

Uranium protest links to Japan's nuclear fallout

Hans Lovejoy

BHP Billiton (BHPB) has told The Echo it will be business as usual at the Roxby Downs uranium mine in South Australia when the planned Lizard's Revenge protest rolls into the small town in mid July.

Activists from all over Australia will converge to highlight the dangers of uranium and the mine's expansion, and it will come just after last weekend's anti-nuclear demonstration in Japan.

The New York Times reported protesters numbered between 20,000 and 45,000 in Tokyo, who were against restarting the nation's nuclear power plants. The Japanese government approved restarting two reactors on the western side of the country in a bid to head off expected summer power shortages. It has been described as the largest protest in central Tokyo since the 1960s.

A Fairfax journalist at the Roxby Downs Sun newspaper told The Echo that BHP and the police are playing down the protest, but says they have heard residents say they are a bit worried about vandalism as it has happened in the past.

'BHP said to me that business will continue as usual, but I have heard otherwise,' she said, 'It's a bit frustrating because it's hearsay and you can't report hearsay.'

She said all BHP employees are required to sign confidentiality agreements. 'You can't even say to anyone outside the company that your co-worker cut his finger.'

Letterbox DVD drop

Co-organiser for the upcoming Mullumbimby anti-nuclear fundraising event, Anthea Amore, says the local contingent are planning a letterbox drop in Roxby Downs of the anti-uranium documentary DVD When The Dust Settles by filmmaker David Bradbury.

'We are also raising funds to get Dr Helen Caldicott, international anti-nuclear activist and paediatrician, to travel to Roxby Downs to speak to mothers there about the dangers of nuclear radiation,' Amore says. 'She says there is no safe exposure levels to uranium, despite whatever is said otherwise.'

The festival/protest was called at the request of longtime anti-nuke warrior and Indigenous elder Kevin Buzzacott, or 'Uncle Kevin'.

Dreamtime story

The name Lizard's Revenge comes from an Aboriginal dreamtime story from that area, filmmaker David Bradbury told The Echo.

'Kevin Buzzacott says his people's dreaming story speaks of a giant lizard, Kalta, who lies under the ground at the area around Roxby Downs and the story goes that this lizard should never have its head or back broken or the world as we know it will cease to exist. Kalta is angry because the Olympic Dam uranium mine is digging into his back; he wants revenge.'

The anti-nuclear fundraising event, 'Uranium Boom; Nuclear Doom,' is planned at Mullumbimby RSL on Friday July 6. A Skype hook-up with anti-nuclear activists in Japan is planned, along with the screening of When The Dust Settles. Mandy Nolan will MC the evening with plenty of entertainers: world music duo Nakula, belly dancer Tara Murphy, poet Gina Lakosta, and DJ Sheik Yerbooty. The headliners are reggae bands Fyah Walk, Raz Bin Sam and the Lion I plus country gospel band The Lucky Wonders.

A 13-seat mini-van is leaving July 10 or 11 and there's room: Call Iris on 0417 937 720. For more info on Lizard's Revenge see: <http://lizardsrevenge.net>.

NAIDOC week in full flight

Pictured is the 'Bigal Nali Jagun' dancers: Rebes Reuben, Uncle Lewis Walker, Nigel Stewart and Uncle Magpie Currie, who marked the start of NAIDOC week on Monday at the Mullumbimby Council chambers. Up to Thursday this week, there will be plenty to do: a family fun day is planned for Tuesday at the Mullumbimby Neighbourhood Centre from 11am; on Wednesday, the Arakwal website will be launched at the Byron Cultural and Community Centre (4pm), as well as a screening of Walking With My Sisters from 6.30pm. And on Thursday, a march from Railway Park 10am is planned with free entertainment, BBQ, kids' activities and more to be held at Main Beach Park until 2pm. Photo Jeff Dawson

Belongil's foreshore breached on high tide

Video footage of last weekend's high tide lapping over sandbags near Manfred Street in Belongil has been sent to Byron Shire councillors and staff.

Belongil resident and Byron Preservation Association (BPA) vice-president John Vaughan sent the footage via email, and is calling for a review and halt of the current interim works being carried out on the shoreline.

He claims the footage shows 'the orientation of the geobags is still contrary to the consent and is 90 degrees out of the correct alignment as approved in the DA in all locations.'

Mr Vaughan also added, 'The compromised and damaged condition of the interim works since May 2009, particularly at the base levels, is common at all four of the interim work sites at Belongil Beach. It proves BPA's repeated claim of Council's failure to monitor and maintain/rebuild as required in the interim wall consent conditions.'

Complaint lodged to NSW ombudsman

'The BPA considers that a quick inspection at low tide would reveal to any councillor the very compromised state of the interim works,' he said.

The erosion, according to Mr Vaughan, is 'by more than three metres from its recent higher profile pre the mid-June event.'

'Council's Jonson Street works is trapping sand and preventing the natural recovery rate at Belongil Beach. The beach profile at Belongil is lower than it would have been in the beach's natural state.'

Mr Vaughn says he has also lodged a recent complaint to the NSW ombudsman regarding 'Council's failure to conform to the consent conditions which outlines the current state of repair of the interim works.'

A Council spokesperson, when contacted by The Echo, said Council wasn't unable to comment at this time.

Metgasco may have misled inquiry

Chris Dobney

NSW Greens mining spokesperson Jeremy Buckingham has questioned whether Metgasco misled the upper house CSG inquiry regarding its wastewater disposal regime.

'The recent acknowledgement by the Environmental Protection Authority (EPA) that Metgasco was illegally disposing of coal-seam gas water at the Casino Sewage Treatment Plant (STP) appears to contradict some of the evidence given by Metgasco at the inquiry,' Mr Buckingham said last week.

He went on to quote Hansard over a conversation between himself and Metgasco's COO Michael O'Brien in evidence given to the inquiry last December.

During the conversation Mr Buckingham asked how Metgasco disposed of its wastewater and Mr O'Brien responded that the water was held in 'above-ground holding ponds'.

When Mr Buckingham queried whether they were evaporation ponds (which have been banned), Mr O'Brien replied, 'They are holding ponds. In the Casino area you get significant rainfall; you also get some evaporation. Over a 12-month period you will get net evaporation out of those ponds.'

Mr Buckingham then pushed the point about disposal.

'The only way you deal with produced water and drilling fluids is to hold them in those ponds?' he asked.

To which Mr O'Brien responded, 'Currently, for our production pilots, that is the case.'

But the Environmental Defenders Office has told The Echo that Casino STP admitted it had accepted and treated a total of 1.36 megalitres of wastewater from Metgasco between May 3 last year and March 9 this year. That information is confirmed in a letter to that office from the EPA dated June 7, 2012. The Echo has sighted a copy of the letter.

Mr Buckingham said he would write to the committee and ask it to look into the matter.

'It is extremely serious to mislead a parliamentary inquiry,' he said. 'What is clear is that Metgasco is continuing to treat the Casino, Lismore and Kyogle communities with contempt and dishonesty in relation to their plans. To any fair-minded person the construction of their so-called 'temporary storage' pond at Casino is a clear breach of the government's no evaporation ponds policy.'

Byron market fees set to rise

Byron markets are set to have a $10 increase for the basic fee of having a site in an effort to help with beautification and marketing.

'It will be rising from $30 to $40,' manager Tess Cullen told The Echo. 'We held off as there has been tough economic times, and it hasn't been raised in six years,' she said.

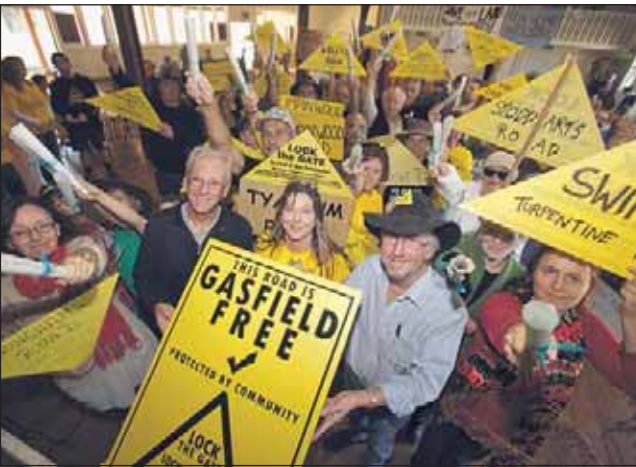

'After I did a survey a couple of years ago, the response from market holders was that beautification of the site, with trees and seats, would be very desirable.'

Ms Cullen is also developing a zero-waste campaign, and says the market's waste system needs updating.

But she claims that the market grounds on Butler Street reserve also suffers from sinking soil, which is a result of the land being built on an old tip site.

'It has huge subsidence issues. Just last week I brought in a trailer of soil to fill sinking soil.' She says she has asked Council, who manage the Crown lands, to help fix the ongoing issue but says so far they have not done so.

Tweed likes it unfracked

Tweed mayor Barry Longland, along with Michelle Rawlings and Michael McNamara (Lock the Gate - Tweed) were in Tyalgum on Saturday to accept petitions from residents rejecting gas prospecting. Mr McNamara says he is keen to see the CSG-free communities initiative spread wider and anyone interested can contact him on 6679 3013 or by email at lockthegate.tweed@gmail.com. Myth busters

The myth The reality

You can wash pesticides off non-organic food

If you buy produce that is non-organic, washing the fruit/vegetables may not remove pesticides. Many pesticides used on food are designed to adhere to plants so that they don't wash off in rain (FOE report Feb 2012)

That pesticides do not penetrate the food

It is also valuable to be aware that the foods most likely to contain pesticide residues are wheat products, fruit and vegetables. In terms of this study are also known as systemic pesticides, meaning that they penetrate through the food, often through the roots of the plant. 'Systemic insecticides are incorporated by treated plants. Insects ingest the insecticide while feeding on the plants' (FOE report Feb 2012).

That regulatory bodies control safe levels of pesticide residue

The overall impact of the chemicals can vastly outweigh the effects of the single chemicals yet pesticides continue to be assessed as individual substances. Many of the inert ingredients in pesticides also are toxic, but are not required to be tested for causing chronic diseases such as cancer. For example, xylene is used as the inert ingredient in almost 900 pesticides and has been associated with increased risk of brain tumours, rectal cancer, and leukaemia. (FOE Report Feb 2012).

It is safe to use non-organic normal household products

The report catalogues the growing evidence linking breast cancer to, among other factors: synthetic hormones in pharmaceuticals, cosmetics and meat; pesticides in food; solvents in household cleaning products; BPA in food containers. The report dedicates several chapters to pesticides, focusing on various studies linking triazin herbicides (atrazine, simazine), organochlorins (aldrin, dieldrin, DDT, heptachlor) and the phenoxy herbicide 2,4-D, (FOE Report Feb 2012)

A little pesticide ingestion or exposure can't hurt

According to the 2008-9 President's Cancer Panel Reducing Environmental Cancer Risk "Nearly 1,400 pesticides have been registered (i.e., approved) by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) for agricultural and non-agricultural use. Exposure to these chemicals has been linked to brain/central nervous system (CNS), breast, colon, lung, ovarian (female spouses), pancreatic, kidney, testicular, and stomach cancers, as well as Hodgkin and non-Hodgkin lymphoma, multiple myeloma, and soft tissue sarcoma". References for all of the above statements and reports are at http://www.foe.org.au/sites/default/files/TheDoseMakesThePoisonFeb2012\_0.pdf

That organic produce is expensive

Whilst there is no price you can put on good health Santos cannot be beaten with fruit/veg and bulk foods in like verses like - Santos has the buying power of supermarkets having two outlets and a bulk food warehouse that orders in by the ton - they order by the pallet...not the box - this gives them an edge over their competitors.

If you want to know how much health costs, ask someone who has lost it.

Why Santos Wholelife stands out from the rest

It is not just about the bulk buying power of the three stores, it is the 6 commercial size cold rooms spread throughout their stores in which they keep all dry goods and fresh fruit and vegetables that ensures optimum freshness and the highest level of nutrition possible before arriving on the shelves. Dried foods go rancid very quickly out of refrigeration, it costs a lot more to store and run cold rooms but it has always been Santos policy to maintain the highest quality.

Big Council day of dealing with people's lives

Eve Jeffery

Much of Byron Shire Council's ordinary meeting time was taken up with DAs last Thursday, with 11 applications on the agenda. The majority of both the public access and the morning meeting session was spent looking at DAs.

Council has a reputation for the issue, with the stringent process and the time it takes to deal with DAs.

Cr Simon Richardson and mayoral hopeful says that a lot of the time 'you can feel like you are drowning in paperwork' but maintains the time needs to be taken.

'DAs often take longer because you are dealing with people's lives.

'It might not seem a big thing to everyone else but for that resident there's nothing bigger. It's important that we look at it closely.'

Cr Richardson said there can sometimes be the issue of flogging a dead horse – councillors often can't help themselves by giving their opinion even if they know the vote is going to go against them.

Cr Basil Cameron, another mayoral candidate, says he feels that the Byron Council does take longer than our neighbouring shires in meetings, but it is probably because on the whole we generate bigger agendas.

'We are more enquiring than other councils', he says.

'There is something about our culture here and we are more engaging as far as the DAs go.'

Cr Cameron also says that a lot of time is taken up by section 96 applications, which are alterations to current DAs.

'We have a lot more section 96 applications. Some of the original conditions that Council felt quite strongly about can get changed when some developers want to play the system.'

Have you seen Lee Pawley?

Police are appealing to the public on any information on a woman believed missing.

Lee Pawley, 49, was last seen leaving a motel at Lennox Head on Saturday June 30 in her Toyota Prius.

Ms Pawley, pictured, has failed to return to her home in Newcastle and has not contacted any friends or family.

Police and her family are concerned as her disappearance is out of character.

Ms Pawley is described as being of Caucasian appearance, blond hair, thin build, fair complexion.

She was travelling in a silver 2005 model Toyota Prius with Queensland registration 920-MAW. Anyone who knows Ms Pawley's whereabouts is urged to contact triple-zero.

