no-questions policy goes like this. As a new employee, if you choose the boss's default super fund it may come with a life insurance policy for $50,000 for example – no applications or medicals! There may be an income protection policy thrown in as well, again, no questions asked! Insurers call it 'Automatic Acceptance' because there is no probing of your medical history. That may be something to consider carefully when looking for some affordable insurance that is easy to get. The cost of the insurance is deducted via monthly premiums from your super balance instead of your take-home pay. This can make insurance achievable for many who would like some cover, but don't have the available cash or time to spare.

So next time you start a new job, ask the boss about the default fund and the no-questions-asked insurance and make an informed super choice.

For the Boss

For some employers, super choice legislation was seen as an admin nightmare! What if every employee chooses a different fund? Instead of writing one cheque and payment instruction to one fund (depending on the number of employees), you may now have to write 35 different cheques and payment instructions to 35 different funds! Given that many employees have now chosen their own individual fund, employers are increasingly finding themselves in a multiple payment situation... I will get to a solution for that shortly.

As an employer, you should also ensure that other super obligations are met, such as a suitable 'Default' fund for your staff that also provides a personal insurance policy with 'no questions asked'. The insurance options under a default fund is governed by law and minimum levels of cover must be adhered to. If the staff member wants to use the default fund, but cancel the insurance, that is fine; the staff member signs off on the cancellation of the insurance policy, not you.

If you make sure that the default choice is a good one, your role as an employer will also indirectly provide an opportunity for staff to set up a financial safety net for themselves and their families with very little effort. Happy staff = happy business.

While we are at it, if you run an environmentally conscious business, you might as well check to see if your money (and the staff's money) in the default fund is being used to invest in and grow other environmentally conscious businesses. That would only turn the wheel of wealth towards similar business one might suggest!

Now back to the admin and payment of nine per cent super to multiple staff and their separate funds. Your default fund could use a 'Clearing House' system where you pay online to one source for ALL staff at no extra cost! The clearing house will ensure staff are paid their respective super benefits, be it the default fund or any other fund. That might save you and your payroll staff a lot of time, one of the biggest expenses when running business.

If you need some assistance with default funds, we can help guide you through the maze.

Good help is hard to find. Or is it?

There's a lot of talk about the labour crisis and the war for talent. But who is doing anything about it?

The local skills shortage isn't going to solve itself.

It's a quiet period in the local tourism and hospitality cycle, but we're only eighteen months out from a rapid tightening of the labour market as we experience the effects of the resources boom about to hit the nearby Gold Coast.

There are viable staffing solutions available to local businesses struggling to meet changing business needs. With the funding and support of various state and federal government initiatives, there are incentives and subsidies available that serve to offer some relief to local businesses while at the same time help to bolster employment within the community.

There is no shortage of motivated and willing job-seekers in the local area. Unfortunately, due to social and economic disadvantage, they are largely overlooked by employers.

The region has a significant group of motivated and willing individuals who, despite injury, illness or disability, are fighting their own war to get by in a society that continues to overlook the value of their motivation and abilities.

There is no end to the skills that these people have to offer. What they do need is a fair go and an opportunity to prove themselves.

The answer to the labour crisis is available locally. I urge local businesses to partner with community-based employment services and become part of the solution.

Making the most of your investments

Most property investors are not maximising their returns according to Mitchell Brandtman Quantity Surveyors director Maoibh Russell.

'Tax depreciation reports are an important consideration for any property investor. Many investors invest in property to gain rental income; however, only a few of them realise that getting a Tax Depreciation Schedule can help them to minimise their Tax exposure,' Mrs Russell said.

'The depreciation amount makes a significant contribution to the deductions that can be claimed in an investor's personal income tax assessment.'

Under Australian taxation law, it is recognised that an income-producing property contains elements that can be claimed due to their wear and tear and the effective life of that item. The effective lives are dependent on the acquisition date and vary according to the item. Owners may also be eligible for capital allowance, calculated on the building's original construction cost.

Mitchell Brandtman Quantity Surveyors are recognised by the ATO as cost experts and are qualified to provide tax depreciation reports for investors. They are also a registered tax agent, a new requirement for providers of tax advice.

Why are you in business anyway?

Who's your business coach? Obviously, as a business coach and a coach and recruiter of business coaches, I think everybody should have one. Well... I would, wouldn't I?

It's good to be writing here. I promise I'll try to be interesting and maybe even useful. I'll go for funny, sometimes, too. All in 250 words a month.

Today I want to ask 'Why are you in your business anyway?' Think about it, it's important. There are disadvantages to owning a business that you don't get in a job – stress, cash flow (or not), staff problems. You know them, I'm sure. So you need to be clear on why you'd take all this on.

When we're coaching you, we use a very basic three-step process – Audit, Plan, Action. We work out (with you) what's going on and what you want to achieve, then we make a plan and write it down. Then we start taking action.

I know it's simple. What did you expect? Ten secrets to world domination? Sorry, there are no secrets. The closest thing to a secret in business is the observation that the biggest difference between those in business and those with a job is that those in business got off their arses and did something. The rest of it is the usual – what are you trying to achieve, what should you be doing about it? Get on with it then!

This brings me back to my question. What do you want? Enough money for biscuits? Autonomy? World domination? (It's up to you.)

It's worth being clear and making sure you steer your business in that direction. It's easy to let your business be in charge, instead of you. So think about it, write it down. Show your partner. Or your mum. Or your business coach.

Jon Dale is a business coach and a director of Small Fish Business Coaching in Marvell Street. If you want to talk to him about your business, he'll give you a free coaching session, no strings. He says it's good marketing. Phone 02 6680 8036 or 0402 259 209.

Are you heading overseas?

Yes, the Aussie dollar is the stoniest ever. Record highs against the greenback have seen record coverage in media.

The relevance this has to industries and in particular outbound travellers has created interest in what this 'means' and caused a lot of opinion, if not all the facts, from celebrities such as 'Kochie' in terms of your travel money.

Currency exchange at airport booths are easy targets. In the process, all currency providers are being tarred with the same brush. Really, currency booths at an airport are what a convenience store is to a supermarket.

We are usually aware of impending overseas trips weeks, often months, prior. Booking tickets and accommodation and organising travel insurance is done with plenty of time to spare, and yet we'll still leave foreign currency purchases until the last minute with the cry 'I'll just get it at the airport.'

You pay for that type of convenience. But there are alternatives to your bank or the airport, such as specialist exchanges with currencies and advice in regards to your trip and its needs.

The only way to compare providers, and who has the 'best deal', is by asking on the same day of all: 'How much Aussie will it cost me to buy 1,000 US dollars?'

This way you can see actual cost, without the smoke and mirrors. Kylie Ryan-Milroy, Director Atlas Currency Exchange, 47 Byron Street, Byron Bay NSW 2481. Phone 1300 261 090.

NEWER GADGETS ARE GOING GREENER

The Greener Gadgets 2010 Conference, produced by the Consumer Electronics Association and held in New York City, highlighted the latest green designs and innovations in consumer technology. Featuring green innovators, thought-leaders and environmental stewards, key themes at the Greener Gadgets Conference included sustainable product design, green technology in the home and environmental issues affecting the industry.

Yves Behar, founder of the integrated design agency fuse project, kicked off Greener Gadgets with a challenge to designers to 'put the sexy back into green'. Behar said this is the most exciting challenge that designers have had in the last 20-30 years and will lead to innovative products. Behar demonstrated design possibilities with examples of his own work for clients such as One Laptop Per Child, Jawbone, and Mission Motors.

In one 'Gadget Talk', Leo Bonnani, founder of SourceMap, described SourceMap.org as a collective online tool for life cycle assessment and supply chain transparency to help consumers know where the elements within their devices come from and what they are made of. SourceMap, an open source project of the MIT Media Lab, calculates the carbon footprint of laptops and other CE devices and allows users to build lifecycle maps of different products.

The third annual Greener Gadgets Design Competition concluded the day with the audience vote crowning the Living Goods Program, a mobile app created by John Healy that provides consumers with pertinent food information from local growers, as the winning product. Empower from founder Ryan Klinger, a rocking chair for public places that enables people to charge their devices by the motion created, won second prize.

Rainforest Rescue Protects Critical Cassowary Habitat Forever

Another piece of the World Heritage value Daintree rainforest has been protected forever with a 14th property purchased by Mullumbimby-based, not-for-profit organisation, Rainforest Rescue. 'Purchasing and protecting Lot 7 Milky Pine Road is a significant outcome for conservation and for the endangered Cassowary,' said Kelvin Davies, Rainforest Rescue CEO.

