The 11th annual Mother's Day planting was held in Coopers Lane in Main Arm over the weekend, with hundreds of people turning up to plant approximately 1,000 trees. The planting was made possible by the drive and support of Brunswick Valley Landcare, and their dedicated volunteers. The rain held off for the morning planting, and everyone got to enjoy a barbeque, cakes and live music. Nino Haggith and Glenn Wright, who run the Mullum Music Festival and Little Valley Foods, organised the music. Modular homes for flood victims head to Bruns

Paul Bibby

Two vacant blocks in the Bayside housing estate in Brunswick Heads, and land that once contained that town's sewage treatment plant (STP), have been chosen to host temporary 'modular houses' for those left homeless by the recent floods.

Nearly a month after the State government announced its $350m plan to provide up to 2,000 modular homes across the Northern Rivers, the roll-out has finally reached the Byron Shire.

The two Council-owned sites were selected by Resilience NSW from 16 put forward by Byron Shire Council.

The first consists of two small vacant blocks on Torakina Road and Excelsior Circuit in the Bayside housing estate.

The second is located at 125 Tweed Street, the now remediated site of the former Brunswick Heads Sewage Treatment Plant.

No DA required

Under special legislation passed by the State government to help address the flood crisis, it does not need development consent to install the modular homes or any accompanying infrastructure.

'There's no doubt that housing is the most pressing challenge for the thousands of people impacted by these floods,' NSW Premier Dominic Perrottet said at the time of the original housing announcement.

'We're committed to delivering safe and secure housing to all flood impacted communities.'

The sites will contain 'moveable homes in various configurations which can accommodate one to four people, and will be co-located with supporting infrastructure and amenities'.

When asked how many dwellings would be placed on the two sites, Byron Council said this and

Labor MP responds to her party's pro coal/gas agenda

Hans Lovejoy

While the Liberal-Nationals parties are wedded to fossil fuels through political donations, and their employees oscillate between government jobs and the mining sector, Labor have also supported the introduction of new gas and coal mines, despite the urgent warning to reduce carbon emissions by climate scientists.

Labor leader, Anthony Albanese, was reported in SMH (Nine) last month as saying his party will support new coal and gas mines, 'matching the pro-mining stance of the Coalition, as the opposition targets blue-collar workers in crucial seats for the coming federal election'.

The Echo asked local Labor MP, Ms Elliot her stance on the issue: 'Given that you have a record of opposing CSG and appear to accept anthropogenic-induced climate change, how do you reconcile with your party's plans – if elected – to support fossil fuel projects that contribute to an unstable climate for future generations?'

She replied, 'Labor is the only party of government that has a fully detailed plan to cut emissions by 43 per cent by 2030, and reach net zero by 2050 by taking real action on climate change, creating jobs, cutting power bills, reducing emissions by boosting renewable energy, and kickstarting $76 billion of investment. The only way to make this happen is for locals to vote 1 Justine Elliot'.

Policy vacuum

According to Labor's website, www.alp.org.au, only one environment policy is listed – which is to 'fix the [power] grid' to 'create more jobs and power prices'.

There is no policy listed by the Nationals at www.nationals.org.au with regards to climate change.

The recent federal budget by the Liberal-Nationals government had 'big spending in the works for gas and no significant additional spending for renewable energy', according to www.climatecouncil.org.au.

The Liberal-Nationals parties Long Term Emissions Reduction Plan aims to deliver net zero emissions by 2050, by relying on technology investment. Yet Nationals MPs have undermined the plan by claiming the policy is 'dead' and non-binding.

Bruns to host modular homes for flood victims

► Continued from page 1 other details such as layout and access were still to be finalised, but that they estimated it to be at least 50.

The final number will be contained in a lease agreement between the State government and Byron Council that has reportedly been drafted by staff from both governmental arms.

This draft is set to be debated at this week's Council planning meeting on Thursday.

The staff report contained in the agenda to that meeting provides a modicum of further information about the temporary accommodation.

This includes the fact that it must be safe and have appropriate services, and that it must be 'removed within five years of being established'.

'Development consent is required to continue operating the caravan park or camping ground beyond this point,' the staff report states.

While development consent is not required to install the modular homes, the government must ensure that they are installed on land that is supplied with water and electricity, has sewerage and drainage services and has access to communal amenities.

A community housing provider will be responsible for the day-to-day operation of the homes, including admission and turnover of occupants, and closing down the sites once all occupants have found more permanent homes.