Mums climb Kilimanjaro for Amnesty

Three Byron Shire mums are about to embark on the biggest challenge of their lives – aside from raising ten children – as they embark in August to climb mount Kilimanjaro in Tanzania.

Co-organiser Rachel Sullivan says the inspiration is to raise funds for Amnesty International. 'We have a deep respect for the work of Amnesty and have pledged to raise at least $15,000 for them during this event,' she says. 'We welcome any donations or sponsorship and we have put together some fantastic raffle prizes.'

Mount Kilimanjaro is the highest mountain in Africa at 5,895 metres or 19,341 feet.

'The girls will climb it for seven days, into temperatures well below zero, camping in small tents and walking for eight-plus hours a day.

'Please do look out for our raffle ticket stall at the Byron and Banglaow farmers markets, at the Chill, Grill and Grind café, opposite the Byron Bay Surf Lifesaving club or the Art Dept 55 florist in Mullumbimby.

Kerry's media insights draws crowds

Hans Lovejoy

Veteran journalist and recent local to the area, Kerry O'Brien, packed out the Bangalow A&I Hall last Saturday afternoon to talk about his career.

It was to benefit the Friends of the ABC, which regularly holds meetings around the Shire.

He described the technology changes in his career as 'staggering', and lamented the spin epidemic of public relations (PR) companies getting material run in the news without much question or scrutiny.

'The average age of journo is now younger as they are cheaper,' he also said. 'But the problem is that the mentorship is missing.'

'News companies don't want to pay for experience it seems.'

When asked about Julian Assange's case, he responded that WikiLeaks embarrassed diplomats and that it potentially inhibits them to be able to engage in frank exchanges. However he added that secret societies are not healthy, and that as far as he is aware, no death has been attributed to WikiLeaks.

Youth service reaches milestone

Di Mahoney

This July, Byron Youth Service (BYS) is celebrating 25 years as the primary provider of youth services in the Byron Shire.

Yay! We figure that's reason enough to put on a few special events and activities to celebrate and acknowledge that 'Young People Matter' in our community.

As many adults would recall, the teenage years are often a time of great change and turbulence for young people.

Not only are their bodies and brains rapidly developing, but their social networks and views of the world are forming also.

They are making sense of a rapidly changing and often challenging world.

They are thinking about their future and their place in the community – what they might like to 'do' or 'be' as they grow into adulthood.

BYS offers a range of programs that support our young people during these years.

Month of prizes

This month we have an awesome raffle with prizes donated by fabulous local businesses.

We will be holding a fundraising celebration on Thursday July 5 at the Youth Activity Centre (YAC), where young people from our hospitality course will be preparing and serving delicious food and cocktails.

There will also be an amazing performance by the youth theatre group BYTE, and we will be talking about our plans to create a new national campaign to reverse youth binge drinking.

Silent auction

The night will include a silent auction of more fabulous donations from our local supporters and it should be lots of fun – so come along with some friends! Tickets are now available.

Look out for us at the markets and around town too – selling raffle tickets, sausages and seafood trays and saying hello!

All the funding we raise will be used to support our outreach programs that help keep our young people safe on the streets of Byron Shire.

For young people there will be some extra fun stuff happening on Friday nights at the YACROCKCAFE during July with a big gig on July 6 and a special birthday party on Friday July 13.

Watch out for more Echo articles about some great things young people are doing, and jump on our website, www.bys.org.au, for all the latest info and support young people in our community.

■ Di Mahoney is the BYS director

Website offers cash to charity groups

Recently launched community website communityengine.com.au is offering cash to local community groups and charities of up to $100,000 when they sign up.

The company says it will donate $1 to your nominated group for every 'follow' you collect above a minimum of $50 and up to $5,000 per group.

The website's aim is to 'help small businesses and community organisations find new customers and members and to stay in touch with existing customers or members by sharing news, photos and sell goods and services online, including special offers.'

Brian Dell from the Lennox Surf Club is hopeful the offer could help to raise funds for the planned upgrade.

'We're fixing up the Surf Club so we can get it into a condition so that it can generate income and be self-sufficient.'

'At the moment we are upgrading the toilets, the kitchen facilities and the disabled access. We are trying to raise money and $5,000 would go a long way toward getting the gear we need. It would be absolutely brilliant.'

Communityengine.com.au claims almost 1000 northern rivers businesses and organisations have signed up already.

This year the company set up shop in Byron Bay.

'Northern rivers residents have held on to their village values in an increasingly global economy so it was a natural place to start the Engine,' says CEO Warren Lee.

The Byron Community Centre is onboard, and membership payments can be made through that website.

Magdalene launch gets Byron treatment

Espresso Head in Byron Bay was decked out with candles, roses and peacock feathers last Friday night to celebrate the international release of Ly de Angeles' latest book Magdalene. The cabaret-style book launch featured performances by Elyjah McLeod and Liam Macgiollarua, while Bertie Page (pictured) performed her Serpentine Act in red corset and gown.

Ms De Angeles read excerpts from Magdalene, which is set amidst the turbulence of war against Roman occupation, spanning two countries and destroying two cultures.

While being a novel, Magdalene includes 'God's Bastards', the author's commentary and research.

Lennox land sale will upgrade club

Luis Feliu

A last-ditch effort to stop Ballina Shire Council selling off two prime beachfront blocks of public land at Lennox Head to the state government for $1.3 million failed last Thursday.

Instead, the proceeds of the controversial sale will be directed to the upgrade of the Lennox Head Surf Lifesaving Club across the road from the two blocks in Ross Street.

Cr Jeff Johnson again failed in his bid for council to withdraw its offer to sell the blocks to the state government for use by the adjoining Lake Ainsworth Caravan Park, which it took control of several years ago.

Cr Johnson said the land was sorely needed for use by a fast-growing community in a highly congested area and councillors should take note of the community outcry over the sale.

He said many saw the sale as 'simply a commercial decision' and council could easily sell large industrial lots it owned instead. 'This should be deferred at least till a review of the Lake Ainsworth Management Plan is completed,' he said.

A packed public gallery watched the long and sometimes heated debate in which mayor Phil Silver threatened to take action against Cr Johnson after he described the alternative proposal to redirect the sale proceeds to the surf club as a 'bribe'.

But in the end, Cr Johnson voted with all other councillors for Cr David Wright's motion to redirect the sale proceeds to the surf club after Cr Johnson's motion was shot down 7-3, with only Crs Sharon Cadwallader and Sue Meehan backing it.

Lennox Head Chamber of Commerce president Louise Owen again appealed to councillors, saying council should sell other land it owned first before a prime block, which should be retained for the benefit of all locals and visitors.

Petition of 12,000

Ms Owen questioned why there had been no community consultation on the sale of the land, which was 'paid for by our rates, it's our land and the community is saying don't sell it'.

'I ask again why is it being sold and for whose benefit?'

She said more than 12,000 people had signed a petition against it and seven community groups had voiced opposition.

'Once it's sold, it's gone forever and will be filled with cabins to earn more money for the state government, not the local area.'

The government-owned Lake Ainsworth Caravan Park has been using the blocks of land in Ross Street for several years for storage and a laundry facility under an arrangement with council.

Tallowood estate offers housing in the Shire for under $300,000

Tallowood estate in Mullumbimby has put real estate and private vendors on notice with an announcement offering possibly the cheapest land and house packages in the Shire.

One of the principal shareholders, John Bennett, told The Echo, 'There has been much talk of affordable housing and I believe that, finally, there is a product on offer that is not only relatively affordable, but that is also in keeping with the character of our region.'

He says the package came about after feedback from the recent housing affordability seminar in Mullumbimby.

'There is a housing option available that could facilitate home ownership to some in our community who were not able to even consider it previously.'

To view the range of designer homes, visit www.tallowoodridge.com.

Mullumbimby firefighters wanted

Mullumbimby Fire Station is currently recruiting retained firefighters to be on call from home or work to respond to fires and other emergencies.

The station's captain Josh Rushton says, 'If you enjoy being part of a team, are physically fit, and want to give something back to your community contact us. Retained firefighters receive a monthly payment for being on call and an hourly rate for attending incidents, training sessions and other activities.'

He says the majority of retained firefighters have other jobs and their employers are happy for them to leave work to attend call outs. For more phone 6681 1847 or visit www.fire.nsw.gov.au.

Breaking taboo on Israel and Palestine

Israeli-born Palestinian-rights and peace activist Avigail Abarbanel continues to feel the wrath of family and Jews everywhere after turning against everything she'd been taught about the state of Israel and how it came into being.

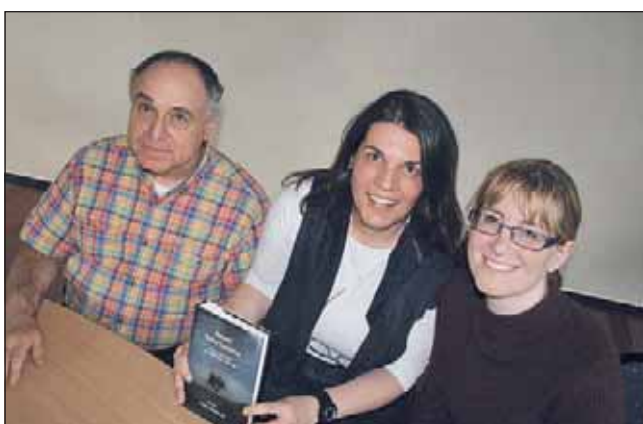

But she is no longer afraid to speak out against her own 'tribe' and urges Jews everywhere not to remain silent and to speak up for human rights and against injustice, especially in Palestine.

Ms Abarbanel is on a lecture tour of Australia promoting the book Beyond Tribal Loyalties: Personal Stories of Jewish Peace Activists, a collection of 25 essays by Jewish peace activists around the world, which she compiled and edited.

The 48-year-old psychotherapist told an audience at Byron Bay Community Centre on Saturday June 23 that up until around 12 years ago, she had always believed in the 'Israel right or wrong' mantra, and like most Israelis did not question the actions of their government towards the Palestinians.

She says it's expected in Jewish communities around the world that all Jews embrace Zionism and give loyal and unquestioning support for Israel and those who criticise Israel are often excluded, vilified and threatened.

Ms Abarbanel, who lives and works near Inverness in Scotland, said that even when she was living and studying in Australia years ago, she still accepted much of what she'd been taught about Israel and Palestine and had even written a thesis on the Australian response to the Kristalnacht, the 1938 attack of Jews in Nazi Germany.

'I, like many other young Israelis, believed everything we were taught about Israel; and it happens at an early age, we were made to feel proud that we made a country bloom out of the desert, a technological wonder,' she told the audience of around 40 people.

But that was all to suddenly change as her academic career grew, especially after reading books by historians on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict which greatly influenced her, including works by Avi Shlaim and Ilan Pappé.

'I was horrified and didn't realise how much brainwashing had gone on for years during my childhood, in school and the military service and how much fear was a part of that. I know I was a Zionist till much later when I questioned the whole process and what had happened in 1948 (when the state of Israel was declared),' she said.

'Reading all this upset and confused me and made me question everything I had felt before. I also felt a sense of betrayal that I had been lied, how could I be so naive?

Ethnic cleansing

'I had a strong sense of rightness and loyalty of us (Israel) being there and what's right and wrong,' she said.

But she didn't mince her words on the issue, saying what's going on in Palestine is 'ethnic cleansing', a land-grabbing 'occupation' and 'colonisation'.

'Israel wants more land, they have no intention whatsoever of finding a peaceful solution to the conflict,' she said. 'I gave up my Israeli citizenship in protest after realising what was going on. I felt strongly that it was wrong to create a nation at the expense of another people; I drew the line at that.'

Ms Abarbanel says many Jews like her who do speak out against Israel are vilified and branded traitors, but she believes if more Israelis and Jews around the world stopped being 'afraid' and spoke out against injustice, they would feel better about themselves.

During her Australian tour so far, the pro-Israeli lobby has tried to close down or disrupt three of her speaking events, including one at a recent Melbourne Jewish cultural festival.

The Australian Jewish News labelled her in a headline an 'Israel basher'.

Apartheid state

She says she believes in a one-state solution, a non-religious democratic state for Israelis and Palestinians alike, and supports the Boycott, Divestment and Sanctions (BDS) campaign against Israel, which she describes as an 'apartheid state'.

At one of her Melbourne talks, Ms Abarbanel said she was asked by a Jewish audience member 'why can't the Palestinians get over it, like the Aborigines have in Australia'.

Brisbane man Ray Bergmann, a contributor in the book, said that when he attended a Jewish youth camp in Sydney as a youngster, he realised a Zionist songbook was wrong in historical fact and simply 'biased propaganda'.

'The songs we were taught to sing portrayed Arabs in a negative stereotype and I complained they were teaching us an obviously skewed history to justify what could be understood as an enormous war crime in perpetuating the exclusion of Palestinians from their own homeland since 1948, and justifying a Jewish exclusivity that seemed little different from antisemitism - just a reversal of victim and oppressor!' Mr Bergmann wrote.

Rotary brings Bravehearts to Byron

An organisation which teaches young children how to avoid risky situations and show them their rights to protect their own body is coming to the Byron Bay Primary School on July 17.

The Bravehearts have been invited by the Byron Bay Rotary Club, and the school says it enthusiastically endorses the presentations, which will be the first in the region.

Principal Jeff Spargo says he expects that over 300 students will attend the two shows. It aims to 'abuse proof' children, at least as much as possible.

This is achieved through a fun, live show starring Ditto, and other personal safety materials, including an activity book, DVD and music CD.

The organisation stresses that this is not sex education but about personal safety.

The Rotary Club of Byron Bay says it is funding all costs for Braveheart's presentations, and those who wish to assist in the cost can contact the club through Bruce Hammond on 0402 755 770 or Gerry Rihs at gerry@rihs.com.au.

For more information about the project visit www.bravehearts.org.au.