The high conservation value of Lot 7 Milky Pine Road has been confirmed by an extensive list of plants recorded in a survey of the property undertaken by Rainforest Rescue volunteers, Allen Sheather and Barbara Maslen. Several rare plants and the fruit of several species known to be Cassowary food plants were found growing there, including the Black Palm – a significant food for the endangered bird during the food-scarce wet season. Mr Sheather and Ms Maslen came across three reasonably fresh Cassowary droppings and several older droppings with germinating seeds during the survey.

Rainforest Rescue purchased the diagonally adjacent block, Lot 10 Milky Pine Road, in May 2010, and this latest acquisition extends its protection of critical Cassowary habitat in the Daintree. The property and the surrounding area have been classified as essential habitat for the endangered Cassowary by the Queensland Government.

Rainforest Rescue has now commenced fundraising for the purchase of its 15th Daintree property, Lot 83 Rosewood Road. This pristine rainforest property is situated in the Cow Bay area of the Daintree, and the purchase will not only save this precious rainforest, it will also do away with one further development in the Daintree. Human settlement brings with it a host of threats – clearing and fragmentation of the rainforest, introduction of domestic dogs that harass and kill wildlife, increased traffic and road kills and the introduction of weed species – all of which contribute to the degradation of the Daintree's rainforest ecosystems.

to survive and thrive. In return, they play an important role to help the rainforest regenerate naturally. Cassowaries eat the fruits and seeds of the rainforests and then disperse the seeds through their digestive process,' he added.

By buying the Rainforest we protect it forever. All donations are tax-deductible. Please donate before 30 June.

With your gift, you can help to protect the endangered Cassowaries and rescue a special part of the Daintree rainforest forever.

'When we buy Lot 83, we'll be adding a sixth property to our Baralaba Corridor Nature Refuge, which is made up of our first five protected properties,' said Mr Davies. 'The area around our Nature Refuge has one of the highest densities of Cassowaries in the country. The rainforest is very important to these endangered birds. They need intact areas of rainforest

in a

Teacup

HUSKY GAWENDA FROM 'HUSKY' AND JESSE LUBITZ OF TIN PAN ORANGE ANSWERED SOME QUESTIONS ABOUT THEIR FORTHCOMING STORM IN A TEACUP, a concert which proves the whole is always greater than the sum of its parts. Featuring the aforementioned artists alongside Jordie Lang, Jen Cloher, Emily Lubitz, Harry James Angus and Liz Martin. This is what Husky and Jesse had to say...

What was the creative impetus for Storm in a Teacup?

HG: The only thing better than going to see your favourite singer/musician play is seeing your five favourite singers/musicians play together. Five for the price of one is a pretty good deal.

J: A couple of years ago Glenn (of Vitamin Records fame) put together a showcase of artists on his label and we performed shows in Melbourne and Sydney. The shows were really great, but they felt a little bit clunky with bands coming on stage for three or four songs and then moving off again. Since then we've spoken to Glenn about organising a collaborative show - this time it's not exclusively Vitamin Records artists - and taking it to the next level where we would perform as one band, all learning each other's songs. Storm in a Teacup will showcase six different songwriters with one slick band...

Do musicians get enough chance to collaborate, do you think?

HG: I think musos are always up for collaborating and playing together. There's nothing better. It's just with busy touring and recording schedules it's hard to organise and coordinate. Thanks to Glenn from Vitamin, and to Jesse from Tinpan Orange and Jen Cloher, who have been doing a lot of the day-to-day organising, we get to do this awesome tour!

J: We (Tinpan Orange) have been fortunate enough to play a bunch of festivals over the past few years and we do a lot of touring; it's through this travel that we often get to meet other musos. We get to hear their songs and get to know each other. It means that we often do have the opportunity to collaborate. With the exception on Liz Martin, who is from Sydney, all the other acts are based in Melbourne and we have toured or performed with each of them at one time or another. This tour is as much 'hanging out with mates and playing some songs' as it is 'collaboration'.

What are some of the positive things that come out of a collaboration?

HG: There are lots but I think seeing how other writers/singer/musos operate is really interesting, and collaborating with people who are as talented as the ones I'm on this tour with stretches you. You've gotta keep up to survive. Sink or swim. No, that's a bit dramatic. I think it will just be great fun!

J: Collaboration is at the heart of music - it can give a whole new angle to a song you've played a million times. Hopefully we can build a show that is greater than the sum of its parts...

Tell me a little about what to expect on the night?

HG: I'm not sure really. That's what makes it so damn exciting. I don't like expectations anyway, I try not to have them.

J: We'll all be playing each other's songs, adding new sounds to some old favourites and there might even be some all-in jam action. There are some remarkable instrumentalists - Harry Angus, Alex Burkoy, Gideon Preiss and some amazing songwriters - Jen Cloher, Jordie Lane, Emily Lubitz, Liz Martin and Husky Gawenda...

Who drives the ship so to speak, or is this a co-operative arrangement?

HG: Jesse Lubitz from Tinpan Orange and Jen Cloher steer the ship together. Very experienced sailors they are too. Navigating through the storm (in a teacup). This little tour would be lost at sea without them.

You're performing Melbourne, Sydney and Mullum? Is there something different about a regional show? Or couldn't you be f-d going to Brisbane?

HG: I'm not sure why it was Mullum instead of Brisbane. I love playing in Brisbane; the people are always really sweet. But Mullumbimby is just about the most beautiful place on earth, so pretty happy to be going there!

J: Brisbane? Where's Brisbane? No, I kid. The whole Mullumbimby area has a fantastically strong music culture and we've always enjoyed playing there. It's the home of Vitamin Records and the Mullumbimby Music Festival and it's great to play somewhere outside a capital city.

MY FAMILY

When it comes to how we live our lives in comparison to our parents, most of us pride ourselves on being chain breakers. We've done therapy, we've looked deep within and we've challenged a lot of the status quos that our folks, and our folks' folks used to guide their lives. For the most part, most of us think we are living our lives more consciously and more self-actualised than the generations that have come before. We make choices based on our individual yearnings, not social expectations. Nowhere is this more evident than in our relationships. Used to be you met a boy or a girl and you tied the knot. Forever. The thought of being with a boy I fell in love with at 18 or 19 fills me with fear. God, I could barely choose a decent haircut back then, let alone a life partner! Marriage is no longer a life sentence. If it doesn't work then it's perfectly acceptable to jump ship. Although there's still a sense of personal failure, the community no longer stigmatises divorce as a kind of social cancer. We're used to it. In fact, we're actually surprised if people stay together. I remember meeting a woman with heaps of kids when I was in Sydney recently and I remarked in astonishment 'Wow! Same Father!' I have three dads for my five kids. It's the new normal. So while we pioneer new frontiers for our romantic partnerships and family structures, its time we started to break up with people consciously as well. It's time we stopped making enemies of ex-partners who happen to be the mothers or fathers of our children, and started to work together. If we could move on from getting 'stuck' in the petty struggle for financial dominance and the need to have emotional retribution through settlements, then perhaps we could pioneer 'divine divorce'. Lawyers would simply wither and fall away. Children would grow up knowing that people can love each other and then not love each other without instigating war.

What is this need we have as humans to punish a person we once loved for eternity? So it went badly? Boo Hoo. Grow up and get over it. We could even mark it with a celebration – Separation Parties and Divorce Doofs! Because hell, the time you really need people bearing pop-up toasters and towel racks is when you've been cleaned out. My ex-husband and I have worked hard to have a solid friendship so we can co-parent our children without trauma. What has occurred to both of us is extraordinary. Far beyond the shore of relationship demise, miles from the Beach of Resentment is the Isle of Respect. After the grieving we have discovered that we actually like each other as people. In fact you could say that we have a deep love and respect for each other. We didn't get to this place until we'd divorced. I was at dinner the other night with my four biological kids (I have a stepdaughter as well) and my ex-husband. My ex-husband was holding my baby. An acquaintance I was chatting with nodded in the direction of my group and said 'so that's your family'. I didn't know what to say. Yes. Yes it is. Except that man holding the baby is my ex-husband. He is the father of my son. The baby's father is my partner. He's at home. The other kids are the children of another man who's overseas. And Yes, it's my family, but there're a few players not at the table. The poor bloke looked embarrassed. Too much information. But what do you do? It's complicated. Last weekend I spoke at Step Family Day in Lismore, a new initiative focusing on the challenges blended families face. Even though I split with the father of my two daughters 12 years ago, I remained close to his mother. She was often stuck trying to find a word to describe our relationship. She called me her daughter-in-law, because we were family but there was no words or labels that we could accurately use to connect us. New family structures need new words. They also need more paper. When my daughter drew her family tree recently for a school project she needed to upgrade from A4 to A1. It wasn't a tree, it was more of a forest of step-siblings, step-parents and a trillion grandparents. For instance, her paternal grandmother married five times. My mother married twice. I have an adopted stepsister. She has had a child and married twice. One in five families are step-families. Navigating the lines that connect us is going to give this generation of genealogists a brain tumour. Our families are no longer linear. They are organisms. So take that definition of 'MY FAMILY' and stick it on the back of your Landcruiser. (PS: Do they make black My Family stickers or are all families white?)