Greens launch Artist Wage policy

A pilot program for targeted funding, called The Artists Wage, was launched by the Greens nationally in Sydney on May 7, and had its regional launch at the Brunswick Heads Picture House last week.

Federal Greens candidate, Mandy Nolan, says she developed the policy with Greens NSW Senate candidate, David Shoebridge, and Australian Arts spokesperson, Sarah Hanson-Young, in consultation with artists across Australia.

Ms Nolan has been a prolific artist in the region for over 30 years, not only promoting and performing stand up comedy, but also producing art exhibitions, as well as hosting countless events and fundraisers.

She was joined for the launch by host Joel Salom, Archibald winner, Angus McDonald, singer Emily Lubwitz, and NORPA Artistic Director, Julian Louis. The launch also included a performance by the Big Voice Choir.

'As an artist, I understand the complex challenges of maintaining creative practice and economic viability outside of a metropolitan setting', said Ms Nolan.

'We can't underestimate the importance of the creative sector to a region like the Northern Rivers, to whom creativity is the cornerstone of cultural identity.

World class artists

'We are famed worldwide for being a creative powerhouse. We attract world class arts practitioners, and over the last two decades, have grown world renowned artists. But the pandemic and climate [events] have hurt our creatives'.

NORPA's Artistic Director Julian Louis added, 'We have a crisis dealing with the viability of the venue and how we maintain staff across front of house, technical and the creators. There is pressure on the organisation'.

'As an out-of-work actor in the city, you can get a day job teaching acting to young people, but here, you don't have the ecology to do that'.

Ms Nolan says the program will cost $277.5m and will include an 'open and transparent selection process' for councils in early 2023 'to bid to be nominated as an Artists Council'.

'The policy initiative calls for 10,000 established or emerging artists and arts workers to be paid $772.60 per week for one year'.

She adds, 'The creative funding initiative will breathe life back into the arts sector after two years of cancelled shows and chaos during the pandemic and endless cutbacks by the Morrison government and the devastating impacts of floods on homes, studios, theatres, venues and on audiences in our region'.

Hinterland roads still under repair

When will the roads in the hinterland be properly fixed?

The answer, say Council staff, is they don't know.

They say in a press release, 'We have a contractor working on a plan for all the roads in the hinterland'.

'This includes the design of the work that needs to happen and of course a budget for the work.

'The timeframe for this overarching plan is at least several months, but most likely it will take longer than that. It means that we will continue working on getting roads open so people can get access to their properties.

Temporary roads

'These accesses are only temporary and every time it rains there is more damage that we must fix.

'Across the Shire our normal program of work has resumed and this includes filling the potholes... and there are a lot of potholes'.

Community to lose out to developers under NSW Govt proposal, say Tweed Council

Aslan Shand

With Tweed Shire Council (TSC) strongly opposed to the State government's move to reduce developer contributions to local councils, the council is also seeking to unite with other local councils to reject the NSW government's proposal.

The State government has put forward changes that would see developers no longer paying infrastructure contributions to local councils in relation to DA approvals. The move was in response to the NSW Productivity Commissioner's findings and recommendations about the infrastructure contributions system in NSW.

Community facilities may not be built

The Tweed Council staff report, tabled last week, highlights the challenges that the community will face if they no longer have the funds to build community facilities.

'Council does not support extending the ban on funding Community Facilities, such as community centres and libraries, through section 7.11 Plans from the EWL'.

'Such a decision will result in a shortfall of valuable community facilities,' states the staff report.

'The justification, based on NSW Productivity Commission considering community facilities "general costs that are driven by population growth rather than development contingent" requires further clarification, because generally, if there is no development generating population growth, then there is no demand for additional community facilities, or for that matter any other infrastructure. Reference to councils being able to borrow more to fund such facilities based on a possible but unspecified change to rate regulation is a high-risk proposal for councils.'

Mayor, Chris Cherry (Independent), moved a motion to support the staff response to the Department of Planning and Environment, as well as make representations to Northern Rivers Joint Organisation of Councils (NRJOC), Local Government NSW (LGNSW) and write to local members to advocate on local councils' behalf on this issue.

'Reading the staff submission there are very, very strong concerns to the idea that the State government would like to reduce the costs to developers when they're doing developments in our areas,' said Mayor Cherry.

'Obviously, a new development does create demand for new facilities. I think it is very important that the construction costs of those new facilities are not left to the existing ratepayers to pay'.

Conservative Councillor, Warren Polglase, who seconded the mayor's motion, was adamant that Council fight the recommendations.