Racist legislation

It is a sad coincidence that the federal government's so-called 'Stronger Futures' legislation comes into law the same week as NAIDOC (National Aborigines and Islanders Day Observance Committee) celebrations. A sad coincidence or a sick joke.

Perhaps the legislation could be called 'Stranger Futures'. Strange that many of the very people it is meant to help have strong objections to it. This is surely not an appropriate consensus over sensitive issues when the federal government imposes its will from above.

Undoubtedly politicians from all philosophical persuasions were justifiably shocked by the levels of poverty, disease and abuse in some remote Aboriginal communities revealed in the Little Children Are Sacred report of 2007 and Janet Stanley's earlier report, Child Sexual Abuse in Indigenous Communities, in 2003.

However, in the rush to provide 'strong leadership' on these issues, government seems to have forgotten the need to include the communities themselves in the leadership role. The approach could be described as paternalistic at best. If we looked honestly at the levels of domestic violence and child sexual abuse in the Australian community as a whole, then 'emergency' legislation could be applied across the board, without singling out Indigenous communities.

Human rights groups and Indigenous organisations have condemned the passing of the latest bill through the Senate last Friday. Northern Land Council chief executive Kim Hill told ABC news: 'Meeting with Aboriginal peoples and then doing all the talking is not consultation. We feel there needed to be a lot more listening.'

Even the fairly conservative Uniting Church has spoken out: 'Stronger Futures employs punitive, top-down measures that have done little to improve the lives or outcomes for Indigenous groups. Indigenous communities have experienced few perceivable benefits from the governmental policies of the last five years.'

Alarming, the Uniting Church reports that suicide rates, particularly among young people, have dramatically increased since the Intervention. 'In NSW, which has the largest Indigenous population, the youth suicide rate is one young person in every 100,000. In the Northern Territory, however, it is now more than 30 in 100,000.'

A stronger future needs to be renegotiated – no amount of bluster by 'well-meaning' lawmakers will set it right.

Asylum turmoil a winner for Abbott

It was, everyone agreed, a disaster. The urgent issue of asylum seekers remained unsolved, stuck in the political too hard basket.

Days of impassioned debate had ended in a standoff. Parliament had failed, producing nothing of substance – a devastating stalemate.

Well, in the short term that's how it looks. But from a slightly wider perspective, it can be seen as a spectacular political win for Tony Abbott.

At the time of the 2010 election, his mantra of 'Stop The Boats' was dismissed as a brutal and simplistic three-word slogan, unworthy of serious consideration. But now, less than two years later, it is unchallenged bipartisan policy, accepted by the government and the received political wisdom of the mainstream commentariat.

And in the process it has turned its original meaning upside down. From being a racist dog-whistle whose clear message was 'Keep the towel-head bastards out' it has become a caring and compassionate plea: 'Save the poor wretches from drowning at the hands of the evil people smugglers.'

Last week the stalwarts of the Labor left lined up to recant: they had been wrong to resist off-shore processing, but now they saw the error of their ways and would vote for a course that only a couple of weeks ago had been utter anathema. The remnants of the Liberal moderates, those who had stood up against John Howard's original Pacific solution, actually contemplated voting with Labor to put in place a regime potentially tougher and nastier than anything Howard had proposed.

And among this turmoil was Tony Abbott, incredibly occupying the high moral ground, posing as the last defender of the United Nations Human Rights Convention against the barbarians who would tear it to pieces. There has seldom been a more astonishing transformation.

But unfortunately, like most such transformations, it was the stuff not of reality but of a fairy tale.

It is true enough that the Labor government has successfully secured temporary protection visas, which clearly violate the provisions of the convention which govern freedom to travel. And of course the convention derives from international law, which rules out off-shore processing altogether. If Abbott is really so keen on becoming the United Nations' champion, he will immediately start voting with the Greens, who may be, as their opponents sneer, impotent,

The people smugglers are perfectly aware of this and so are their prospective clients. Ten years ago Nauru may have been seen as a deterrent, but the trick won't work a second time.

That, at least, is the view of all the experts, including the head of the Department of Immigration, Andrew Metcalfe. Nor will turning the boats around work as a threat, as was occasionally done in the Howard years and remains a plank of Abbott's platform.

Indonesia simply won't wear it any more and even to try it would bring on a diplomatic meltdown.

In Metcalfe's view, the Malaysian solution is the only real card on the table; it would at least go some way to devaluing the people smugglers' product, the avowed aim of all parties.

But Abbott will never, ever subject the little kiddies to such trauma. He was happy to allow them to be locked away behind razor wire at Woomera until some quite literally went insane, but Malaysia is simply barbaric.

And he is not interested in anything anyone else has to say, and especially not what Gillard's desperate panel of experts might come up with.

He has his policy, and he's sticking to it. And just to show he's fair as well as firm, he'll increase the refugee intake from 13,500 to 20,000 a year over three years – when he becomes prime minister.

But until then, of course, he'll oppose any such reckless move. After all, you have to stick to your principles, whatever they may be at the time.

It's certainly worked a treat on asylum seekers. And just look at the polls.

■ See Mungo live at Echonetdaily

by Mungo MacCallum

cumbed, although it actually did so a long time ago, when Julia Gillard defied Kevin Rudd and lurched to the right on the pretext of fixing the asylum seeker issue for good.

Having failed with East Timor, she fell back on the Malaysian solution, which was rightly torpedoed by the High Court and then opportunistically rejected by Abbott, who did so purely to gain political advantage.

His purported stance – that he would never, ever, send asylum seekers to any country which had not signed the United Nations Convention on Refugees – is simply preposterous; as a member of Howard's government he enthusiastically sent thousands to Nauru long before that country signed anything, and his current policy involves returning boats to Indonesia, which still hasn't, and won't, sign the convention either.

And his respect for the convention does not extend to observing it in Australia, either; he intends to re-introduce temporary protection visas, which clearly violate the provisions of the convention which govern freedom to travel. And of course the convention derives from international law, which rules out off-shore processing altogether.

But of course, that's not the point: the imperative is, as it has always been, to Stop The Boats. And to do that, all we need to do is go back to the policies of the Howard years, because they worked. This, like all of Abbott's simplifications, is not entirely true.

There is ample evidence that the Temporary Protection Visas, with their ban on family reunion, actually led to more women and children accompanying their husbands on the boats, with consequent loss of life.

But even if they did play a part in easing the flow of boats, that was then and this is now. It has now been established that Nauru was simply a staging post for the asylum seekers. More than two thirds of those sent to the island ended up in Australia anyway, and most of those who didn't were taken by New Zealand.

Doctors disembodied and otherwise

■ I am a part-time Mullumbimby GP and have worked in town for the last five and a half years. I am also the mother of a young child and have a rich and busy life outside of medicine. Reading David Bradbury's letter last week I felt insulted at his presumptions. Derek Mallon's letter this week was more civil but again seems to me to assume a lot.

To me, moving to this area to live and work in no way obliges me to work after hours in emergency. Being a doctor does not imply some sort of required extra service to the community above and beyond any other job. (Or as David says, 'this service goes with the job and with the benefits of living in this community. They should be willing to give back'.)

What, David, does this apply only to doctors? Perhaps plumbers, lawyers, physiotherapists and everyone else are also somehow obliged to work practically free through the night as a community service merely in return for living here?

I feel I do provide a good service to the community in my work as a GP, and yes, David, I do 'collect my Medicare cheques', otherwise known as getting paid, for my work. There are many kinds of doctors and I am fortunate enough to work with some of the Mullum GPs who have given many years of service in and out of hours to their community and worked extraordinarily hard (they are I note, mostly men who had wives at home). I deeply respect and admire them but I also strongly feel that this is not the only worthy type of GP, the kind we should all be.

I am proud of the service I provide to my lovely patients and I feel much appreciated by them. It would be great if David, Derran and others could also respect doctors' rights to choose the way they live and work as much as anybody else.

The hospital is a great service and everyone hopes it will continue to operate but putting the blame onto doctors who choose for many and varied reasons not to work after hours is simplistic and disrespectful.

Dr Rosie Hamilton
Goonengerry

■ Many years ago I fell off a motorbike while wearing thongs. My foot was a mess. This was mid-afternoon and the young doctor at Mullum Hospital stitched up half of the six-inch laceration but balked at finishing the job. As Dr Swanson, the Byron surgeon, couldn't be found I was sent to Lismore Base by ambulance. About 10pm I was finally in theatre with a pain-killing 'block' in my spine. It was five days in hospital before the dead flesh turned white, was cut out and then they stitched it up and discharged me. I was told that if the doctor in Mullum had had his way I'd have lost my foot!

Video conferencing has been used by business and the courts for years now and with the NBN will be even better. It's fast, efficient and cheaper.

I was talking about this with a specialist doctor of many years' experience just last week who told me that the prestigious St Vincent's Hospital in Sydney runs a ward at Toowoomba Hospital west of Brisbane. A nurse with a TV monitor on a trolley does the rounds of the ward accompanied by a doctor. It's a very good system with very good results and the patients love it!

The patients of this ward at Toowoomba have far far better health care as a result of this innovation than they had before, as will we here in Mullum. Bring it on!

Lester Prowse
Huonbrook

■ A moth flew into my ear at midnight. Its distress echoed my own feelings of rising panic as its wings loudly flapped in my ear canal. Fortunately I live near Mullum hospital. Fortunately a handsome young doctor in blue jeans sporting designer stubble came to my rescue. The relief I felt was enormous. I fell in love with the doctor and the medical service.

Picture this scenario come October. Arriving at Emergency in panic with an equally agitated moth flapping in my ear, I would have to explain to a camera lens my distress, my fear, my terror. How would this cold, hard, impersonal bit of technology soothe my nervous system? How will I be received at the other end?

We are relational beings and it is in a flesh-and-blood relationship that we are soothed. A disembodied voice coming down from Tweed may worsen my distress rather than soothing what could be a normal, over-the-top emotional reaction. Should the voice decide I was worthy of being seen in person, an ambulance would cost the medical system $1,300 each way, with two paramedics and a driver called out from their sleep.

Mullum hospital services 16,000 people. Please do us all a favour and write to CEO Board of Health chris.crawford@ncahs.health.nsw.gov.au, and go to www.mullumaction.org for full list of contacts who make the decisions and demand that there be no more reduction in services at our hospital.

Guns in parks

I have known a few responsible gun owners. The rest were unevolved male dickheads who managed somehow to balance a rifle with one hand and play pocket billiards with the other. To allow people like this loose in national parks is beyond belief.

■ Now the state government has approved 'recreational' hunting in Arakwal National Park and the Cape Byron State Conservation Area, perhaps a new line of kevlar-lined apparel will become popular with tourists, local bushwalkers and National Parks and Wildlife employees. Obviously the new legislation has nothing to do with feral animal eradication and everything to do with politics! Proving once again that politics is a far too serious matter to be left to politicians.

Michael Moriarty
Community Independents

■ How ironic. A few dogs are not allowed to walk along the beach adjacent to the Brunswick Heads Nature Reserve, yet it is one of the reserves where recreational hunting is going to be allowed. Will these amateur, unpoliced hunters be accompanied by their dogs? In fact, no reserves in our area have been excluded from hunting by shooters, who will also be allowed into Billinudgel, Wooyung, Marshalls Creek, Inner Pocket, Tyagarah, Cumbebin, Hayters Hill and Broken Head nature reserves, along with Cape Byron State Conservation Area and Arakwal National Park.

This makes a complete mockery of the term 'wildlife conservation area', not to mention 'personal safety'. Bitter experience in New Zealand has amply demonstrated that this style of recreational hunting in national parks and nature reserves has resulted in many cases of human injury and death.

Toxic memes

One would hope that public discourse, illumined by the media, would lead to a refined perspective of reality. There are, however, certain memes that have entered the lexicon of the commentariat and have become common currency. These memes do not help our understanding but confuse us.

An exemplar of the 'toxic meme' is 'closure'. 'Closure', like 'certainty', is an ephemeral concept which so many journalists have embraced without question. In the meantime millions carry their trauma to the grave and into the next generation or two.

Justice is not closure. Revenge is not closure. Healing may be.

'Closure', 'moving on', are words I would expect from people who would deceive me or know not what they speak. Mind your language.

Moderating capitalism

The discussions about asylum seekers, foreign ownership of food producing land, the drug trade, prostitution and many other contentious issues, come down to considering how far governmental interference can moderate the obvious failures of the simple free market by legislation. In some cases, notably prostitution, governments everywhere have just given up, opting for harm minimisation to prevent the worst exploitation. Even then, criminal elements will seek to provide for the most extreme services if the demand is backed by enough money.

The current problem with asylum seekers comes from the fact that there are thirty million people seeking refuge worldwide, an impossible demand to satisfy. Those with money or marketable talents can usually negotiate entry into any nation of their choosing. Others less well equipped must enter the maze of regulations and quotas, while the least fortunate and most desperate are faced with the decision of whether it is too risky to seek entry under conditions deemed to be illegal and punished as such. Regardless of the acknowledged risks, it still comes down to the demand, which isn't going away.

Long ago we lost the war on drugs as demand meant someone was making money. We face the same problem with people smuggling. Our parliaments are caught between the altruism of the refugee covenants and the rising tide of opposition to migrants seen, rightly or wrongly, as a threat to our national wellbeing and harmony. Consequently in order to stop the boats, we must set about making the outcome of unauthorised entry so dreadful that asylum seekers give up.

Numerous reports reveal the mental and physical health disaster of mandatory detention, which, despite attempts to refine and soften it still has dire consequences for those trapped in the system. Everywhere, national governments are resorting to even more inhumane practices, including violence, but still with little effect. While the demand remains, so will the smugglers. It's just another nasty problem of capitalism.

Andy's got talent

I had the opportunity to watch local artist Andy Holm on Australia's Got Talent this week. The judges and public seem to identify your entertaining and quirky performance with all that is Byron Bay. Well done, Andy, what a great promotion you have done in the branding of Byron Bay. Judging by your performance you are a professional entertainer and I really wish you every success. What a great opportunity you are for the town to get with you to promote the brand of what everyone loves about Byron Bay. Byron Bay Ambassador – Andy.