Live Music

Pete Murray Doin' it for the kids

Pete Murray is back for one performance only in the Northern Rivers. Catch Pete Murray and his full band on Friday at the Mullumbimby Civic Hall as a fundraiser for Eureka Public School. Having just returned from a sold-out tour of Brazil and with a new album, Blue Sky Blue, due for release this summer, the local singer/songwriter will be sharing new material and plenty of his past hits in what will no doubt be a sold-out concert. The first single from the new album, which was made with uber-producer Tom Rothrock (Foo Fighters, Beck, Elliot Smith), called Always A Winner, is being released this week. The support act for the concert is local indie/folk foursome The Lucky Wonders. This band had huge success last year with their first album Thirteen O'Clock and the accompanying 40-gig tour.

Songwriters Emma Royle and WAMI Award winner Jessie Vintila first came together to create live music for puppet show Puppets Break Out, playing an 11-show season in the 2009 Adelaide Fringe Festival. The collaboration was such a success they were inspired to pursue it head on, and formed the core of The Lucky Wonders. Within a few months the duo had enlisted the help of ARIA nominee Anthony Lycenko (Pete Murray, Xavier Rudd, The Beautiful Girls), Ben Franz (The Waifs, Tim Rogers) on bass and lap steel, and Dave Sanders (Rodriguez) on drums. Co-producing with Lycenko at Byron Bay's Rocking Horse and 301, they created the twelve tracks compiling Thirteen O'Clock, which was to meet overwhelming critical acclaim. Drums open for the Lanterns – The Five Elements

Opening event on Friday 24 June, Peter Jaggles presents the opening concert called Music From the Percussion Garden at the Lismore Workers Club. 'The First Half is life, the universe, and the rhythm of everything. People are going to see percussion like they have never seen it before. The centrepiece is a two-metre diameter frame drum; it's arguably the largest diameter drum in Australia. There's a whole heap of multimedia with it. It's a spectacular show. The second half is called The Elements and it's a musical look at the five elements, aether, fire, water, air and wind...all of those. It's a six-piece group and it's all original music. There is a whole heap of experimental percussion instruments being performed. I have done it all my life. I started playing music when I was seven years old, and I'm not a young man. It's fifty years of percussion.' Peter is the founder and director of the internationally acclaimed Young Drums percussion orchestra. This is Peter's followup show to the Young Drums. $25 adults $20 child $15 and family $70. Concession, tix at the club or at Byron Music. This is a family show. Check out more on www.thepercussiongarden.com.au.

The Four Elements

Byron Music Society, as part of its 20th Anniversary celebrations, presents The 4 Elements Baroque Ensemble in concert at 2pm on Sunday at St Martin's Anglican Church, Mullumbimby. Baroque music describes a style of Western Classical music approximately extending from 1600 to 1750.

The word probably came from the Portuguese barroco, meaning 'misshapen pearl', referring to the ornate, heavily ornamented music of this period, which expanded the size, range and complexity of instrumental performance. Tania Frazer – oboe, Ben Greaves – violin, Katherine Philp – cello and Christopher Wrench – harpsichord will play works by Vivaldi, Merula, Rameau, Marais and Telemann. Adults $25, Byron Music Society Members $20, Children $10. Tix are available at Mullumbimby Book Shop, Barebones Bangalow, at the door.

Nudge nudge, wink wink

Every weekend, taking a break from helping to raise children, fixing walls, cleaning gutters, getting over winter illnesses that the kids bring home from school, four local men get together, strap on some instruments, tune in and become...Broadfoot. Yes, changing from their mild-mannered midweek clothes, they don the apparel of the gigging musician and blaze away until the early hours doing one of the things they love the most. The apparel can vary enormously in Broadfoot – much like their musical style. Black jeans and tie-dye are popular for one, all purple for another, vintage pants, shirts and jackets as well – enough fashion to keep Mr Humphries in stock on the Grace Bros. floor for some time. This week the destination is the fabulous Billinudgel Hotel, playing in the wake of the beloved Friday night Billi jam of which Broadfoot members were former participants, starting at 8pm.

Walk Like a Gypitan

Gyptian (Jamaica) is a bonafide crossover international reggae dancehall star with an impressive list of Lovers Rock, Roots Reggae and Dancehall hit singles.

Gyptian's song Hold Yuh became a major dancehall anthem of 2010. Although the track served as an introduction to the artist for many music fans around the world, it was in fact taken off his third album, of the same name.

The 26-year-old artist gained his nickname GYPTIAN because he often sported a shirt wrapped around his head in the style of an Egyptian pharaoh. He released his first album in 2006 and songs such as Serious Times and Beautiful Lady became well known tunes in his native Jamaica. Wednesday at Byron Brewery with Blaze Fire Sound featuring Raz Bin Sam and King Krazy.

Yea for Luke!

Luke Yeaman and the Bridges of Branches will be merging acoustic guitar and sultry flute with vocal harmonies at the Rails on Thursday. This engaging duo will be backed up by a special guest singer/songwriter. If you like alternative folk, appreciate the old classics or just love a good original song then come on down to the Rails and check them out.

ARTIST IN FOCUS

OLIVE COTTON AWARD FOR PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITURE

The winners of the prestigious Olive Cotton award for photographic portraiture were announced on Saturday night in front of a crowd of 300 people attending the event at the Tweed River Art Gallery in Murwillumbah.

The winner of the $20,000 Award Tamara Dean arrived from Sydney to accept the award which was won with a photo taken of Damien Skipper at Montsalvat, in Victoria during a residency. Tamara Dean said she was 'so incredibly honoured to win this very special award'.

Director's Choice purchase award went to David Young from Byron Bay with his portrait of Tom. This image is of artist Tom Guppy with his artwork titled Buffalo Wings. This is a fabulous portrait of a young artist, referencing the character of Icarus and the paintings of Breughel and Caravaggio.

The Gallery is also pleased to present a new exhibition of paintings by Mullumbimby artist Meredith Crowe, titled A Roark Summer. The small but evocative paintings depict 'watery' aspects of landscapes in the Northern Rivers region including flooded turf farms and paddocks, silent dams and mountain faces. While focusing on these subjects, the artist investigates the endless compositional possibilities provided by landscapes experienced from the car, on foot, or, through the camera lens.

One particular place which fascinates the artist is the Tyagarah Turf Farm. The turf farm floods after heavy rains, making the trees appear suspended in a watery sky.

'It is wonderful to see Meredith's work alongside other landscapes currently on display at the Gallery. Her moody but beautifully subtle works are a great contrast to the highly detailed works by Hobie Porter on display in our Foyer—and a fabulous complement the work by Aboriginal artists included in Freshwater Saltwater and the historical depictions of our area in the exhibition Valley of the Tweed, which includes a magnificent work by the renowned artist Elioth Gruner, on loan from the Art Gallery of NSW,' Miss Muddiman said.

Exhibitions continue until 31 July. Admission is Free. Hours Wed-Sun 10–5.

PLANET CORROBOREE

Planet Corroboree, situated in the heart of Byron Bay, fronting the community centre, next to the post office, offers Aboriginal art and artefacts, Byron's best range of professionally handcrafted didgeridoos, boomerangs, crafts, local and Indigenous music, unique locally made jewellery, home- wares, hats and books. A visit to Planet Corroboree is such a delightful experience that locals and visitors will find themselves coming back time and time again. 6680 7884

OLIVE COTTON AWARD

Visit the Tweed River Art Gallery in Murwillumbah to see the latest national photography prize, the Olive Cotton Award for photographic portraiture. In 2005 the Tweed River Art Gallery launched the Olive Cotton Award for photographic portraiture (OCA), an acquisitive award with a major prize of $10,000, funded by Olive Cotton's family, in memory of one of Australia's leading twentieth century photographers. The People's Choice Award will allow you to choose your favourite entry from the 101 photographs on display.