'The State government is screwing local government'.

'We wouldn't have half the things we've got if it wasn't for the contributions'.

Ballina Councillors have voted to protect Lennox Head's 'Shed', located on parkland next to the town's beach.

Although most people agree the old picnic shed/ pavilion/shelter isn't a thing of beauty, it has come to symbolise a line in the sand between old and new Lennox, and has aroused strong emotions in both its attackers and defenders.

Councillors say they were bombarded by emails over the issue prior to their last meeting, with the majority urging the building to be retained.

In a deposition before the meeting, Lennox Chamber of Commerce President Brad Pollard made a passionate speech urging the Shed's removal, saying the Lennox Village Vision needed to be completed as planned.

PARLIAMENT OF AUSTRALIA

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Federal Member for Hughes Leader United Australia Party

6th April 2022

My fellow Australians

Liberal and Labor have given Australia one Trillion Dollars of debt ($1,000,000,000,000) (a million million)

At the Government's proposed rate of repayment, it will take Australians 250 years to repay the debt.

A Trillion Dollars of debt will increase home loan rates to 4% in 2 years and to over 6% in 3 years. At 4%, over 60% of Australians will default on their mortgages and will lose their homes, and at 6% or more over 80% of Australians will lose their homes.

The real estate market will then collapse and foreign buyers will flood our real estate market as they will have the money to buy up our properties.

We have to stop Australians from losing their homes!

A maximum of 3% interest on Home Loans

The United Australia Party will introduce a maximum interest rate for all home loans of 3% per annum for the next 5 years to save Australian homeownership.

My treasurer, Clive Palmer, has a wealth of business experience and the ability to save Australia. The Liberal and Labor finance teams just don't know what to do and they are keeping you in the dark.

Repayment of National Debt

Both Liberal and Labor fail to address the Trillion Dollars of National Debt, but not the United Australia Party. We plan to address it head-on and save your family from its impact.

Australia supplies over 80% of all Iron Ore to the Asian manufacturing market, where tens of trillions of dollars are invested in manufacturing in China, Japan, Korea and the rest of Asia.

Asia achieves its position in world trade by using Australian Iron Ore. Asian economies and industry have no alternative.

In the 1960s, Australia had an export license on the export of Iron Ore. The United Australia Party will introduce a 15% export license on the export of all Australian Iron Ore. The export license receipts will be isolated for the sole purpose of repaying our National Debt which will relieve every Australian from that burden and set up our future. So Australia can be all it can be without the financial destruction the Labor and Liberal parties have imposed on our country.

Bring Australian Super Home

Australia has over One Trillion Dollars of Super invested overseas. Just like when John Curtin in World War 2 brought the troops back to save Australia, the United Australia Party will bring back a Trillion Dollars of Australian Super back to Australia, to save Australia.

To save your home and Australia, I need you to vote 1, for your United Australia Party candidate for your electorate, in the House of Representatives and for the United Australia Party Senate team.

We can save Australia and your home.

Who is candidate Terry Sharples?

Hans Lovejoy

Tweed-based Richmond candidate for the May 21 election, Terry Sharples, has described himself as a 'True Independent', yet there is little online information regarding his platform, funding and professional background.

He told The Echo he is a retired accountant with a graduate diploma in financial planning.

'I'm standing for the election, because I'm passionate about the issues affecting ratepayers and have been a keen watchdog on Council issues, working to protect the community from excessive rates and corruption'.

Mr Sharples says he is 'Not swapping preferences'.

'I am the only true independent running for the seat of Richmond, as the others are cross preferencing each other. In my mind, this is a sign of an affiliation with another party or group. I will not be directing any preferences to anyone.

'We need a strong anticorruption body at a Federal level. Freedom for Julian Assange is vital for us to have truth and transparency, and a strong economy without waste and 'pork barrelling'.

'The era of fossil fuels is well and truly over. We need to boost our renewable energy industries as a matter of urgency, which would be a huge shot in the arm for Australian jobs.

'The most important platform for Richmond is honesty and free speech. Australia's two-party system has run our country into the ground, wasted our opportunities and now we have trillion dollar debt! Voters need to make a dramatic shift away from their old voting habits because we always get what we vote for'.

Mr Sharples may have had a part in One Nation leader Pauline Hanson's jailing for electoral fraud in 2003.

According to Margo Kingston's 2007 book, Still Not Happy, John, former Liberal PM Tony Abbott convinced Mr Sharples, a former One Nation supporter, to seek an injunction to stop the party getting $500,000 in public funds after her Qld success. It was aimed a depriving Ms Hanson of resources for the upcoming federal campaign.