Mungo and the NBN

Mungo MacCallum's view of the National Broadband Network (NBN) as a sign of progress misses Peter Hartcher's point and his own agreement with it, that the West is going down the gurgler through overindulgence. An NBN is only a necessity if one insists upon remaining plugged into a system that is obviously flawed. The system, for example, cannot discern that more fruit trees need to go in. It is engaged in pulling them out in Australia. Federal money could be used in ways that get everyone off the system, rather than think as usual – perhaps the next technology will save us; perhaps the next technology is not an indulgence but a necessity.

The NBN hopes to speed up economic activity. But that activity only takes us deeper into decay. Triple bottom line sustainability theory (TBLST) established that in the 1990s, but no-one wanted to know about it. Mungo knows the essence of TBLST himself: '... the West ... is more concerned with saving itself from decline ... than with the preservation of the planet.' (Echo, June 19.)

Petrol prices

I had reason to travel up the coast on June 28. Driving through the Bay I noticed the cheapest petrol advertised was $1.47/ltr. At Tyagarah you could get it for $1.37/ltr, at Brunswick $1.34 and at Chinderah $1.28/ltr (all prices to the nearest cent).

Those who thought the new Woolies fuel outlet would offer real competition and bring fuel prices down in the Bay must be sadly disappointed. Maybe we need Aldi to get into the fuel business. Just another example of Byron Bay – Naturally.

Billions for roads

Roads minister Duncan Gay announced $5 billion of spending on the state's roads; less than one billion was earmarked for the Pacific Highway in the next financial year.

Now I'm not a maths wiz, but I reckon for $1 billion we would get a very fast train (VFT) and the Sydney to Tugun branch line all fixed up to cater all the way to Brisvegas. Or our branch line from Casino to Murwillumbah infrastructure upgraded so we could have a light rail service.

Also with the change left out of $1 billion after all that, the light rail from Casino could go onto Tugun, as a cross-border rail-link.

Now to all those rail enthusiasts who travel regularly on the train, doesn't that idea sound more encouraging than fighting with other cars and B-double trucks on the Pacific Highway? Laying back, relaxed, letting a capable train driver to do the stopping and picking up of fellow train travellers, happy to arrive safe at your destination to catch up with family and friends.

Hospital foreboding

On behalf of the Management Committee of Byron Shire Hospice (formerly Amityayus) I wish to express my deep concern and foreboding at the proposal to replace the emergency evening doctor at Mullumbimby Hospital with video-conferencing facilities.

There is no substitute for the presence of a doctor, the mindful touch, eye contact, active listening and emotional warmth. This is the place where healing begins, that point when the empathic response of another human being is experienced on our skin.

Some proposals for green enterprise

There are ways for our local communities in Byron Shire to renew our economies. We can align them with the core values we hold in these places which sustain us. As a biologist, I get a lot of my news from reading the tide line on the beach and listening to birds and bats as well as people. Here's the latest.

The future looks grim for many species as well as for our children and grandchildren. So let's flex our clout as both citizens and consumers. Let's look ahead and redirect the finance, effort and goodwill that swirls around here into a program that improves our legacy. Let's begin a process which keeps going year after year, improving the way we do things here.

How? My proposal is very simple and has three parts. It's based on models and projects you can review on my website. The first part is to set up a way that anyone and everyone can participate: visitors, residents, businesses, creatives and farmers. Custom-tailored memberships will have fees that match varying levels of cash flow and socio-ecologic impacts.

Your membership declares you'll participate as a proactive guardian of our paradise. Holding this 'ecopassport' offers certain privileges: access to a network of information and skills, use of a logo, discounts, etc. Membership also brings challenges and responsibilities. Some could be 'best practice' projects. A few weeks keeping a log book about your use of consumables, such as water, power, plastics, petrol.

Watching your production of wastes such as food or rubbish. Making properties friendlier for other species.

Members can also contribute to building local knowledge. One project lets you upload your photos of other species to a dedicated website. Another takes you on walkabouts, monitoring or historical searches. Day trippers and residents alike can 'spot the logo' and join in something new, exciting and valuable.

As our communities transition to what we hope is sustainability, we must adjust in every way. What's important will alter, as the climate changes and transport options morph in ways we cannot anticipate. At its heart, 'ecopassports' help a wide range of members – and other species – become flexible and resilient.

The second part of my proposal is that the membership fees are collected and held by an independent entity. The most progressive model is a hybrid trust, a blended community group and commercial enterprise. Unlike a levy caught in political winds, this exciting voluntary fund will be a stable, public way to enact the third part of my proposal. We finance our projects, employment and initiatives in the community-minded ways we value. In a neat twist, the fund can include pro rata mechanisms to contribute to council funds about infrastructure and green assets.

Economic jargon says we'll finally be accounting for negative externalities and tracking opportunity costs. In plain words, this process addresses negative costs that our places bear because of the way we and our visitors live. The process also continues supporting what we avoid doing: keeping trees instead of building parking lots, planning for long-term viability instead of cashing in on speedy money spinners.

This proposal isn't a 'bed tax' and doesn't single out visitors or residents, big or small business. With tourism down 11 per cent, we need to develop our own creative industries and services. These exports – art, film, texts, music, research, products – also allow would-be tourists to visit using their imagination. What if we set up a nature discovery centre? They can visit online and dream to visit someday.

Every proposal needs discussion. Meanwhile, the daily headline from our beaches is that the natural flotsam is full of our plastic wastes. How much longer can we ignore our impacts in this precious tangle of life? Read more at the website Tangle of Life www.tangleoflife.org.

Evolution, anyone?

Evolution has become a well accepted explanation of who we are and where we have come from. Yet when academics, scientists, humanists, atheists and sceptics are asked to explain how evolution provides viable answers to life's greatest questions, no-one steps forward!

As yet, no one has been willing to come and speak in support of evolution at a proposed forum at the Lennox Head Cultural and Community Centre at 7.30pm on Wednesday July 25. To date, invitations have been extended to the School of Science at SCU, local high school science departments, the Humanist Society and the

NSW Greens yet no one has stepped forward to be a 'champion' of evolution:

If you know of a well qualified evolutionist who is articulate and has answers, please contact me on 0416 286 091 urgently or Dr Don Batten will have to explain the evolutionary viewpoint before pointing out its inadequacies without any opposition.

There's a lot of talk about how recycling benefits the environment and of the need to use biodegradable plastic bags, but what we need to do as a society is look way beyond those simple measures if we are to keep this planet habitable.

key to a more sustainable environment is not to use them in the first place. It's not hard to avoid bottled water and even bottles for oils and it's not necessary or healthy to consume fizzy sugary drinks.

The key to saving both the environment and our hard-earned money, and helping the local economy and jobs in the process, is to buy unpackaged locally grown, organic food at the farmers' market and make your own drinks from local fruit.

Buying processed food in plastic from supermarkets is a waste of money and resources and not as good for your health. Inevitably 'value adding' means more cost to the buyer and less nutrition. Not only that, at least $90 of your $100 goes straight out of this community – as far as China, Germany and the USA – and sometimes pesticides banned in Australia contaminate the produce.

Buying fresh from local farmers means at least $90 in every $100 stays right here and can sustain local jobs. The money can circulate many times. You know how your food is produced. It hasn't been sitting on the shelf for days, even weeks, breathing in chemicals from plastic wrapping and hasn't travelled enormous distances. You can take your own shopping bags and watch as sparkling fresh fruit and vegetables are poured in and talk to the people who picked them the day before. You can take your own bottle or container and have it filled with fresh local olive oil for $10 a litre or with low-cost local honey.

It would be a genuine help to the environment if we were to try to buy locally produced food and drink without packaging and without barcodes. This has been sustainable for hundreds of years after all.

News update

Perhaps the two most interesting news articles in the world this week were the discovery of plutonium in fish caught 60km off the coast of Japan (Enenews 27/06/2012) and the reversal of illness in Danish pigs after they were no longer fed genetically modified food (Farmwars.info 28/06/2012).

Dr Caldicott says there is no safe dose of plutonium. Now that it has been found in little fish, it will quickly make its way up the food chain into bigger fish, which swim long distances. Half of the plutonium 239 will be gone from the Pacific fish in 24,000 years' time.

All the Bluefin Tuna in the Pacific are now contaminated with Japanese nuclear radiation cesium137 (news.yahoo.com May 30 2012), yet people continue to buy and eat tuna, unaware of the danger.

More than just a funny woman

Review by Libby O'Loughlin

Me of the Never Never is a rich tapestry of anecdotes woven by Fiona O'Loughlin, tracing her life growing up as one of seven children in a small town, to her rise to comedic fame on the world stage. Being part of a large family – which she describes as six other people 'soaked in the same marinade' – was no doubt instrumental in her having five children and fostering others with her husband Chris.

In chronicling her successes and failures, she largely focuses on the people and experiences that have shaped her life and nurtured her ability to laugh, together with her wonderful sense of humour. Although she admits she has a tendency to say a lot – all true, but not always accurate – yet conversely reveal very little, Fiona O'Loughlin is at times brutally honest.

I loved her book not just for its obvious comedy but more so for its frankness, innumerable pearls of wisdom and sheer readability. She refers to her unusual ability to take a picture mentally and 'make a memory'; indeed, her subsequent descriptions of images from the album in her head are far more poignant than the inclusion of actual photographs in her book.

Her time in Alice Springs causes her to address the social disparity between white and black and the inevitable issue of racism.

Fiona is, for example, acutely aware that the way we explain to children why Aborigines are sitting in a river can either nurture prejudice against them as drunks, bludgers or no-hopers, or can change perception by saying that they are simply waiting for better days.

Her analogy of life being 'just a series of good days and bad days' is balanced and refreshing in a world where the increasing expectation is to be unconditionally 100 per cent happy. Likewise she contrasts hilarious anecdotes with heart wrenchingly sad ones in a highly enjoyable reading experience akin to an emotional roller coaster ride.

She has published three books The Stupid Country; How Australia is Dismantling Public Education (co-authored with Chris Bonnor), The F Word; How we Learned to Swear by Feminism (co-authored with Catherine Fox), and a novel Just a Girl. # Nostalgia a tasty ingredient in Wood's recipe

Imagine a book which teams a passion for cooking with a penchant for reminiscing. Charlotte Wood's Love and Hunger achieves just that.

In Love and Hunger, Wood writes eloquently about why she has included specific recipes that are synonymous with family and friends, and teamed this with beautifully captured experiences from her own life. This collection of 25 essays equates to an interesting social commentary that not only traces the evolution of food throughout the ages but also explores its importance as a tonic for physical and mental health and wellbeing. For example, a meal given as a gift of love to someone in crisis offers comfort, the gathering of friends to share food symbolises unity, and a 'mercy meal', otherwise known as a wake, celebrates the life of a loved one lost.

The appeal of this book lies in the essence of its simplicity. None of the 75 recipes is pretentious but the wonderful nostalgia that Wood infuses at times in the telling of why they have been included imparts a different kind of richness to savour. Love and Hunger seamlessly merges cooking and reading, yet, because it is very well referenced, it is a book that can be dipped into at leisure when the need for some culinary therapy presents itself.

Another aspect I found fascinating about Love and Hunger was the addition of commonsense cooking tips ranging from how to cut an onion, to how to roast and carve a succulent chicken, to making and baking the perfect pastry.

The inclusion of a list of pantry essentials, together with optimum storage conditions for certain foods, is also practical – tomatoes at room temperature to preserve flavour and ditto for the annually harvested garlic bulb to enhance longevity.

Love and Hunger is a wonderful and inspiring read evidencing Charlotte Wood's obvious passion for food and cooking and the inevitable social interaction that this brings.

Simply submit a completed application form together with a one- to two-page synopsis of your manuscript and the first chapter of your book. The top six submissions will be selected and those winners will be invited to pitch their book idea live to a panel of publishers on Saturday August 4 at the Byron Bay Writers' Festival. Each pitch will be limited to five minutes.

A short pitching workshop to prepare successful appli-

Feldenkrais Mindful Movement

Whether walking, bicycling, surfing, practising yoga or sitting at a computer, the movements we repeat over and over, day by day, come to define and limit us.

When injured, we instantly adapt to minimise pain and maximise control. These unconscious adaptations become the limps, postural contortions, and physical constrictions we know only too well.

Feldenkrais is a unique method for breaking through this automatic action. Each lesson is an adventure in mindful motion, revealing yet another of our inherent capabilities for more ease in our actions and our lives.

Good Posture = Last Longer

Good posture is a natural aspect of our being that is obvious to anyone with the eyes to see. We assess each other by beauty and posture without the need to be taught. This knowledge seems to be innate and we do this, often, without being conscious of it but it helps us form an impression of whomever we meet.

Chiropractors are trained to do 'Postural Assessment' as a first step in understanding and predicting where problems arise in the body. We look at how you stand and how you move. X-ray analysis indicates where you are wearing out and we can predict, from the shape of your spine, where your structure will fail.

If you are experiencing PAIN then something has failed and we can assist your body to recover by doing an adjustment and correcting the alignment. If you want your body to perform well spreading the load evenly throughout your structure, gaining relief from those chronic problems and optimising your health then we can help by restoring your natural upright posture. For re-alignment, postural restoration, health optimisation in yourself, your family members and staff join us in our mission of life enhancement at BYRON BAY CHIROPRACTIC CENTRE, 1/12 Tasman Way, Byron Arts and Industry Estate. ## Carol Stanley

Carol Stanley has lived in Tweed Heads since 1983 with her husband and family. She won a three-hour introduction to massage at the Holistic Academy of Applied Science. Wow, what she learnt in those three hours was enough to whet her appetite to learn more about the human body, even though she already had a knack of finding sore spots on people.