There are more portraits to be enjoyed in The Australian Character drawn from the Gallery's portrait collection, a good mix of contemporary and historical works that are ever popular with visitors.

See Mullumbimby artist Meredith Crowe's exhibition A Roark Summer, a series of beautiful little paintings created over the wet summer of 2010/2011 depicting flooded turf farms and weeping mountain faces. The works are for sale and are sure to be snapped up.

New in the foyer is a display of paintings by local artist Hobie Porter focusing attention on the environment in Pressing Currents.

Tyagarah Turf Farm After Rain 2010, oil on board, 40 x 46 cm

Still on show is Valley of the Tweed – features Valley of the Tweed, 1921 a magnificent oil painting by Elioth Gruner, on loan from the Art Gallery of New South Wales. To complement this large work the Gallery will display selected landscapes old and new of the Tweed region.

Freshwater Saltwater: Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander prints showcases 30 beautiful prints recording traditional stories, designs and clan totems.

If you are an artist you might like to come along to a talk by Michelle Andringa from the Art Gallery of NSW who will discuss copyright and merchandise agreements. A free event on Tuesday 5 July at 10.30am, bookings essential, phone 02 6670 2790. The Gallery also holds workshops for kids and adults; please phone for information.

To finish your visit enjoy the glorious views from the Gallery Café while having a light lunch or coffee.

Admittance is free, and the Gallery and Cafe are open 10am to 5pm Wednesday to Sunday.

'AN EYE FOR DETAIL' – CONTEMPORARY REALIST PAINTING AT ITS VERY BEST

Award-winning contemporary realist painters, Scott McDougall and Neil Taylor, are currently exhibiting at the newly opened Blue Bicycle Gallery in the Arts & Industry Estate at Byron Bay. The exhibition entitled 'An eye for detail' will be on display until June 30th.

'My paintings reflect my passion for colour, texture and formal composition. In this series of paintings I was interested in the dislocation of European architecture to foreign lands and the dramatic contrasts between the buildings and the people that inhabit them. This exhibition is inspired by my travels through Cuba, Vietnam, Italy and Morocco. The opportunity to exhibit in such a generous space that would be the envy of any capital city gallery is an exciting prospect for me, says McDougall.

Taylor says, 'I've been fortunate to be able to choose a majority of ocean painting for this exhibition. Over the years this has been the focus of most of my work—the energy in and around the ocean encompasses a full range of emotional intensities from the serenity of infinite emptiness to the full power of the unrestricted elements.'

Speaking at the opening of the exhibition, director of the Blue Bicycle Gallery, Peter Mortimore said, 'I am honoured that artists of the calibre of Scott and Neil agreed to showcase their extraordinary work at my Byron Bay gallery. I urge everyone to spread the word and tell their friends to drop in and view this vibrant, colourful exhibition of contemporary realist paintings of the highest quality.'

Dominique in the Tree

Catch Canadian Dominique Fraissard at the Treehouse in Byron on Sunday. Having opened for Jack Johnson, John Butler Trio, The Waifs and Roger McGuinn, it's no wonder that this talented young artist has taken out BCIMA 2011 People's Choice, Best Folk/Traditional Recording and Best Roots/World Recording and Best Producer.

Electric Beach

After two epic summer shows, the Electric Dreams trio of Longtime, Nowak and Captaine Kaine return to the Beach Hotel on Saturday for another dose of 80s madness.

Electric Dreams bring back the 80s dance floor vibe, combining early hip hop, house and disco with cool sounds of the new wave and big-haired chartbusting 80s pop.

All the tunes are played in their original glory, many on vinyl, with only the tastiest and most inventive remixes making it onto the decks. The show starts at 9pm.

Roots, rock, reggae showdown!

Described as the 'raucous purveyors of roots music with a harder twist' (Sam Fell, Rhythms Magazine), Marshall and the Fro are well known for their powerful, pulsing surfabilly/roots music, the soundtrack to the summer for many a carefree festival freak.

Hailing from the North Coast surfing mecca of Lennox Head, NSW and penned as one of the hardest touring acts in Australia, the boys are pushing themselves and their music to the limits. After performing at this year's East Coast Blues and Roots Festival and selling over 10,000 albums, Marshall and The Fro's music was hand-picked by Billabong to feature on their forthcoming surfing competitions including Von-Zippa Trials and Billabong Pro, as well as soundtrack spots on the latest Billabong surf films. With their latest album Friends For Life tucked firmly under their belts, check out Marshall and The Fro, coming to a tour near you!

See Marshall and the Fro team up with local ska funksters, Anarchist Duck and reggae rockers CC THE CAT on Friday 17th June at The Great Northern Hotel, Byron Bay. Doors open 9pm, tickets $12.

John Hoffman & The Russells

Flugelhorn-meister John will be whooping it up with the Russells this afternoon... Sharny on keys/vocals, Lauren Lucille (Sharny's daughter) also on vocals and brother Steve on fretless electric bass (not keys this time). They'll be bringing you an afternoon of beautiful jazz music and there's bound to be plenty of mirth coming off the carpetstand, one would imagine. By the River Restaurant in Ballina on Sunday at 3pm.

Light Year

From the demure suburbs of East Sydney comes a beast donning a jetpack and straddling a kick drum that can be felt from here to Antarctica. Born in 2009 (year of the Ox) Light Year attained all the qualities needed to become a successful dance troupe. Unbeknownst to the average dancer it was in fact a political statement of love for all things dance that the boys were making with their higher learning anthem Sex Education lifted from their March 2010 EP release Night/Vision. And so dawns a new age of the third coming of Light Year. To the future and beyond – where these young ice-cold powerhouse dweebs reside already – is where you will find a concoction of projects hitting the ground and bouncing up into your ear canals. Hotel Great Northern on Saturday.

Curious Creatures

Splendid, Lismore Regional Gallery and the Lismore Lantern Parade are proud to present a large-scale intervention exploring play and the engagement between human and digital interface.

There have been reported sightings of strange creatures at the site of the Lismore Lantern Parade:

'Beyond the confines of the festival fencing exists a hybrid parallel world inhabited by strange and beautiful creatures. Strange encounters are reported from the festival site as Curious Creatures venture in from the surrounding woods.'

The Curious Creatures will be visiting their birthplace before heading to Splendour in the Grass festival, Woodfordia, QLD.

This artwork was conceived and commissioned through Splendid, a Lismore-based program which brings together young and emerging artists in Australia to consider how to make art and performance for mass audiences. See the Creatures in action at the Lismore Lantern Parade on Saturday 25 June.

Movies in Mullum

Mullum Flicks presents Angele and Tony, one of the acclaimed films of the 2011 French Film Festival. This award-winning debut feature from writer/director Alix Delaporte is an arresting and intimate drama about two lost souls in search of human connection. Angele, fresh out of prison, also seeks to heal a fractured relationship with her son. Saturday and Sunday at the Drill Hall at 7.30pm with delicious food from 6.30pm.

Foody Films

Screenworks and Santos partner up to bring documentary makers and nutritionists James Colquhoun and Laurentine Ten Bosch to the Northern Rivers to share their experiences and vision on the importance of food and health. After studying nutrition through the Global College of Natural Medicine in California, James and Laurentine realised that the health challenges within their own families were in fact a very real representation of what was happening the world over. As they researched further into the healthcare industry, they felt compelled to share their findings. 'What we learned throughout this journey was so astounding that we wanted to share it with others, and so Food Matters the documentary was born,' James explains. The film Food Matters will be screening at Mullumbimby Civic Hall on Thursday June 23rd followed by a discussion with the filmmakers and Santos consultant and Hygienic Doctor PhD Susan Famularo on improving chronic illness with simple life care. Tickets $12 / $10 Screenworks members – available from Santos, The Bookshop Mullumbimby, Mary Ryans Byron Bay and Screenworks. www.screenworks.com.au ph 02 6687 1599.

Sketchy Drawings

Dr Sketchy's Burlesque Life Drawing returns on Tuesday June 21 at the Buddha Bar, Byron Bay Brewery, for its second birthday. As a special treat they welcome Miss Bertie Page who last time performed as a singing mermaid naked in a bath of green cordial. She has also brought her outrageous glam band, Bertie Page Clinic. Mae Wilde is MC, so bring your pencil and your paper for a crazy night of food, nudes, dudes, drawing, wine, women and song! Entry $15. Over 18s only.