The Guardian reported at the time, 'Prosecutors had accused Hanson and [One Nation co-founder] David Ettridge, of passing off a list of 500 supporters as genuine, paid-up members of One Nation in order to register the party and apply for electoral funding'.

Donkey vote

Mr Sharples is first candidate on the ballot, which is known as the 'donkey vote', given the first candidate on the ballot attracts a percentage of voters who are disinterested in politics.

Regarding his association with One Nation, he told The Echo. 'I have a right to have what happened 24 years ago forgotten'.

'I was neither a One Nation party member or indeed even a candidate. I was disendorsed by Pauline within 24 hours of nominating, after they took and never gave back my $1,800'.

One Nation past

'One Nation has nothing to do with my candidacy. And to bring it up would confuse voters.

'Please leave it alone. And concentrate on the real story: an old aged pensioner from Tweed Heads tackling the two-party system he says has ruined our beautiful country'.

He also said, 'There have been many cases under European Human Rights Law, in which the Right To Be Forgotten has been legally upheld. What happened to me 24 years ago would certainly fall into this category'.

'Any publication of the words 'One Nation' in The Echo newspaper in relation to me or my candidacy in the seat of Richmond for the forthcoming Federal election would be regarded as defamatory, as well as deliberately unfair, and I would take immediate action'.

One Nation 'ghost' haunting Richmond

Mia Armitage

Less than a week out from a Richmond Meet the Candidates forum to be held in Byron Bay next Monday, mystery surrounds the One Nation candidate, and her connection to the electorate.

Pauline Hanson's One Nation lower house candidate for the seat of Richmond in May's federal election is Tracey Bell-Henselin, who has formerly represented the minor party in a Queensland state election.

Ms Bell-Henselin had failed to respond to interview requests from BayFM and The Echo as of Tuesday morning, and had also failed to advise whether or not she would attend a Meet the Candidates forum in the Byron Theatre Monday May 16.

The Echo contacted One Nation headquarters last week to enquire about Ms Bell-Henselin, who was registered as the party's Richmond candidate, but was missing from their website.

One Nation said the omission would be rectified, but Ms Bell-Henselin's profile was still missing from the site Tuesday morning, whereupon One Nation advised it would be uploaded within ten minutes of the phone conversation.

The omission was just one of several noted by other media in the federal election campaign, leading to accusations that One Nation was hosting socalled 'ghost' candidates across the country.

Ghost candidates don't just live in electorates besides the ones they were representing on ballot papers, they are also barely visible on the ground campaigning.

Gameau's Regenerating Australia screens May 20

'It is about imagining the future on our own terms; a future where there is hope for us, for our children, and for all living things.'

Regenerating Australia, by Damon Gameau, is a short film that looks back at the next ten years from the eve of 2029 and recounts all of the actions we have taken on climate change and ecological degradation.

Its final screening of an Australia-wide tour will take place at Macadamia Castle, on May 20, with three bands, food trucks, an Indigenous performance, and a post-film discussion.

The film is based on four months of interviews with Australians from all walks of life including coal workers, teenagers and tradies who talked about what changes they would like to see in Australia post-COVID.

Featuring Kerry O'Brien, Sandra Sully, Gorgi Coghlan, Tim Flannery, Larissa Behrendt, David Pocock and other well-known voices, the film uses a news format to look back at how Australia has transitioned to a fairer, cleaner and more regenerative country.

'As part of the panel discussions we look at different pathways and projects that people can get involved with to create this change,' Damon told The Echo.

Grants on offer

'We are working in collaboration with WWF, who are providing grants from $10,000 to $250,000 for regenerative projects here in

'Some of the project applications so far include First Nations cultural learning centres, community batteries, and even a program called Farm My School that looks at connecting regenerative farmers with school kids to grow food and provide it to parents at the school gate.

'We are looking at a whole range of projects that have multiple benefits for community.'

Damon told The Echo that some of the film's best screenings and discussions were in Gladstone, Tamworth and the Hunter Valley.

Coal workers as political pawns

'As part of the research, we spoke to coal workers in Gladstone, and many of them can see that they have been used as political pawns,' he said.

'They told us that they need real projects and alternatives to coal mining. They understand the need for change but also want to keep their high-paying job and thriving communities.'

This may be the 72nd and final screening for Damon, but they are offering the opportunity to schools, community groups and others who would like to put on a screening for their local groups and communities.