While doing her Remedial Massage Diploma she was introduced to Myofascial Release Treatment. As Carol had been in several car accidents as a child her body was always tight and in pain and had several other problems. Here was a treatment that she had been looking for and it was doing a lot more for her and lasting a lot longer than an elbow in the back!

So with that information

under her belt she studied with the Myofascial Centre in South Australia and got a Diploma in Myofascial Release and Cranio-sacral Therapy.

So don't let so-called 'old age' pains get in the way of your golden years; feel the golden glow from within... a relaxed nervous system and pain free and get back to the sports you love!

For at-risk people a full-body skin check is recommended with every change of season. You are at risk if: you have ever been sunburned in the past; you work outdoors or have done so in the past; you have had a skin cancer before; you regularly pursue an outdoor sport.

Is Stress Killing You?

Modern life is full of hassles, deadlines, and demands. It will bring up stress, which is beneficial up to a certain extent but repeated stressful situations put a strain on the body that may contribute to physical and psychological problems.

Scientific research shows that stress can lead to many serious health problems like memory problems, pessimism, diarrhoea or constipation, nausea, chest pain, rapid heartbeat, loss of sex drive, frequent colds, sleep problems, eczema, obesity, heart disease, moodiness, inability to relax, depression and anxiety, eating and sleeping disorders, loneliness, neglecting responsibilities, using alcohol, cigarettes, or drugs to relax, nervous habits (eg nail biting, pacing) etc.

Vaidya Raman Das Mahatyagi shows how the ancient and time tested systems of ayurveda and yoga know about stress and its remedies in a two hour seminar that aims to give people of all ages the tools to recognise its symptoms and to break the vicious stress response cycle.

Come and join Raman Das and learn how ayurveda has proven meditation, relaxation and yoga techniques which can boost your feelings of joy and serenity. It will also explain ayurveda remedies and proper food habits which can promote better health and social wellbeing.

Lismore Regional Gallery – June / July School Holidays

Currently showing is children's book illustrator/author, Roland Harvey. Engaging for all ages, this exhibition traces the development of some of Harvey's best-known books with original sketches and watercolours.

Steven Giese's figurative images communicate ideas about the human condition, and often throw light on social and environment concerns, while Ted Harvey documented many international rock acts in 1972 such as Pink Floyd, Elton John and Cat Stevens.

Miss P is a 50s-style tour guide with a slightly bossy disposition and a wonderfully silly imagination. Miss P will meet the kids outside the gallery and take them on a themed interactive tour of the exhibition, including an art activity.

Jesse Mackintosh, local artist and fashion designer, will take teenagers through a badge-making workshop to create their own badges. All tools will be provided; however, bookings are essential.

Late Bloomer

GUY KACHEL IS A SELF-CONFESSED LATE BLOOMER. THIS FRIDAY SEES HIM LAUNCH HIS STUNNING NEW ALBUM, INNOCENT SCREAMS, HIS FIRST IN FACT, AT CRABBES CREEK HALL.

Can you tell me about the new album? This album has been in the making for about three years and is mostly a culmination of songs based on my early life growing up in Tamworth. It wasn't until I moved to the north coast that I was able to reflect on those times and start writing about it. There's nothing like removing yourself from something or somewhere to give you the big picture.

What was it that you set out to achieve? I think the main thing was to make something that I could be proud of and hope that it was well received.

What song or songs are you proudest of? Witching Hour I think is my favourite song. It's a kind of a country rock ballad that just keeps building. Also Green Machine is great; it was so much fun working with Lisa Hunt on this one.

What songs did you struggle with? It's funny because you think you have everything worked out in the production, but sometimes you can over-produce things. Face The Music was an example of this. It was always just a vocal acoustic guitar kind of song. In the end I think we did it justice and maintained the integrity of the song even though we put a lot into it.

How much does an artist have to let go of their need to control outcomes and just let it happen? I'll let you know on the next project because I don't think I let go of this one at all. Co-producing with Geoff Wright meant that I was always involved in the decision-making process.

I think sometimes it's a slower process when the artist becomes involved in the production because it's harder to step away and look at the song as a song and not listen to it as intro, verse, chorus, bridge and solo etc.

How has the music of Guy Kachel evolved and developed since you first became an artist? Being a musician or an artist comes with the same tag as everything else. The more you put in the more you get back.

Sometimes it's hard to see the development when you are caught up in the process but I think I've come a long way since the early songs I wrote. In the early days I tried to write songs like the people I really admired. That was so frustrating because I always thought they weren't good enough compared to those artists.

These days I write about life and the truth and it just seems to flow.

How do you work up a song? I would say 70 per cent of the time I start with the lyrics. They have always come pretty easily to me for as long as I can remember.

These days with my laptop and Logic Pro I just keep recording everything and then piece together the best lyric, melody and arrangement I can come up with.

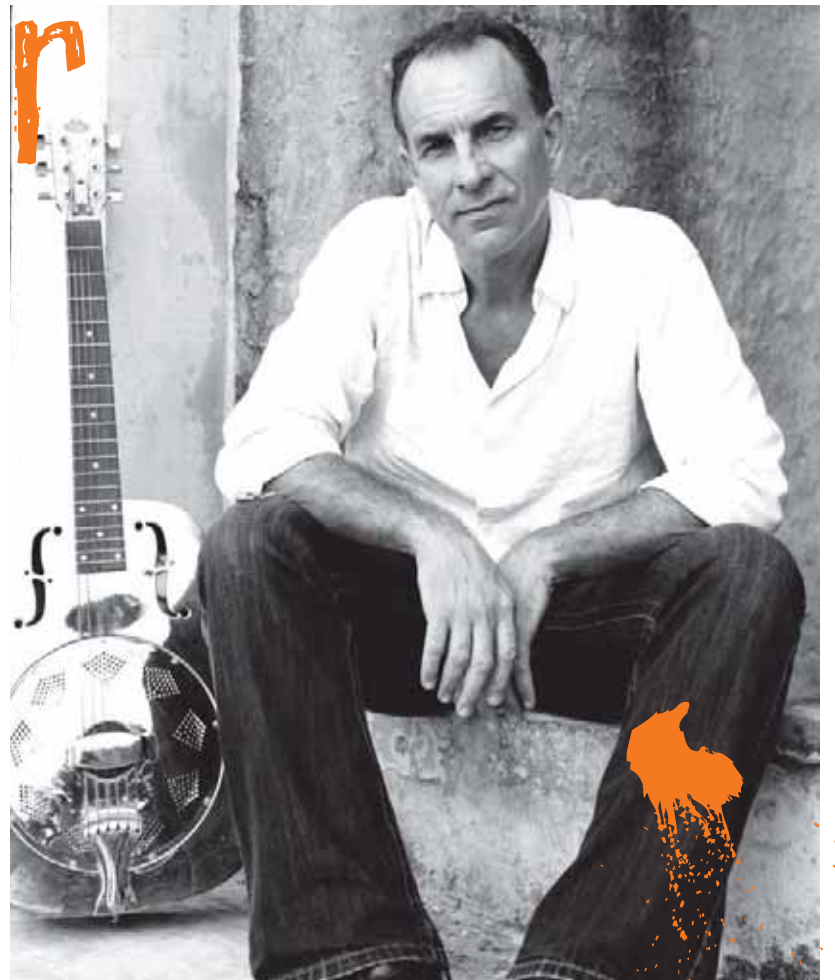

Sometimes the whole thing just comes in one hit. I really like the craft of songwriting and getting things to sound as far away from cliché as I can.

Do you have an intuition for what is going to work, or do you run it by someone? Being able to record stuff and listen back is a great guide. Sometimes you can work on a song for a whole day and record it and then come back in the morning and it sounds like shit.

Now and then I will play the incomplete song to anybody that happens to be around. You can usually get a feel, depending on their reaction.

Is it easy to take feedback? I really like constructive criticism from people I admire and trust. However feedback from anybody is always welcome. At least they listened to your music and felt strongly enough to comment.

The thing I try to remember is I'm not trying to win a popularity contest; I want to write music with integrity and everybody has a different point of view. That's what makes music so great.

Describe your journey as a musician. I was actually a pretty late starter in the music business even though I grew up in the Country Music Capital of Australia. However once I got the bug I couldn't stop.

Guitar playing was more on my agenda in the early days and I spent most of them trying to be Stevie Ray Vaughan. It wasn't until some years down the track I became more interested in songwriting.

I was really influenced by some good friends who showed me how powerful a songwritten story could be. These days I venture back to the electric guitar but now it's about the fun and tone more than anything.

What should we expect for your launch? I have put together a great band for the night. Actually most of the people that are on the album will be there. These include Geoff Wright, Thierry Fossemalle, Pete Wilkins, Dave Sandford, James Cox, Allan Park and some of the finest singers around in Lydia Storey, Rebecca Ireland and Kathryn Jones doing harmonies for me.

We will be playing all the tracks on the album; as well, Matt Hanley and I are doing some new songs I have recently written. In support I have The Soulshakers and an old friend of mine Ted Tilbrook.

BLESSED ARE THE BEARDED

The full beard has made a comeback. Living in Mullumbimby it's hard to tell, because basically the beard has never left, even for some of us girls. But I gather, from checking out the fuzzed chins of inner-city groovers to musical shakers and movers, that the full man beard is back with a vengeance. I'm not talking the manicured and carefully contrived yuppie goatee, or the stubble smudge under the lip; I am talking the Grizzly Adams.

This is the expression of unabandoned masculinity through the unruly explosion of hair in frizzed tufts on a man's neck and chin. This is part animal, part man, part leprechaun. This is a face that refuses to be dominated by a razor. Brothers and sisters, we are on the doorstep of a furry renaissance. The return of the big beard.

I think it has a rather pleasing effect. Even the weediest bloke starts to look like a timbergetter. I've always fancied my heavily bearded man returning to me at the end of his work day with the sleeves of his white cotton shirt rolled up, an axe on his shoulder and a giant log in the front yard.

The big beard makes men look like bushrangers. It's sexy, in a sort of non-sexy way. Beards look dangerous. They make men look like first settlers, or at the very least, men without iPhones. Beards and iPhones don't mix, unless of course you have the beard app.

Beardy men are living life on their terms. I guess they have to because no woman will go near them. 'What, am I supposed to go out with you like that? Go shave, monkey boy!' What I like about the beard is that it's an intentional lady repellent. A recently single male friend of mine remarked that he was so overwhelmed by interest once he hit the market, he was forced to grow a giant beard to weed out the wide-eyed women. Any woman who was prepared to look past the giant orange fur of his beard was clearly his true love. He is still single. But his beard is magnificent.

I'll be honest. Women find beards repulsive. No-one wants to kiss a man with a head like an armpit. Sure it's soft, and sometimes, in those intimate embraces of head and thigh, they can be gloriously ticklish. But they're creepy. They catch food. They get damp and sticky. There's nothing more heartwrenching than watching a bearded bloke eat soup. In fact, watching a bearded bloke eat, full stop, is a bit of a stomach churner.

The beard has this way of reminding you that the mouth, like other body openings, is merely another unattractive orifice surrounded by hair. Big beards are for photographs. For bush poets. For outlaws. For bikies. For Jesus. For homeless men. For Derryn Hinch. For Henry Lawson. For Mawson. For creepy uncles. For Santa. For Osama.

We fear the beard. The beard is the unknown. It is primal. It's a reminder that before the wax, before the razors, we were furry little cave bears caught up in a simple life cycle of eating and rooting and clubbing. (Some of us still live like this.) There is a name for beard fear – it's called pognophobia – and basically this quite common phobia can cause the sufferer such distress they may experience: shortness of breath, rapid breathing, irregular heartbeat, sweating, nausea, and overall feelings of dread. There is no cure.

We have to change our beard belief systems. I believe the beard is a positive step forward for men in their journey to reclaiming their lost manhood. Beard growing for men is like feminism for women – their heads are like our armpits. The hair says 'you can't tell us how to live'. While I struggle with a beard in the bed, I am willing to overcome my prejudice and accept men for who they really are: dirty little hairy bastards.

I hope, in my most militant heart, that the return of the full facial beard for men heralds the return of the downstairs lady beard. And as Jesus said in the Beatitudes, Blessed are the Bearded for theirs is the seat on the bus.

URANIUM BOOM; NUCLEAR DOOM

Are you a local person who opposes uranium mining? Angry that Australian uranium is fuelling Fukushima's nuclear reactor? And you'd like to see Roxby Downs Olympic Dam uranium mine closed but can't attend the big 'Lizard's Revenge' protest there in mid July? Then this anti-nuclear fundraising event 'Uranium Boom; Nuclear Doom' at Mullumbimby RSL on Friday will enable you to feel part of it all. Local activists are raising money to send Dr Helen Caldicott, international anti-nuclear activist and paediatrician to Roxby Downs to speak to mothers there about the dangers of nuclear radiation. A film crew will also attend the 'Lizards Revenge', the anti-uranium protest initiated by Indigenous Arabana elder Kevin Buzzacott. The evening fundraiser kicks off at 6pm with a welcome to country then a David Bradbury anti-uranium film and a live Skype hookup with anti-nuclear activists in Fukushima Japan – these people who fear for their safety if they speak out about the Japanese nuclear industry. Mandy Nolan will MC the evening with plenty of entertainers: Nakula, Belly Dancer Tara, poet Gina Lakosta, and DJ Sheik Jerbooty. The headliners are Fyah Walk, Raz Bin Sam and the Lion I and The Lucky Wonders. The Lucky

Wonders, passionate anti-nukers from way back, are just a week away from heading off to tour their brand-new album Lay Down My Arms around Australia, and this will be their last local show until November. ## I AM POTATO Beginning in the summer of 2007 when singer/songwriter Jeremy Strother and producer/drummer George Georgiadis met up to talk about the possibility of putting a band together. Not just another band to play in because that’s what musicians do, but somewhere they could combine all the different things they love. From vintage recording gear to old cameras, retro surfboards and iconic guitar sounds, I am Apollo is their art, made out of what they like. Freshly back from touring the US, they will be performing with Potato Potato, a newly formed and unique band from Byron Bay.