Oh Brother

ShearTheatrix, the Shearwater Steiner School drama troupe, will stage an adaptation of the Coen Brothers' Oscar-nominated film O Brother Where Art Thou?, performed by Year 7, 8, 9, 10 and 11 students. Based on Homer's epic poem The Odyssey, O Brother Where Art Thou? is set in the deep south in the US during the 1930s. The play centres on three escaped convicts and their search for treasure... though perhaps the treasure they seek will not be the one they find! ShearTheatrix will perform this play at the Byron Bay Community Centre on Thursday June 23rd 12.30pm and 7.30pm, Friday June 24th 12.30pm and 7.30pm, Saturday June 25th 7.30pm.

Empty but Beautiful

6/7 Empty is an extraordinary new solo dance work by talented Australian-Indonesian dancer/choreographer, Jade Dewi Tyas Tunggal. Presented by NORPA, 6/7 Empty will appear at the Star Court Theatre at 7.30pm on Saturday 25 June. Influenced by her training in traditional Indonesian dance, Japanese martial arts, Indigenous Australian dance, ballet and modern dance, Tunggal has a unique choreographic language.

Local dancers have the opportunity attend a dance workshop with Jade on Saturday 18 June, at Lismore City Hall from 2pm to 4pm. Dancers should be intermediate to advanced level and the workshop will explore contemporary dance technique, using some of the repertoire from the show. This workshop is free to Friends of NORPA or patrons who have purchased a ticket to the show; $20 others.

FRED LANG AT THE COMEDY CAVE AT LISMORE CITY HALL ON SATURDAY

JAMES COLQUHOUN & LAURENTINE TEN BOSCH SHARE THEIR VISION ON FOOD & HEALTH AFTER THE SCREENING OF FOOD MATTERS AT MULLUMBIMBY CIVIC HALL JUNE 23

Fred Lang at the Comedy Cave

Don't miss the opportunity to see the hilarious comedian Fred Lang as he takes to the mic at NORPA's Comedy Cave on Saturday. Fred was plucked from the obscurity of a butchery and thrust into the comedy limelight where he has become one of Australia's leading talents. His trade background and German/Hungarian parentage provide him with an insight into Australia that is unique amongst comedians. He has a proven ability to relate to audiences from all backgrounds and in all performance contexts. 8pm at Lismore City Hall.

Going French

The North Coast Alliance Française is hosting a French Film Festival at Ballina Fair Cinema, over the weekend, beginning this Friday. The opening night film is La Princesse de Montpensier, rated MA15+, a gripping drama set against the savage Catholic/Protestant wars in the 16th century and based on a novella by Madame de Lafayette. The Saturday morning film for all ages is an animation in the style of Toy Story. In Panique au Village, rated PG, animated plastic toys from a papier mâché town journey through surreal adventures. The weekend features French films Saturday and Sunday. For more information contact the cinema on 6686 9600.

Shout It Out!

Mention the name Johnny O'Keefe and a generation of Australians are transported back to Saturday nights glued to a small black-and-white TV screen watching Six O'Clock Rock and its compere, the darling of teenagers everywhere. Ballina Players brings this era to life again in its musical production, Shout: The Legend of the Wild One, opening on Friday. Johnny O'Keefe (played in Shout by Paul Farrell) did more than anyone else to bring Rock and Roll to Australian teenagers and to give them an identity. Players Theatre, Swift St, from 17th June to 9th July. Tix at Just Funkin Music, phone 6686 2440. Book early!

Homegrown Comedy @ OPC!

Standup comedy comes to The Owl and Pussycat in Byron Bay the fourth Wednesday of the month. This is an open mic room which basically means that it's a venue open to the talents of new and upcoming comedians. Open mic rooms are essential in growing new comedy talent. Without a chance to get up and try their stuff, there wouldn't be any Ross Nobles or Dave Hugheses. Comedians need to be nurtured tenderly until they are ready to fruit. Some fruit straight away, some take years, and sadly some wither and die! Every month will be hosted by a seasoned professional. This month features Mandy Nolan. Nolan has been at it now for 25 years, and has worked with some of the best in the industry. Austen Tayshus recently declared 'she's the best female comedian in the country'. Whether it was true or not is hard to tell, no-one was game to heckle. Wednesday 22 June, 6pm. Tix are $5 or $22 for entry, meal and a drink!

Cinema Review

Super 8

You know that you'll get a lot of bang for your buck when writer/director JJ Abrams is at the helm of a big-budget flick such as this. With Steven Spielberg as producer (his imprimatur is all over it), you can also rely on precedence being given to story over effects (spectacular though they are), and on an old-fashioned, positive moral tone asserting itself, with the hopefulness of ET never far away. In the blue-collar town of Lillian, Ohio, Joe (Joel Courtney) and a handful of his junior-high mates are making a short zombie movie that they hope will be selected in an upcoming festival. Joe's recently widowed father, Deputy Lamb, disapproves of his son's activities, but must cope with a much more serious problem when a freight train explodes during a derailment, setting free a terrifying but unseen power (in defending his community and protecting his boy, the Deputy's plight is similar to the Sheriff's in Jaws). Thrown into the mix is the element of young love, as Joe falls head over heels for Alice (Elle Fanning – Dakota's younger sister), the gorgeous blonde who will be star of the kids' movie. In a master-class of how to build suspense, Abrams shifts emphasis from the parallel plotlines involving Joe and his father until they become inexorably linked. The outstanding child actors, the perfect, breathless pacing, the refreshing absence of cynicism and the celebration of the art and craft of film-making all combine to create a sense of unsullied youthful adventure. That Dr Woodward survived the collision with the train stretches a friendship, and how, at the end, the kids got themselves out of the pit is anybody's guess (it's as though there has been a whole scene edited out for brevity's sake), but what the hell – this is, by a country mile, the best sci-fi thriller/monster movie that has come our way for yonks. If you only deign to see one of its genre this year, make it this. ~ John Campbell

Oranges And Sunshine

Like father like son. Director Jim Loach, following in his dad Ken's estimable footsteps, has made a character-driven film that avowedly steers clear of any mawkish sentimentality that its subject might so easily have succumbed to in less scrupulous hands (ironically, expecting a more lachrymose treatment, I thought it emotionally rather dry). Set in 1986, it follows English social worker Margaret Humphrey (Emily Watson) in her tireless efforts to right the wrongs suffered by thousands of children who were deported by sea to Australia in the 1950s and until the early 1970s. It's one of those peculiar movies whose audience is made up almost exclusively of those who wish primarily (one suspects) for their own sense of justifiable outrage to be acknowledged and shared (it's a sort of communion). Which is to say, it's a story that 'needs to be told', but is told to those already familiar with it. Heartfelt though it is, because there is not much plot, the film is nobbled by having said what it wants to say midway through, after which it is inclined to labour the point, focusing on the inhumane treatment meted out to many of the boys by the Christian Brothers (as a counter, it must be offered that, as with the 'stolen generations', those who benefited from their relocations – and there must have been some – are never mentioned). As Len, an unbowed survivor of the regime whom Margaret helps in reuniting with his mother, David Wenham gives a typically idiosyncratic performance that is especially welcome in juxtaposition to Watson's steady monochrome – the pair singing along with Cat Stevens's Wild World on the car radio is, oddly, one of the most touching scenes. Putting it all into shocking context (it now reads like a perverted joke) is our spineless government's intention to wash their hands of any responsibility towards the needy and ship unescorted children seeking sanctuary in the Land of the Fair Go [sic] to the sunshine of Malaysia. Shame on us. ~ John Campbell

1. Sarah Palin satirist Tina Fey successfully transfers her persona to the big screen in the comedy Baby Mama (Prime, Friday, 8.30pm).
2. As well as being an arsehole in real life, Frank Sinatra plays one in the highly-acclaimed musical Pal Joey (ABC2, Saturday, 8.30pm) alongside the stunning Kim Novak and Rita Hayworth.
3. The talented Charlize Theron performs a double twist forward pike into the dog of an SF movie Aeon Flux (Eleven, Sunday, 8.30pm), distinguished by its CGI overload and lack of credible scriptwriting. Catch Super 8 at the flicks instead.

WITH LILITH

Midweek full moon eclipse highlights truth issues – as in how to filter out the truth from the overload of junk information on offer? By keeping it simple and asking who profits...

♈ ARIES: This week's Zap Oracle correctly notes that unsolved problems are our greatest teachers because they keep us on our toes. Absolutists and fundamentalists want closure, but it takes tremendous patience and inner strength to resist premature solutions. In other words all the way to heaven...

♉ TAURUS: Wintry weather's a big incentive for indulging in comfort hibernating and foody, friendly pleasures. All seasonally cozy and astrologically in sync, with midweek full moon prime time for revising priorities – some financial, but more importantly how to give back to existence for its gifts.