Potato Potato is made up of four young musicians aged fifteen and

With influences from all corners of the world, Sean’s music travels from one hemisphere to another and back again. ## NAIDOC – ARAKWAL NATIVE TITLE DOCUMENTARY SCREENING AND WEB LAUNCH

Walking with My Sisters – story of this place.

In celebration of the 20th anniversary of MABO and NAIDOC week 2012 the Arakwal people of Byron Bay are pleased to invite you to an historic retrospective screening of Walking with My Sisters filmed between 1994 and 1998, an intimate human drama, which follows their own process of native title, through the story of their elders, the traditional Arakwal custodians of the Byron Bay area and their battle to prove their connection to the land where they grew up. Director Bronwyn Kidd met the sisters in December 1994; shy at first, they were now starting to talk about their history in the coastal community of Byron Bay, north coast NSW. In May the following year they made a bold step for them. They lodged their native title claim in order to finally have some real say over their traditional country. Screening alongside Walking With my Sisters will be an excerpt from the sequel Back To Country screening publicly for the first time and also directed by Bronwyn Kidd and currently in production. Back to Country reveals the contemporary reality of the lives of the Arakwal people, native title claimants from Byron Bay. Prior to the screening the Arakwal people will launch their brand-new website sharing information about current projects, culture and caring for country. Wednesday at Byron Community Centre.

THE ART OF MOTHER AND SON

Christine Levy and her son Zion Levy-Stewart share more than a familial bond: the two of them are both passionate and accomplished artists. Christine creates exotic ceramic goddess garden sculptures and colourfully decorated tropical pots. She is one of the few people in Australia building udus (African sound pots) and a selection of them will be on show at the exhibition. Her son Zion paints portraits of local characters and the natural world reflecting his unique perspective. He has been exhibiting and winning awards for his delightful drawings, paintings and ceramics over a decade and is in the collections of art aficionados throughout Australia, the USA and the UK. BYRON BAY
LIQUOR ACCORD

You may not be aware but the Byron Bay Liquor Accord (BBLA) is made up of 40 or so owners, operators and managers from local licensed venues in Byron Bay. BBLA meets every 8 weeks to identify and discuss alcohol related issues within our local area and the challenges faced by the tourism, entertainment and liquor industries. The group meetings are attended by local Police, the Office of Liquor and Gaming, local council and transport providers with the aim of a proactive focus on harm minimisation, safety and crime prevention.

Some of the issues the BBLA have recognised are:

- Driving under the influence
- Alcohol related crime eg assaults
- Secondary supply to minors
- Lack of personal responsibility
- Irresponsible consumption of alcohol

BBLA has devised a range of strategies for addressing these community issues. Over the coming months, venues are working together to implement these strategies through education, staff training and uniform rules across venues.

Community safety for patrons and safety for the many hospitality employees within Byron Bay is the main aim of The Accord.

LOCAL IDEAS. REAL SOLUTIONS.

WITH LILITH

Blame it on the bombardment of highly charged particles if you like, but this week's positively pulsating with creative inspiration, confronting personal breakthroughs and heart-opening realisations...

♈ ARIES: It's time to let recent events settle like sediment in a glass of water. How? You've got to stop stirring so things can clarify. Good news: your boss planet Mars's move to Libra makes you easier to please, your relationships fairer and life in general more pleasant.

♉ TAURUS: The present Venus/Jupiter combination makes this an ace week for marketing your skills and capabilities in an enjoyably combined work/play, business/pleasure way. Watch for valuable connections and educational opportunities, but don't indulge in hasty paper-signing or reckless, what-the-heck decisions.

♊ GEMINI: This week's astral emphasis is on family, and with loved ones being who they are (ie possibly not inclined to see things your way), facts and logic mightn't be effective, so try rapport and empathy. Along with turning inward for answers, rather than outward for more information.

♋ CANCER: Recent realisations been blasting your comfort zone apart? Midweek full moon picks you up, dusts you off and starts rearranging the pieces in a new frequency tuned to the times. A specific, though not necessarily comfortable or immediately comprehensible, morphic process is under way. Trust it.

♌ LEO: Some believe in reincarnation. Leo Mae West decided you only live once, but if you do it right, once is enough. Try as you might, doing it right hasn't been easy lately, but despite responsibilities, obligations, debts and deadlines this week reboots your majesty's sunny enthusiasm.

♍ VIRGO: According to Virgo political commentator Chris Hedges, in our world doctors destroy health, courts destroy justice, universities destroy knowledge, the press destroys information, religion destroys morals and banks destroy our economy. Service is your soul work, and this week's is offering yours to balance this grim scenario...

♎ LIBRA: No surprise after Venus's recent media blitz that July signals all systems go for you Venusians in your public profile and social interactions. This week Mars joining Saturn in Libra energises your focus and motivation, so trust your own judgment if big decisions need to be made.

♏ SCORPIO: If you feel like retreating this week, don't cut off – keep your heart and communication channels open. Forget issuing ultimatums or trying to apply leverage. It's an emotional time, but unravelling plans are still salvageable if you refuse to engage with rumour, gossip, drama and intrigue.

♐ SAGITTARIUS: This week it's worth considering Sagittarian Rainer Maria Rilke's famous advice to a young poet. RMR recommends treating unsolved questions with patience – regarding them as locked rooms or books in another language, whose answers you'll understand when you're ready and able to live with them.

♑ CAPRICORN: Prepared schedules go haywire this week and while you won't like taking maybe for an answer, you may have to. When annual Capricorn full moon brings domestic issues to a head, sharing your concerns with those closest and/or phoning a friend for feedback beats slogging away solo.

♒ AQUARIUS: If others are moody this week, don't underestimate the value of little gifts and affectionate attention. Venus, Jupiter, Mars and Saturn, all in air signs, are presently presenting new ideas and changing friendship perspectives, with late-week Aquarius moon igniting fireworks of the delightfully surprising kind...

♓ PISCES: Evaluate this week's challenging changes on Planet Trouble objectively. If midweek full moon shines an unflattering light on certain intimate or social relationships, it's time for a reality check, Pisceans. Mars in your house of shared resources makes you more dependent on others than you thought.

AKMAL AT CURRUMBIN RSL

Known for his incredible ability to deal with hot topics in an hilarious and slightly offensive way, Akmal promises to deliver a show that is punctual and jam-packed with words... some of which he will be using for the first time. One of Australia's most respected and accomplished comics, Akmal draws on his Arabic heritage, his experiences migrating to Australia at the age of 11, and his disillusionment with religion and the modern world to deliver a standup show that is fresh, honest and ridiculously funny. As a standup he's performed at festivals all around the world including Edinburgh, and has won numerous awards, including an ARIA for his DVD Live and Uncensored.

Saturday at the Currumbin RSL with Ellen Briggs and Mandy Nolan. Show starts 7.30pm. Tix at the club.

FROM LA TO MULLUM

When US comedian Rich Hall was in Australia he made a point of letting comedian Greg Sullivan know that 'he was the best I've seen on this trip out'. Even Denton suffers Sully envy, declaring 'very funny, I wish I'd thought of that myself'. Greg Sullivan hails from the flat lands of Dalby, desperate for the thrill of a hill, he left home and sought fame and fortune in the big city. And he found it. For the past 14 years he has worked as a writer for Brisbane's Triple M Breakfast show, choosing the top-rating breakfast show 'The Cage' over seven years. Sully has performed at Melbourne International and the Sydney comedy festivals, was invited to perform at the world-famous Improv Comedy Club in LA, and now he's moved to Main Arm, so expect to see a lot more of the big guy. Warm, furry, funny and friendly, a night with Greg Sullivan is a treat. He hosts what is now becoming a cult comedy night at the Courthouse on Thursday. Free show, starts at 8pm.

COMEDY THAT BERNs

Peter Berner started his career as a standup comic in 1988. Since this time he has performed locally and internationally, as well as writing and

A THANK YOU FROM MURRAY BURNS

A few months ago a bunch of musicians got together to put on a show to raise money for Murray Burns, a fellow musician (of MiSex) who had suffered a stroke recently. Murray is a much-loved local identity and his local community have been sure to let him know that they care. It hasn't escaped the attention of the man who is affectionately known as Muzz:

I was lying in a hospital bed in Melbourne last month, knowing a magical event was happening in my honour here in Byron Bay. It made me realise what a special community we nurture and love.

Thankyou so much to the wonderful organisers, performers and those who came for the event. See you all on the beaches or streets sometime soon.

Murray Burns

performing solo comedy shows in festivals in Australia and the UK. His intelligent humour has always set him apart as one performer who can comfortably straddle comedy styles as disparate as satire, observational comedy and reactive comedy with ease, leaving audiences in hysterics. His comedy has also proven to translate into the electronic media, with Peter constantly employed on both TV and radio since 2001. Peter's major TV hosting roles have been BackBerner and Einstein Factor, both on ABC TV (all up he has presented more than 300 hours of national television program content!), and he's been a valued, successful and integral member of Triple M's talent base nationally since 2000.

Peter Berner plays the Byron Services Club on Monday 16 July with MC Mandy Nolan and support act Greg Sullivan and he appears with just Mandy Nolan on Tuesday 17 July at the Tatts Hotel in Lismore. CHESS by Ian Rogers

Play at Byron Services Club, Mon 7pm

Until last Sunday it seemed that Andrew Brown had found a method of playing perfect chess.

Not only had the Canberra International Master cut a swathe through a series of top Australians to win the NSW Open, after four rounds of the recent Gold Coast Open he was outright leader of a super-charged field.

And even after being outplayed he was finding a way through.

The diagrammed position sees Brown with the Black pieces against German sixth seed Arkadius Kalka. Brown has no threats and after 32.Qd7 he would have struggled to draw, but instead Kalka played 32.d6?? and after 32...Qg3+!! White had no choice but to resign since 33.Bxg3 fxg3+ 34.Kh1 g2+! 35.Kxg2 Nf4+ wins the queen.

So, incredibly, Brown had maintained his perfect score, and was due to play IM George Xie in the next round. In this game Brown fell into an opening trap and still managed to win.

Gold Coast Open
White: G Xie
Black: A Brown
Opening: Sicilian Defence
1.e4 c5 2.Nc3 Nc6 3.Bb5 Nd4 4.Bc4 e6 5.Nge2 Nf6 6.0-0 d5? 6...a6 7.a4 d5 is the correct move order. 7.exd5 exd5 8.Nxd5!!

Nf3+!? Desperation, since 8...Nxd5 9.Nxd4 cxd4 10.Qh5! Be6 11.Re1 Nf4 12.Bb5+ wins for White. 9.gxf3 9.Kh1 is also strong. 9...Nxd5 10.d4 Nb6 11.Bb5+ Bd7 12.Qd3 Rc8 13.Re1 Be7 14.dxc5 Rxc5 15.Bxd7+ Nxd7 16.Be3 Rc6 17.Rad1 Rd6 18.Qf5! 0-0 19.Bf4 Xie has built up a dominant position and some were expecting Brown to simply resign. Instead he finds a way to stir up trouble. 19...Ne5! 20.Rxd6 Nxf3+ 21.Kf1! Bxd6 22.Rd1! g6 Now after 23.Qh3 Black really would have to resign, but Brown's lucky star was still shining... 23.Qg4?? Bxf4!! 24.Rxd8 Nxe2+ 25.Kg2 Nxe4 26.Rd4? g5! and with his unexpected extra piece, Brown went on to win the game.

Of course his incredible 10.5/11 run against Australia's best had to come to an end. Against Australia's top player GM Zhao Zong Yuan no miracle save appeared. A further loss, to IM Moulthun Ly, pushed Brown back to sixth place, while Zhao took the $1,500 winner's cheque.

Brave

The imprimatur of 'Disney' is the kiss of death for any serious filmgoer who associates cinematic worthiness only with dysfunction, dystopia, disadvantage or whatever misery is flavour of the month. More's the pity, for this is a wonderful movie. Remembering, too, that it is an entertainment designed for impressionable young minds, the story is fast moving and sensibly plotted, the morality inspiring and free of stifling cynicism, the characterisations consistent and the animation out of this world (quite literally, for 3D is spectacularly effective when applied to cartoons). Set in the Scottish highlands of the tribal, kilted, caber-throwing past, Merida, as daughter of the dominant Chief Fergus, is at an age where her father, and mother, Elinor, have arranged for suitors from other clans to vie for her hand. But Merida, a headstrong lassie, has different ideas. Rebelling against the ways of yesteryear, she strikes a blow for girl power by demanding that she alone will determine her fate. After fleeing the castle and accepting the cryptic advice of a witch, Merida inadvertently turns her mum into a bear and then must find a way to reverse the spell so that Elinor might be restored to her normal self. I loved Merida from the minute she opened her mouth and I heard Kelly Macdonald speaking the part – although, with her shock of curly red hair, I was from time to time disconcerted by her resemblance to the less-than-appealing Rebekah Brooks. As Fergus, Billy Connolly lays on his usual shtick with relish, and Emma Thompson, reprising her Nanny McPhee persona, conjures equal parts warmth and maternal angst as Elinor. Most encouraging is the absence of a prince who will save the day and win stout little Merida's heart – she don't need no man! And something else, too, something intangible but which is all engulfing when it is present. At the well-attended session that I was part of, the audience (myself included) was entirely 'inside' the story and on tenterhooks as its dramatic and emotional climax loomed. ~ John Campbell can see in advance the steps laid out as in a recipe for toast and jam. Reno, a wonderful actor blessed with a wry comic sense, coasts through his part, while Youne, with whom I was not familiar, displays a rare talent for getting up one's nose. Their best moment comes when, disguised as Japanese tourists and dressed in Mikado drag – Youne does an excellent geisha turn – they arrive to sample the 'molecular' dishes of their cutting-edge opponent. For foodies, this is undoubtedly a fascinating insight into the bizarre direction in which gastronomy might be headed. For indifferent eaters, an omelette, a glass of wine and a session with Elizabeth David would suffice. ~ John Campbell will not be regained, for all our longing', Evelyn observes. It is not so common to find your expectations of a movie met in every way – mine were with this. ~ John Campbell

Le Chef

Brevity is the soul of wit. It's also a lifesaver when a film consistently misses the funny bone, as this one does. At the end of its inoffensive but entirely predictable 84 minutes, you are at least able to regard it fondly for not running two hours (so many movies are needlessly long these days). Tying in a little too calculatedly with the current obsession with food and cooking (having never seen Master Chef or My Kitchen Rules, I am blissfully unaware of the genre's appeal), the story concerns an old-school chef, Alexandre Lagarde (Jean Reno), who is being challenged by the ugly reality of the vogueish 'molecular cuisine'. The son of the owner of the legendary restaurant where Lagarde has been ensconced for yonks, a Young Turk on the managerial scene, sees him as a relic and wants him gone. Contractually, if Lagarde loses one of his prestigious stars he can be shafted, a factor that causes him mounting anxiety as he struggles to create his new spring menu. His saviour arrives in the form of Jacky Bonnot (Michaël Youne), an intensely irritating wannabe who has been sacked at all of his previous cooking gigs. Jacky's long-suffering wife is pregnant, Alexandre's love life is in the doldrums, but there's a very attractive lady who runs a nosherie in Nevers... you

The Best Exotic Marigold Hotel

What a joy... A disparate group of discouraged, jaded codgers in grey, stodgy England arrive at the awful truth that they have irrevocably entered their autumnal years. But need those years necessarily be 'declining'? In India, an exuberant if not terribly businesslike young entrepreneur, Sonny (Dev Patel), has hit upon the idea of converting a crumbling Rajasthani palace into a retirement home for cashed-up foreigners – 'there are many countries', he explains with brutal innocence, 'that don't like old people.' Director John Madden spares us the sweat and grime of Calcutta and the grim clutter of the twenty-first century Indian metropolis, but he also sensibly averts the yellow brick road of 'cute and quirky' – though Madden wants to warm the heart, this is no sanitised, patronising travelogue. Unprepared they may be, but the characters involved will be changed in some way by their new surrounds – 'all of life is here', Graham (Tom Wilkinson), a lawyer who grew up in India, tells the xenophobic Jean (Penelope Wilton). Graham, gay and guilt ridden, is seeking out a lost lover; Evelyn (Judi Dench) is trying to find her feet following the death of her husband of four decades; randy Norman (Ronald Pickup) is after a bit of boudoir action; Muriel (Maggie Smith) has made the trip to get a cheap hip replacement; Madge (Celia Imre) is the gold-digger, while Douglas (Bill Nighy) hopes for something better than the unsatisfactory options left to him and wife Muriel at the end of his civil service career. Along with a flawless cast, the colour, vibrancy and chaotic calm of India is irresistible – a particularly beautiful scene has Sonny talking with his girlfriend on the wall of an ancient well as boys dive into its cool depths. So easily the film might have bogged itself in retro-cheesiness and shallow charm, but the message is positive, the view evolutionary – 'the past

Big soup for cold weather

VICTORIA COSFORD

Those who love cooking, or even just cook regularly, have their repertoire of tried-and-true favourites, those dishes wheeled out when the desire to experiment or try something new has been superseded by the need for reliability and the sweet ease of familiarity. In the grim middle months of the year it is minestrone for me. A meal in a soup – especially my particular version, an accidental adaptation of Marcella Hazan's.

The first time I made it out of her wonderful book Essentials of Classic Italian Cooking, I misread the quantity of cannellini beans – so instead of adding toward the end a 400-gram tin of them I toppled in the same weight in dried beans, which I had soaked overnight then simmered to done-ness. (How I could I have got this instruction so spectacularly wrong completely escapes me.) The funny thing is that despite my minestrone now bearing about four times the volume of beans, it was undeniably superb – so much so that this version became my blueprint.

At the time in Sydney it was not possible to source the cavolo nero – kale – that I had remembered from minestrone I had eaten in Italy; Marcella herself proposes Savoy cabbage but I blithely exchanged this for silverbeet. This was a robust soup to which I quickly became addicted on cold winter evenings, often eating it night after night after night, accompanied only by some warmed bread. A quite perfect meal, composed as it is of such a variety of vegetables.

And yet the secret to its beauty lies not in my extra beans nor in my silverbeet substitution but in the layering which is called for in the recipe. Marcella is quite clear in the amount of time she allots to each added vegetable – so that every one you add is allowed several minutes to imbue the previous ones with its own particular character, right through to the end.

Minestrone means 'big soup' in Italian and it is a classic example of 'cucina povera', or peasant cuisine. There is no set recipe; in my Ricette Regionali Italiani (hefty tome of regional Italian recipes) there are ten distinct types listed.

Here, however, is my Hazan adaptation, sufficient to feed at least eight people, or a single person every night for a week.

MINESTRONE

In your biggest pot heat olive oil and soften three thinly sliced onions to a pale gold. Add four diced carrots and cook for several minutes, stirring periodically. Add two sticks diced celery, cooking and stirring for several minutes. Ditto two medium potatoes, diced. Next – always separated by several minutes – drop in a large handful of topped-and-tailed green beans, also diced. Several minutes later add 450 grams diced zucchini. Then a bunch of silverbeet leaves coarsely shredded. Now let all these vegetables cosy along together for about six more minutes. Next comes 1½ litres of stock – beef, chicken or vegetable, depending on your inclination – one 400 gram tin of peeled tomatoes with their juice, and the rind, if you happen to have one lurking, of a piece of (real) parmigiano-reggiano. (Another secret, I reckon.) Stir well, cover pan, bring to the boil then lower heat to a steady but gentle simmer for 2½ hours. After that topple in your 400 grams of soaked, cooked, drained cannellini beans (or just a tin if you prefer it less beany!), stir well, season and simmer for another half hour. Check for seasoning and serve with crusty bread.

Like curries and casseroles it is even better the next day, and the next, and the next...

Television Guide

1. Tina Fey is chiefly known for her impersonations of Sarah Palin on Saturday Night Live and as the creator of and star in 30Rock (what a talent!) but in the light comedy Baby Mama (Prime, Saturday, 9pm) she plays a career woman who discovers in her late 30s that her uterus is T-shaped and hires Amy Poehler to be a surrogate mother. The usual complications ensue. Fey is one popular gal, and you can learn a lot about her at www.tinafeefan.com.

2. It's funny, isn't it? Last week in reference to another zombie movie we mentioned Shaun of the Dead and now it's lobbed up on 7Mate at 9.45pm on Sunday. Co-writer and star, the clever British actor Simon Pegg, not only has to deal with his relationship issues with his girlfriend, his mother and stepfather but with an apocalyptic uprising of zombies. Of course the best place to set up defence is at the local pub. When the zombies are finally defeated, they are used as cheap labour and entertainment, much like TV executives. Make sure you also track down Pegg's movie Hot Fuzz, which is even funnier.

Netball star wants bigger stadium for Ballina Shire

Luis Feliu
Former captain of the Australian netball team Liz Ellis has appealed to Ballina Shire councillors to double the number of basketball courts planned for the town's sports and events centre now on the drawing board.
Ms Ellis, who now calls Ballina home after moving there recently with her husband and young daughter, told councillors last week that two indoor courts for basketball or netball in the proposed new sports complex was just not enough.
She told council's public-access session that a four-court configuration for the stadium would 'add enormously to this community'. She said a recent federal government report blamed 'a distinct lack of infrastructure' as a major barrier to participation in sport at a junior level.
Ms Ellis, who sits on the board of the Australian Sports Commission, told councillors of a facility in Sydney which had increased in size to accommodate many other indoor sports such as table tennis and badminton and had boosted the number of older people using the facility and involving themselves in those sports.
'Within four years, four people at that centre were competing in the masters games,' she said.
'One thing I love about Ballina as a new resident is the many beautiful old people here and we should cater for them; activities such as those are great for their physical and mental health as well as for younger ones.
'I have a nine-month-old daughter and I hope in years to come she will use a four-court facility in Ballina.'
Ms Ellis, 39, is the most capped international player for Australian netball and played for the national netball team from 1992 to 2007.
She quipped that she is a 'fully paid-up but bad-performing member' of Ballina Basketball and also conducts coaching clinics in Sydney, saying she would be the 'first person to book the four-court facility', which would also do away with the 'problem of wet weather'.
Cr David Wright said councillors last week decided to hold a workshop with the designers soon 'to see if there's room for a four-court stadium', and the master plan for the facility would then proceed.
Ballina Basketball Association's Eva Ramsey also appealed to councillors for a four-court stadium, saying an expanded facility was badly needed for the town's growing sporting community.
Ms Ramsey said the town's existing seven indoor courts for use by basketball or netball were 'mostly off limits or unsuitable'.
'We have 154 members and need a home urgently'.
She said there were 46 basketball teams in Ballina 'but only space for six' and that the courts were needed also for other sports such as wheelchair basketball, lifeball and futsal.

Tour the Cape lighthouse

Exploring the maritime history of one of Australia's most famous destinations just got a lot easier with the the popular heritage tours of the Cape Byron Lighthouse for the cost of a donation. Cape Byron Trust Chair Yvonne Stewart said 'during the winter school holidays the Lighthouse Tours allow visitors to explore and appreciate the maritime heritage of Byron Bay.
'Our aim is to improve visitor experience so, for the cost of a donation people can now join an experienced guide and volunteers to find out about the history and significance of this unique lighthouse.
'Take a step back in time to discover what the daily duties of the Lighthouse Keepers and their families at the Cape would have been like. [Visitors] can see the signal flags,

the Keepers' desk and uniform on display, providing a reminder of former days when there were three Keepers' families living at Cape Byron from 1901 with the last keeper left in 1989.
'Today the Lighthouse, an important north coast icon, is managed by a community trust with the NPWS and joint management with the Bundjalung of Byron Bay Arakwal Aboriginal People'.
Guided tours of the Cape Byron Lighthouse, which take take approximately 40 minutes, are available on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays
(all year), and Saturdays (NSW school holidays).
The Lighthouse climbs take approximately 20 minutes and are conducted by volunteers on most other days subject to availability.

Young Turks fall to older Turkeys

Groms getting the job done

The Mullumbimby Giants might be doing it tough in A-grade, but the Under 18s are braining it. On Saturday they travelled to Kyogle to behead the Turkeys by 22-10.

We must now confront harsh reality – the Mullumbimby Giants, after losing to Kyogle, are now at unbackable odds to win the NRRRL's wooden spoon for 2012.

Their failure to get off the bottom rung of the ladder is not for want of trying. The boys get stuck in every week, but you get the impression that the habit of losing has gripped their collective psyche. Having so many youngsters in A-grade who might otherwise be honing their skills and learning rugby league's tougher lessons in the more forgiving environs of the Under 18s is also not ideal.

Last Saturday's game away to the Turkeys (in Roosters' jerseys) followed what has become a depressingly familiar pattern. On a ground boggy after a week of rain – a factor which would have only made heavier the legs of those juniors backing up – the Giants went toe to toe with their opponents in the opening skirmishes. Penalised on the second tackle after kicking off (some refs yearn to be on the stage), Mullum showed typical resolve in defending their line against Kyogle's glut of possession. At such close quarters for set after set, however, it only takes one slip-up to bring you undone. The Turkeys, with quick, short passing and handling better than the slimy conditions might have encouraged, finally created the gap and jumped to a 6-0 lead.

Mullum did not drop their bundle – indeed, they lifted and through tries to half-back Aaron Booth and the ageless Glen Godbee, who flew along the left flank, they returned fire to get their noses ahead by 12-6.

As is so often the case with struggling teams, however, the contest was turned on its head in the five minutes before and after half-time.

Kyogle won a scrum fifty out, a straightforward tackle was missed and their full-back sprinted away for a converted try (I stood right behind the kicker and remain convinced that his shot at goal faded outside the upright). Upon the resumption, the Giants were pinged again, as they regularly are at the most dispiriting moments, and the Turkeys were once more at their throat to cross for an inevitable try. When Mullum conceded another four-pointer straight after the break, the home side found themselves in a comfort zone that was never threatened.

As players came and went in the blue-and-gold, the Giants' shape, particularly in attack, began to fray. With his mates showing signs of descending into a rabble, prop Robbie 'Crazy' Goodacre burst mightily through the guts of the ruck and fanged downfield like Black Caviar – okay, maybe it was more like Mr Ed, but, whatever, it was a stirring run from a lion-hearted competitor, and it ended in an outrageous coathanger.

The final score of 32-12 was a fair indicator of the contest, but tireless captain Jake Francisco will not have been disappointed with his side's commitment. There is a fine side brewing at Mullumbimby, unfortunately we're not likely to see it until 2013.

Local groms Zav Whiteman and Mikey Wright are looking towards professional careers in surfing from their humble beginnings in Lennox Head.

Local junior surfers Mikey Wright and Zac Whiteman are surfing in two of the biggest surfing grom competitions in the country. The two lads are both moving ahead in their surfing careers and were together recently for a photo shoot with sponsor Quiksilver.

A born-and-bred Lennox boy, 13-year-old Zac Whiteman's favourite break at Lennox is The Point. Globally he likes Macaronis in the Mentawai Islands. Zac has been surfing since he was a toddler and he started on a 6'2" purple foamy. He has been competing since before he reached double digits and he has surfed across the country and the world. 'I've had a few good wins. I have won state, I've won Grom fest and second on the Occy – a few good results.'

Zac has his head firmly screwed on for a lad so young. He's very focused and self-possessed and it's hard not to think he will go far in the sport. Even though he hates to say it, he does believe that school is important. 'School's always first. That's half my idea and half mum and dad's. You gotta do it but I get to surf before school and after school – I just run over to Sharp's, it's always a good spot.'

Zac says he'd like to be at the top of the ASP. 'I'd like to go professional but I will have fun and go where it takes me. I will still always enjoy surfing – it is my priority so we will see where it goes.'