♊ GEMINI: With the present star scenario enhancing your personal magic, midweek Sagittarius full moon adds substance to your style and sees you speaking out on important issues. Late week Capricorn moon and your ruling planet Mercury's move to nesty Cancer place family interactions centre stage.

♋ CANCER: A moon wobble/eclipse combo make this week un auspicious for big decisions, so wait till next week when the full moon overload of weird fears, doubts and uncertainty have dissipated and Jupiter's thrown down a stabilising anchor before chucking in that job/relationship/creative masterpiece.

♌ LEO: Don't believe everything you hear or read this week because disinformation's rife. Or try to convince others what's right, because as innovative thinker Buckminster Fuller figured out, you don't change things by fighting existing reality – but by creating something new that makes the existing model obsolete.

♍ VIRGO: With your planetary ruler Mercury in networking Gemini influential connections enrich your life so ditch cool and aloof, aim for socially spontaneous. Earth-sign-friendly Jupiter's working group dynamics to your advantage and suggests tweaking your personal packaging with a fresh look or a new do.

♎ LIBRA: Saturn's liberating shakeup in Libra makes it easier this week to let go of beliefs that separate you from others – to be less judgmental, more understanding. Along with your revitalised mindset, daily routines benefit from a fresh approach, like accepting invitations to things you mightn't usually do.

♏ SCORPIO: As Scorpio poet Keats wrote Truth is beauty, and stalking it this week could stimulate volcanic responses, though on the bright side, long stony silences aren't likely. Jupiter in your relationship zone lifts invisible restrictions and restocks your skills kitbag with some groovy new tools.

♐ SAGITTARIUS: While your ruling planet Jupiter's sign change activates constructive shifts, midweek full moon's eclipse in your sign could feel destabilising, so don't commit to more than you can easily deliver. Be discriminating. And prepared to negotiate, because others will benefit from your counsel as arbitrator or adjudicator.

♑ CAPRICORN: If there's been some uncomfortable karmic accounting in the life of Capricorn recently, Saturn your planetary ruler moving forward in the sign of fairness opens up formerly closed situations and richer opportunities, with all manner of encouraging friends and unexpected allies coming through for you.

♒ AQUARIUS: Jupiter in your home zone brings expansion in the form of renos, extensions, upgrades or simple rejigs of your existing space to a more satisfying balance. And with Venus in a fellow mind-sign buffing up your popularity, the Aquaverse is this week's liveliest address.

♓ PISCES: Thinking it's about time for some fun? This week's celestial weather report forecasts delightful surprises and delicious twists. And while you mightn't think a spiritual inventory's necessary, certain misapprehensions on your part are going to need clarifying before you can proceed in a particular area.

CHESS by Ian Rogers

Play at Byron Services Club, Mon 7-10pm

in Britain – though it was a success when shown, dubbed, in Germany. When time came to record a new series in 1984, the BBC said that it would not make a new series until the old one had been shown, something the ABS refused to allow.

The Master Game died and was never seen again – until now.

Thanks to the wonders of YouTube, a special channel has been opened, on www.youtube.com/user/Sirb0b1#g/u, with games from the first three Master Game series available online.

Now it is possible for modern chess fans to watch the greats of that era – Korchnoi, Larsen, Miles – competing and explaining their thoughts. The unique voice of Czech legend Vlastimil Hort – soon to defect to the West – is also a highlight.

Sadly the 1983 series seems to be lost forever, so there is no chance to see World Champion Karpov as well.

Chess aficionados have always been proud that chess notation enabled them to replay games from any era, almost as good as a video replay of the game. However Master Game shows that a real video replay beats chess notation any day.

■ Current World Champion Viswanathan Anand completed a 4.5-1.5 victory against Alexei Shirov this week at an exhibition match of rapid games in Leon, Spain. Anand, a new father, who is in the middle of a January to September break from serious play, scored his most crushing win in the following game, the second of the match.

Baby Bears and Blue Ballet

Victoria Cosford

When I met half of the new ownership of Bangalow's Satiare it coincided with the extraction from the oven of a cake. Katrina Kanetani, priestess of sweet things, asked me if I would like to accompany coffee with a slice of her Pumpkin and Prune Cake – a question that barely required a response.

And it was wonderful – wonderful in the way that a cake whipped freshly out of the oven always is, wonderful because of the lush moistness the barely detectable pumpkin had endowed.

Pumpkins are, after all, technically a fruit, and their use in sweet dishes more logical than in savoury. In both the Middle East and India that's where they usually end up. Lately on our Sunday drives along curvy hinterland roads we have been passing displays of pumpkins at little roadside stalls alongside their honesty tins for the few dollars they ask of you. According to Frank and Tania Walker of Walker Farms – whose organic pumpkins spoil you forever, rendering you incapable of ever eating a supermarket one again – these are pumpkins grown through the summer months. The Walkers themselves can grow pumpkins all year around because their Upper Burringbar property rarely experiences the frost to which most of the rest of the region is exposed. Even the excessively wet spells which ruined so many crops this past season left the Walkers relatively unscathed: they are so hilly the rain just runs off the land. While they lost some of their pumpkin crop over summer it was not substantial enough to matter.

The diversity of pumpkins is extraordinary. Consider some of these names – many are heirloom, or rare, or only found in certain parts of the world. Black Forest, Amish Pie, Pink Banana, Aladdin Mini Turban, Sunshine, Jack-be-Quick, Baby Bear, Hooligan, Charisma, Baby Boo, Cotton Candy and Blue Ballet. And that is only a token gesture of all the varieties that abound. I have always loved Butternut for its – well, buttery nuttiness, or nutty butteriness – but also Jap, often called Kent out of political correctness. Tania tells me her favourite is the Ironbark – grown out west and often difficult to come by – because it is hard and dry. In fact the ironbark is an heirloom variety with a reputation for its excellent keeping qualities and its sweet taste.

Of course I have to ask Tania how she likes best to cook pumpkin. Her answer is baked, with the barest touch of oil: pumpkin, then, at its most intense. And before I can say how, when making a classic lasagna, I like to add layers of sliced roast pumpkin to the ragu/bechamel/pasta/cheese ones, here she is telling me about her Pumpkin Lasagna, sans meat: just those other elements but pumpkin the starring role. Then she tells me about a woman she knows who bakes a small pumpkin in its entirety until it is completely cooked through – 'she cooks and cooks and cooks it' – until the centre has become caramelised, all those natural sugars – and then she serves it with ice cream.

So there it is again, pumpkin as a sweet, and a method definitely worth trying out sometime. Here is another lovely thing to do with pumpkin, a Jane Grigson recipe for Turkish Candied Pumpkin you can make with your roadside fruit, or a Walker wonder-pumpkin.

TURKISH CANDIED PUMPKIN

Peel and seed 1 kg slice of pumpkin cut into chunks 3 cm long. Bring 250 g sugar and 150 ml water to the boil, stirring, then add the pumpkin and over a very low heat cook at least an hour. Cover pan at first, then remove toward the end so the juices evaporate to a syrup. Chill if desired then serve with toasted walnuts and thick cream.

Dogged Digby solves the energy problem

Horatio Bitemark

As our accountant recently pointed out, the projected shocking increase in power costs would hardly affect the Club's budget, unless the price topped 1.2 million Swiss francs per kilowatt hour. However we were determined not to be left behind in the switch to green power. The Bentleys already ran on a mixture of ghee and turnip leaves, but it was time to convert the clubhouse as well.

Tosser Digby, well known in these pages for his prowess at huntin' and fishin' and shootin' – though having no truck with political parties of that bent – came up with an ingenious solution. I have recorded on several occasions his panache at disposing with a variety of weaponry the unwanted hounds which stray too close to our pastures green. Now he combined that interest with our need for clean energy. Taking a 1961 Land Rover from one of the garages, he converted the undercarriage to all-terrain technology developed for the Mars probe by a boffin with whom he played gin rummy during university days. To the driver's side he attached a mechanical arm equipped with a high-tensile nylon net, not unlike the lepidopterist's standard gear in design, only much bigger.

With this rig Digby headed off into the Shire's rolling hills, where a plague of wild dogs had been recently reported. On the way he disposed of the dreaded Pomeranian of Federal – owned by one June Baskerville, a retired sadist – much to the village's rejoicing. The bush basher handled the rough paddocks with aplomb and in no time at all Digby had scooped up a brace of slaving mongrels and returned with his catch to the clubhouse.