Another Lennox local is Mikey Wright, last in line of the surfing Wright clan. The 15-year-old, who has been surfing since he was four and competing from the age of eight, says that his first board was one of his father's which has passed down through the family.

Mikey hopes to turn pro and says his career highlights so far are winning King of the Groms at the 2012 Quiky Pro and winning the Australian junior surfing title in December 2011. Like Zac he also likes The Point and he also likes a particular right hander at Saint Leu in the Reunion Islands.

Surfing siblings Tim, Owen, Kirby and Tyler have paved the way for Mikey with three of the four having professional careers in the sport. Mikey says it's great always having someone around to talk surfing with.

Mikey says that he doesn't feel that being in his position in the family has any adverse effect on him. 'It doesn't put much pressure on me. It's great to have them on tour. The are good for support and advice. We do all get out for a surf together occasionally and that's really fun too.'

Showdown of the Showdown

Brittani Nicholl from Pottsville flew home from competing in the Swatch Pro in France to be at the last All Girls Surf Showdown and dominated the Lennox Hotel Open Pro final scoring a total of 15 points out of 20.

'The conditions in the water were tricky but also good, some of the best I've had for a contest', said Nicholl. 'For the event to have such a strong field of surfers made the win feel that much better!'

This is the final year of the Showdown. Event founder/directors Max Perrot and Kellie O'Brien both feel that female opportunities have improved greatly over the years and the event has fulfilled its need. 'To make the decision to finish was tough because you just think that it's going to go on forever,' said Max. 'It took us a bit of time to decide and we are really proud that we finished on our own terms. It's nice when it's your decision and not because everything fell apart.'

Nicholl said that it will be sad to see the event disappear off the calendar. 'I think everybody should be looking at it as more of a celebration as Max and Kellie have both achieved what they originally set out to do when they created this event with Keryn Noach 20 years ago. You just have to look at the names on the honour roll and you'll soon realise that this event has definitely been a major help in creating a path for women's surfing.'

The field was the strongest in many years with competitors making a big effort to be part of the last year. WQS surfers Dimity Stoye, Phillipa Anderson, Brittani Nicholl and Georgia Fish rushed back from France to compete.

Former top-five professional surfer Samantha Cornish also took part. Cornish won the Showdown's Junior Pro division back in 1999 before making the world top 10 in 2002. 'I really enjoyed coming to the event as a junior and being there last year,' she said. 'It's a great opportunity to catch up with everyone. The Showdown has helped the development of junior surfers over the 20 years and it's been one of the best female events in Australia.'

Shiners and Cossacks rugby thriller

Dean Trevaskis

'Geez they look like they're having fun,' came the call from one spectator during the Moonshiners' exuberant warm ups against the Iluka Cossacks at Brunswick Heads on Saturday. That enthusiasm was the catalyst for a flying start.

So often on the back foot early the Shiners immediately invaded the Cossacks' territory. With Iluka strung out Sati Siamoa put the high ball up for Dillon 'Moonshine Robbo' Pyne. He was at full stretch reaching for the loose ball only for a desperate Cossack kick to send it into touch.

Off the restart tight-head Matt Perry imposed himself with a gun barrel straight twenty-metre run.

Loose-head Lachlan Stubbs ran the second phase and off loaded to Hooker Leon Matchett-Oates for a well-celebrated try.

Neon Leon was in the spotlight ten minutes later with a fifty-metre line break that had the faithful in raptures. Some desperate Iluka cover stopped him five metres short. The Shiners then capitalised on some excellent line out work with slick passing through the backs culminating in a twisting, sliding try scoring run for breakaway Lucas 'Smokin' Joe' Frazier.

Mullum dominated the break down with Jimmy Pyne ferocious and Seymour Walters pilfering anything loose. At ten-nil down Iluka upped the ante.

Possession evened up and things got scrappy as both sides wrestled for the ascendancy. As is often the case penalties broke the stalemate to give the Cossacks' field position and an attacking platform five metres off the Mullum line.

The Cossacks recycled well and off the back of some good pick and drive crossed in the corner as the half-time whistle blew.

Both sides were creating plenty of opportunities in the second half but Mullum was the first to convert the potential.

Off the back of some good work by the forwards the backs were given some space and an overlap to send old boot contender Scotty Hazlewood-Potts diving across the white line. Then with a ten-point lead and a fourth try bonus point in sight the Shiners lost focus with passes hitting the deck at crucial times and the penalty count rising. The Cossacks sniffed an opening and with nothing to lose threw down the gauntlet. On the back of eight phases parked on Mullum's line a Cossacks winger pierced a gap, scored and it was game on.

Mullum led by three points and with shadows lengthening and the big girl doing her Do Re Mi's in the dunny the Cossacks launched an audacious plunder.

They put the high ball up, retained it six meters out with a leap and gather, one off load, Moonshiners scrambling, two off loads a jinking run and a League fill-in showing his inexperience with a blind over-the-head pass that was gleefully intercepted by the Mullum defence and roosted into touch to end the contest 15-12 in the Shiners favour over the gallant Cossacks. In a genuine team effort for Mullum the standouts were Matt Perry, Jimmy Pyne and Leon Matchett-Oates.

The Shiners will need to be on song for the full seventy minutes this Saturday at Brunswick Heads against Bangalow. Kick-off is 2pm.

Breeze for Magpies a fizzer

AFL report author and Magpies veteran Mick 'Three Kicks, Three Goals' Hosking snaps truly. Photo Scott Anlezar.

Story Mick Hosking

Due to Ballina Bombers' ground being closed the Byron Coopers Magpies played them at Pottsville on Saturday.

Again Byron started slowly and Ballina and raced out to a four-goal lead by the 15-minute mark of the first quarter. Byron players regrouped and centre man Dave Smith was gaining the upper hand in the middle and with Kane Bullock fierce attack on the ball they closed the gap with two late goals.

The second quarter was a tough battle with the Magpies trying to get back on top. Magpies on-baller Nathan Moon was taking control around the half back line. Nic Carram was providing plenty of drive with his attack and pace and Liam

Afflick was getting his hands on the Sherrin up front but Byron went into half time still 22 points down,

Byron players came out with intent and purpose. Byron stalwart Mick Hosking was introduced to play and had an immediate impact, snapping a major around his body and another off the ground in the goal square.

The Magpies' intensity rose and the players rallied and outplayed the Bombers all over the ground. The backline of Jared Balchin and Dan Tiffin were strong again with Sam Lucas countering Ballina's attacks. Shayne Baldwin was running riot and creating scoring opportunities. Byron scored six goals while restricting the Bombers to one for the quarter and had a nine-point lead.

Having the use of a handy breeze, Byron should have put the Bombers away but instead got hammered. Ballina on-baller were too quick and skilled and tore the Magpies apart. The Bombers kicked six-while holding the Magpies to two. While no loss is good it showed the depth of the club by being able to field a side with so many players unavailable.

Byron Goals - Liam Afflick 3, Mick Hosking 3, Shayne Baldwin 1, Nic Carram 1, Dane Davidson 1, Heath Griggs 1, Karim Kaufman, Matt Kurvlovicz 1 and Nick Doyle 1.

Byron Best - Kane Bullock, Nathan Moon, Shayne Baldwin, Sam Lucas, Jared Balchin, and Dave Smith.

With five games left for the season the Magpies take on Carrara at Bangalow Saturday.

Fighting on with the Mudcrabs

The Mullumbimby Mudcrabs Division 3 men played at Kingscliff on the weekend. Brett 'Bubba' Archibald, who has swapped league's ball for hockey's stick, was instrumental in keeping the score close in the eventual 2-0 loss to the ladder's current bridesmaid Murwillumbah.

Also on Saturday Division 2 beat Casuarina 5-0 with Adam Gadowski and Simon Johnston scoring two goals each and Jimmy Arthur grabbing one. On Sunday in a catch up game D2 produced a great game of hockey to beat last year's premiers Waratahs 5-4. Captain Abel East scored a hat-trick of goals, Nathan Robinson scored one and Simon Johnston scored the match winner just as the fulltime hooter sounded. Photo Tree Faerie.

Tallowood releases new house range

The collective of owners of Mullumbimby's Tallowood Ridge Estate say they went back to the drawing board after listening to feedback from the recent housing affordability seminar in Mullumbimby.

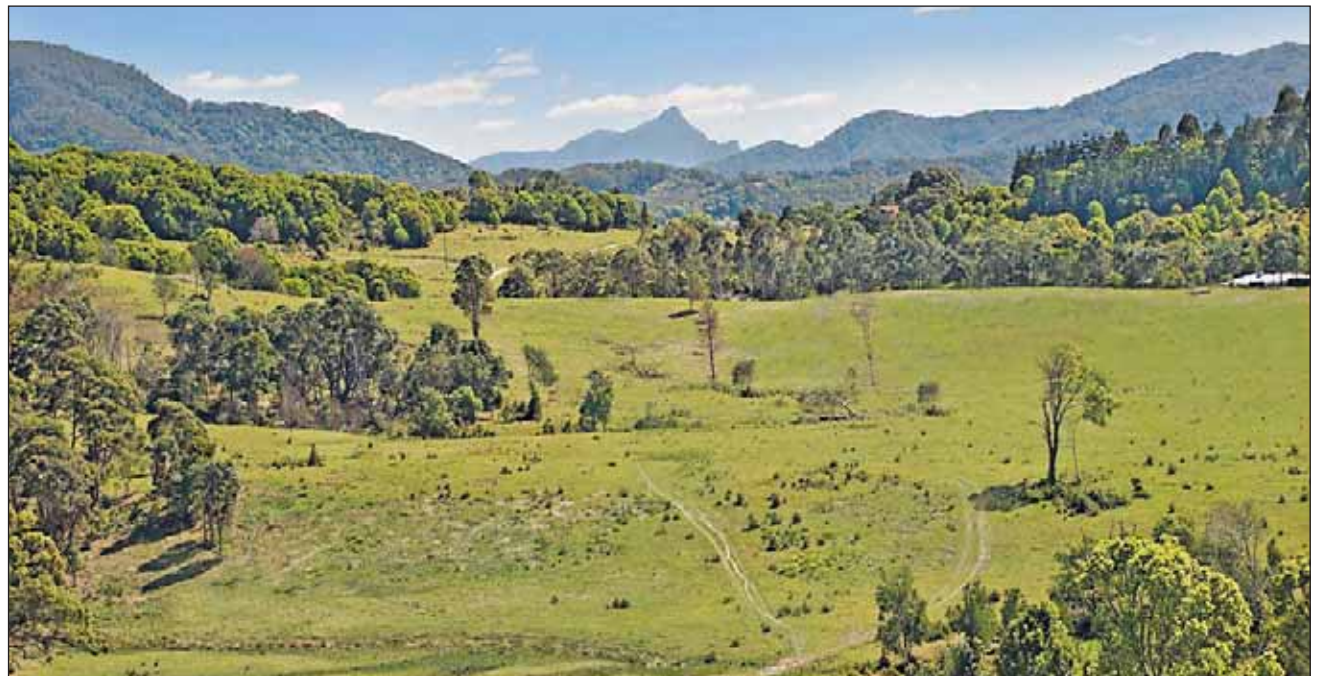

'The majority of feedback was positive, and three land sales at Tallowood have occurred since then,' said Sarah Freeman, one of the Tallowood directors. 'However we've had a lot of requests for home designs in a style that reflects the heritage and rural character of our area. We've also had feedback from those who would like to see a house and land package under $300,000.

'So we've been working really hard and have come up with a range of six country style homes, priced from $110,000 for the two bedroom Coolamon 95 to $198,400 for the three bedroom, two bathroom Summerland 172 with its spacious wrap-around covered decks.'

All home prices include driveway and front landscaping. Land at Tallowood is priced from $181,000 for a 493m<sup>2</sup> block.

'So now it's possible to own your own home in the Byron shire for $291,000,' said Sarah. 'Each lot offers plenty of room for play plus a pool, bedroom or granny flat extension later on. We're thrilled to be able to offer a high quality weatherboard and Colorbond home on land for well under $300,000.'

'The marketplace here in our shire is only for the well-heeled purchasers,' said Rose Wanchap of Red Rose Realty. 'Many of our workers live outside the Byron Shire because they can't afford to rent and they can't afford to buy at the prices houses are selling for.'

'For the first time I see light at the end of the tunnel with these houses. They're really nice homes and, for the first time, they are genuinely affordable.'

A lot of effort has gone into ensuring that the range of different homes all reflect 'rural Byron', according to Sarah Freeman. 'The weatherboard exterior, sturdy posts on the verandas, white trims to corners and windows, classic handrails, round gutters instead of modern square gutters, colourbond roof at 'Queenslander' pitch, double-hung windows – all of these things together make up the country style,' she said.

'We also wanted to ensure that the homes were not high-maintenance, as it is in all of our interests to have Tallowood continue to look fresh as the years pass. Durability of finish is a key reason so many people choose brick and tile, so we chose materials and finishes to get the durability of brick and tile but in the relaxed country character.'

The state government solves the problem of paying local GPs the outrageous sum of $11.60 an hour for overnight duty at Mullum hospital by installing a robot doctor.

Hunting in national parks and nature reserves has occupied the minds of our correspondents of late, along with the future of Mullum hospital. We hope that the presence of hunters won't add to the intake over night at the emergency department. Gunshot wounds are not the usual expectation of the bushwalking experience – at least not in Australia.

It's nice to see safety issues at The Pass are being investigated – yet again. The clash between experienced surfers, befuddled tourists and dive boats is a dangerous mix and no-one has come up with a workable solution, unless you count restricting access by one party or another to part of a beach, which doesn't sit well with many Australians.

The other Google update is that Google Maps and Lego have combined to create the website Build www.buildwithchrome.com. This allows you to build Lego objects on maps of real parts of the world – unless someone else has claimed

The Uniting Church ain't happy either: <http://bit.ly/NoEjHZ>.