This he did repeatedly. The landowners were delighted and, thinking him to be a registered shooter, pressed upon him money which he hastily declined. Apprised of the real situation, the farmers and cottagers and exiled merchant bankers then plied Digby with produce – lemons, marmalade, home-made wine, a raft of grilled ducks in aspic – which the good chap felt obliged to accept out of sheer courtesy. One comely rural lass went so far as to engage him in a spot of horizontal folk dancing, which put him off his aim for several days. Digby also used the expedition as an excuse to call in on the renowned footballer, Gil Crespy of Goonengerry, with whom he shared a bottle of cabernet merlot and tales from their time in the African league when, like Albert Camus, Digby played goalie for Algeria while Crespy was flourishing with the Ghana All-Stars.

Back at the clubhouse we assembled the motley of mutts on a treadmill, a holographic vision of an escaping bunny before them. Sanders the butler, whose background in civil engineering was hitherto unknown to me, rigged up a turbine to the clubhouse and the ineffable set off in pursuit of the unreachable. By this means we pumped a vast kilowattage back into the grid and managed to heat both the Shire's public pools at no cost to the council.

We toasted Digby's inventiveness and our successful conversion to canine energy with the 1998 Bleeding Heart Pooch Fancier Rough Claret, wet on the nose with a bouquet of relieved bandicoot.

The dogs were spelled, of course, between bouts on the treadmill and fared better than they ever would in the wild. A visit from an irate member of the Dogs Are Human Coalition ended well when we had the gamekeeper bury her in the north quarter.

Yamba Buccaneers pillage Moonshiner territory

Flanker Damian Browning goes all out on the line-in, but the Pirates proved too hearty for the Shiners. Photo Tree Faerie.

Dean Trevaskis

A youthful Moonshiners side continued the learning curve on Saturday when the Yamba Buccaneers pulled off a 16 – 3 hit-and-run ambush at the Stan Thompson Sports fields.

Both sides were under strength as a result of Liz’s birthday. It was Yamba that made the most of their opportunities scoring an early five pointer.

Mullum hit back with a solid run of possession that resulted in a series of penalties deep in the Buccaneers’ forty.

The first was a three pointer, the second ricocheted off the post, the third was used to attack. Despite big runs from Dave Dixon and Lachlan Stub-bings, Mullum had a good sniff of the line but couldn’t trouble the scoreboard. On the back of excellent kicking games by their ten and fifteen Yamba was winning the duel for field position.

For the Shiners Seymour ‘I’m really a prop’ Walters was in everything, he is the veteran of the side and ageing like a good bottle of red. At half time the score was 8 – 3 Yamba’s way. Despite much encouragement from the hardy punters that braved the winter chill, Mullum could not find the way home.

Undisciplined penalties were self-inflicted body shots thwarting the Mullum momentum and gifting the Buccaneers too much easy ball. Darcy Stephens was displaying poise beyond his years at full back and Teale Pyne continued to show his leadership qualities with some big runs and hits from inside centre. However Yamba were dominating the line outs, kicking brilliantly and getting the maximum out of their makeshift team. Mullum continued to play its bold brand of Rugby, pushing for maximum points with every penalty.

It was not to be though and Yamba ran out deserving winners by 13 points. Due to a quirk in the draw the Moonshine ship will be sailing South to Yamba on Saturday to return the favour and blow the Buccaneers off the park.

Bangalow v Byron

Like the opening scene from a horror movie, the steam played on the paddock under lights at the Bangalow Sports Fields last Friday night, laying in wait for the first game of a Bangalow versus Byron local derby double header.

By all accounts it was an exciting game and though the temperature droppped deathly low, few spectators dared leave the sidelines so riveted were their eyes to the on-field play.

Byron shot out of the blocks from the first whistle and dominated the home side. Throughout the initial stanza the Byron forwards moved down the field in a unit lead by captain Josh Smith that left the opposition shaken. Ground position dominance soon led to penalty points on the board.

Byron’s slick backline had space to move and crisp, precision passes from the base of the scrumage by Steve White had star Irish fly half Frank Kearney running free with ball in hand and linking up with ‘Kiwi Dj Sean Reily’ who drove the attack deep into enemy territory which finished in a barnstorming try to captain Joshie.

Good forward play led to another down field attack with the backs slicing into space and some very fine footwork by Tom getting him over the try line.

By half-time Byron led 8-6. True to character, the Bangalow side came out into the second half with re-newed vigour. Two penalties to Mitch Loane meant Byron could have a quick breath before Banga’s forwards found that grinding formula that has been so successful for them in preceding years and started to advance, which in turn gave their backs some space. Momentum shifted, points s came and before anyone could blink the home side was in front 16-14 and the local crowd found their voice.

Byron was forced to dig deep and our backline defence was led from the front by Robert ‘the Governor’ Lynch.

Byron’s forwards worked themselves back into the fold and some good tactical kicking saw Byron in a position to land another penalty and put them in front 17-16.

As last Friday’s game was a make-up of a previous washed-out bout, a strange twist of timing and fate, see the two teams meet again this weekend. See part two of the double header on Saturday at 2.30pm in Byron.

Game on boys!

Crankin' what's happening in the surf

Despite not taking a finals position in the premier division, local girls also an exceptional day at the Yoga For Surfers All Girls Surf Showdown with Byron Bay's Isabelle Braley winning the Pro longboard division and collecting a handy $500 and Suffolk Park's Kirstin Ogden winning the Pro Junior division. The 16-year-old adds this as yet another win to her already impressive career in surfing.

'I never thought I'd win the Junior Pro, the field was so strong' said Ogden. 'It is always a great field that competes here and to win feels great - I just went out there to gain experience at this level and to win is unbelievable!'

Ogden also won the 16 and under division earlier in the day.

Isabelle Braley's win sets the scene for an interesting few months ahead with invites to surf in the two biggest ASP Longboard events in the world in China and France. 'I really want to compete in China but I'm also finishing my studies so it's difficult to meet all my commitments,' said Braley.

'France is the first of the two major longboard events and I don't think I can get there and non-attendance might affect my position in the China event so I'm unsure about these major events but I'm keen and really want to compete and today's win helps my cause for sure!'

Sunshine Coast Queensland surfers dominated the Yoga For Surfers All Girls Surf Showdown Open Pro with Mooloolaba's Chiana Ireland posting the biggest win of her career to win an exciting final narrowly defeating fellow Sunshine Coaster Sophie Callister from Noosa.

Ireland sealed the victory on her last wave late in the final when she scored the top scoring ride of a 7.5 for a long peeling left which she surfed to the fullest to secure the win. 'What a great event to win,' 18-year-old Chiana said after the final.

'This event has a great history and all the girls were ripping today and I can't believe I've won it - I knew after that last wave I'd be a chance but you ever really know until it's announced and right now I'm really excited.'

Past winners of this event include four-time ASP world champion Stephanie Gilmore along with current world number 2 rated surfer Sally Fitzgibbons, highlighting the prestige of the event and Ireland today joined an outstanding list of previous winners.

On an uncharacteristically freezing day at Lennox Head, the waves remained clean and good all day and three Sunshine Coast surfers which included Noosa's Naomi Stevic dominated the Open division with Stevic placing fourth while south coast NSW surfer Skye Burgess placed third.

It was the 19th year of the All Girls Surf Showdown, an outstanding achievement for a great event and everyone looks forward to next year's 20th anniversary!

Divisional Finals Results:

Southern Cross Credit Union Open Pro: 1. Chiana Ireland (Mooloolaba), 2 Sophie Callister (Noosaville), 3 Skye Burgess (Lake Heights/Sth Coast NSW), 4 Naomi Stevic (Noosa)

All Girls Surfriders Club Longboard Pro: 1 Isabelle Braley (Byron Bay), 2 Emma Webb (Jan Juc/Victoria), 3 Roisin Carolan (NSW), 4 Maz Pentecost (Lennox Head)

Suns' behind a North cloud

The Gold Coast Suns are still getting into the swing of their AFL berth and round 12 of the Premiership Season saw them play host to the North Melbourne Football Club and invite them into their new lounge room for a game of footy.

It was a big call to match the 21,000 that attended the inaugural home game but 14,000 attended Saturday night's game which is a good attendance for a Kangaroos match.

The first quarter wasn't one of the Suns' best performances for a side that's won plenty of respect in recent weeks for its attacking football and fighting efforts even in the face of inevitable defeat, the match for the Gold Coast was truly dispiriting: missed tackles, schoolboy handballs and a borderline uncompetitive lack of urgency.

The Kangaroos, playing on what so nearly became their home patch, had three goals before the Suns had rubbed the sleep from their eyes.

The Suns did manage to score goals in the second quarter and did put the brakes on the Roos if only the handbrake, holding back for only 2:4 in the second.

The Suns kept up the same plodding pace with another 2:4 in the third which saw North score 5:4.

The Suns did rally to gain some level of occupancy on their home turf and in a huge push scored as many goals in the fourth as they had for the entire match, but the Kangaroos would have none of that and blew the match apart with a convincing win of 59 points.

'The meek may inherit the earth - but they will never win games of football.'

Men's Health Week It's ok to be blokey

In a week when the supremely fit men of league defend the honour of their origin, men's health researchers at the University of Western Sydney say all Australian blokes could boost their own wellbeing by just watching the game at home with mates and playing a bit of local sport at weekends.

This year 'Origin Week' coincides with International Men's Health Week (13-19 June) - when the floodlights spill from the sports arena to highlight the challenges facing all males.

The State of Origin showcases some of Australia's best male athletes in action and highlights the importance of physical fitness, training, good health and team work to achieve goals. Unfortunately, Australian males still face a life expectancy five years shorter than females, but taking cues from elite and amateur sportsmen alike, there are some simple measures blokes can take to improve their health and wellbeing.

A study by Dr Neil Hall, from the UWS School of Social Sciences, has found men and boys are getting much more from playing in their local sports matches than just physical fitness.

'Sport provides a way for men and boys to connect with each other, to form broad social networks and build a sense of belonging. It is about mateship but also much more,' says Dr Hall.

'Positive social connections and feeling you are a valued member of the community are increasingly recognised as key factors in determining health outcomes much the same as physical indicators such as blood pressure, cholesterol or weight.'

The study tracked the experiences of a group of young males aged 16 to 25 who play sport in Western Sydney.

Dr Hall found sport helps to build self worth and provides positive community recognition for males, particularly young men.

'Participating in sport is an effective way for young men to engage with society - a means of contributing to the life of their community and to be positively recognised and acknowledged by their community,' he says.

Mr Anthony Brown from the University of Western Sydney's Men's Health Information and Resource Centre (MHIRC) says, 'even just getting your mates together to watch the State of Origin or any other sporting match has benefits for men's health and wellbeing.

'The footy game provides the opportunity to hang out with friends which can be a great way to boost your wellbeing. The camaraderie helps to strengthen social connections which are essential to good health.

Mr Brown says improving the health outcomes for Australian males is much more than biology, medicine and psychology.

'The National Male Health Policy recognises the social determinants of health - employment, access to good housing, community connections, family support - are equally important to meeting the challenge of improving male life expectancy to match that of females,' he says.

Based in the UWS School of Biomedical and Health Sciences, the Men's Health Information and Resource Centre designs, develops and supports research and projects which contribute to the enhancement of the health and wellbeing of men and boys across every aspect of their lives from personal to family, work and the community.

Keep in touch with market changes

Matt Towner

The most important step when putting your property on the market is to establish a realistic value. A comparative market analysis is how real estate is valued and of course values change as the market changes. It is very important that you stay aware of these market changes which are caused by economic and political and social factors as well as media and public opinion.

In any market, in order to achieve the best possible price as easily and as quickly as possible, an accurate price indication is imperative. Whether you are determining your listing price for a private treaty or the reserve price for an auction, it is most important that you look at what has sold most similarly and most recently. What is on the market which is comparable is of interest and important to buyers but what has sold is fact and evidence. Although real estate is not an exact science, this fact and evidence is what prices property.

Position is always important when pricing properties and proximity to beach or town or acreages offering total privacy in strong performing areas are much more likely to sell faster and achieve a higher price. Attractive homes with unique features will attract more buyers and higher prices than properties lacking visual appeal. Renovated properties or those with good renovation potential will do better than those without.

First impressions are important and the front of a house and the gardens make a big difference to values, especially in the eyes of the buyer. Clean and tidy homes of course sell much better than tired and worn out dwellings and patching and painting can work wonders. However, it is often not necessary to undertake major renovations like kitchens and bathrooms as nine times out of ten the buyers will want completely different renovations.

Preparing your property for sale adds to the value at which you can then realistically price the property, taking in to consideration the prevailing market conditions such as the state of the economy, the level of interest rates, the number of homes for sale and the demand from buyers. Once you have presented the property nicely and priced the property properly, it is then the art of promotion that assists you to sell the property.

A good real estate agent will have years of experience at presenting and pricing and promoting properties for sale but again all of these factors change as the market changes and it is important to review your situation on a regular basis.

• Matt Towner is a real estate agent with Unique Estates. Matt has won Top Regional Salesperson and Excellence in Real Estate awards, and still holds the record for the highest price paid on Paterston Street in Byron Bay. He has recently become the exclusive real estate agent for an island in the Whitsundays.

NSW the state of renovators

Despite cost of living and interest rate concerns, almost half of NSW home buyers think it's a good time to invest in property – and more than any other state or territory in Australia, they are most prepared to carry out renovations when purchasing a property, according to the latest poll released by mortgage provider Homeloans Ltd.

The Homeloans Home Buyer Barometer Q2 2011, which surveyed 2,000 Australian first home buyers, homeowners and investors, found that 47 per cent in NSW believe the market is right to invest in property, one in three (35 per cent) were unable to give an opinion, while almost a fifth (18 per cent) were adamant that now definitely isn't the right time to be buying.

And although the research shows brand new properties or properties requiring no renovation are the most in demand in NSW, with 59 per cent of respondents saying this is what they would prefer, a huge 26 per cent of those surveyed are looking to buy property that requires renovation. This compares to only 12 per cent in Western Australia, 19 per cent in South Australia and Victoria and 20 per cent in Queensland. Just 18 per cent in NSW would prefer to build their own.

Australia-wide, interest rate concerns have taken a backseat to the rising cost of living, which is the top financial concern for homeowners and home buyers.

In NSW, the key financial concerns were increasing cost of everyday living (33 per cent), followed by interest rates (24 per cent). On a state by state basis, home buyers in New South Wales were the most worried about costs associated with raising a family (11 per cent).

Last week Backlash called for headlines suitable for our 50th birthday in 2036, and Sapoty Brook offered 'CO2 removal: now below 350ppm!' Norman Appel and Magenta Appel-Pye went wild and produced: 'Mullumbimby Youth Centre celebrates its 10th year in the old Woolworths site', 'Bumper local hemp crop earns billions in export dollars', 'Mungo MacCallum beatified', 'Inaugural meeting of the Mullumbimby Surf Life Saving Club', 'Council to start fixing up vintage potholes', and 'Mandy Nolan pregnant again!', among others. Backlash gives thanks for good response.

For those who missed the screenings of the fabulous Echo Doco – Born To Be Trouble, don't despair. There are plans afoot for a tour of local halls next month, starting with Ocean Shores on July 1, Mullum Drill Hall July 8, then Federal, Bangalow and possibly Lennox to follow.

Currently we are being bombarded with letters and gripes about bad drivers. We don't have enough space to publish them all. One chap is looking for help in finding a tradesperson's white ute which lost its ladder and struck another car opposite the new sportsfields on Ewingsdale Road on Tuesday May 31 at 4pm. Thankfully the 1966 Chevy Impala was left hand drive and the ladder missed the driver as it went through the windscreen. If you have any info call the Byron Bay police or email bryan@sevensurfboards.com. In addition one of our drudges was almost totalled by a 4WD on Keys Bridge near Federal. 'Apart from having right of way, I was actually already on the bridge when this bloke came screaming on to it,' notes our disgruntled scribe. See also letters for a gripe about the bad drivers whinge epidemic.

On a happier note, Lyn Fisher offers 'a warm-hearted thank you to the kind, thoughtful woman who picked up my obviously lost little white dog in Mullum last Tuesday and took him to the vet's. The pop-gun from the school sports day terrifies him, so he must have decided to go somewhere quieter. If you're at the market on Saturday, do call in to say hello and select something off my stall.'

Marie Lawton is heading off to Cambodia in July and will be working in a clinic for an NGO called New Hope. They apparently need kids' clothes and Marie wants to take some over. If you can help, phone Marie on 0434 552 283.

The Australian Government Mobile Office is rolling in to Mullumbimby on Wednesday June 15, 10am-3pm, in the council chambers car park, offering 'easy access to government payments and services', notably Centrelink and Medicare. Find out more at www.centrelink.gov.au under 'A' in the A to Z index, or call 13 2316.

Energywatch.com.au is offering 25 $2,000 grants to not-for-profit community organisations to help with power costs. Apply online before 5pm on Friday June 24.