'One of the offerings is for anyone to host their own free screening,' explains Damon.

'There have already been over 650 screening requests at libraries, schools, councils and in the community.

'There are free curriculum resources to go with the screening that encourage discussion and encourage people's willingness to get involved and take action.'

The May 20 screening is on at the Macadamia Castle from 5.30pm. It is free to anyone under 18.

You can book a ticket or find out more about the projects at: www.regeneratingaustralia.com.

Health report warns of inadequate services

Paul Bibby

The NSW health system is 'failing residents of rural, regional and remote areas.' a State government inquiry has found.

The Inquiry into Rural, Regional and Remote Healthcare handed down its report last week, after conducting 15 hearings in 11 months across the State.

The report, which contained 22 findings and 44 recommendations, was highly critical of service provision in the bush.

It found that people living in rural areas had 'significantly poorer health outcomes, greater incidence of chronic disease' and higher numbers of premature deaths.

One of the biggest issues highlighted by the report was the critical and long-standing shortage of health workers, particularly GPs.

To address this issue, which has been a feature of regional health for decades, the report proposed that State and federal governments work together to develop a 10-year workforce strategy.

It also recommended a single employer model for GPs, allowing them to move more easily between general practices without losing their entitlements.

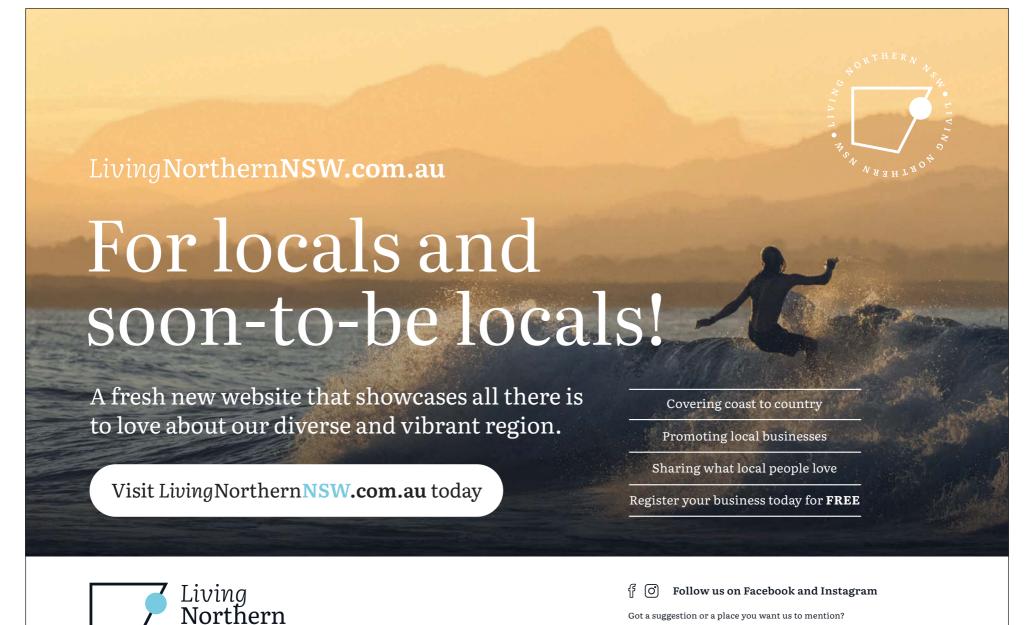

Working with the Primary Health Networks, the university sector and specialist medical colleges was also put forward as a way to increase the number of rural GP and specialist training positions.

The under-resourcing and understaffing of some rural and regional hospitals was also a major issue.

Underlying this lack of resources was a 'culture of fear' within hospitals that left staff unwilling to speak up about challenges such as resourcing, mismanagement and workplace harassment and bullying.

The Inquiry's committee called for an ombudsman to be given greater powers to protect those wanting to speak out about failings.

The State's new Regional Health Minister, Bronnie Taylor, told the ABC that she accepted the evidence and 'I'm ready to fix these issues'.

Labor MP calls Greens election ad 'untruthful and misleading'

Hans Lovejoy

Last week's election ad placed in The Echo by Greens candidate, Mandy Nolan, has been described as 'untruthful and misleading to voters in the Richmond electorate', by sitting Labor MP, Justine Elliot.

Two claims by Ms Nolan have been refuted by Ms Elliot, namely: 'we've had the same backbencher for 17 years', and 'Labor just approved 114 new coal and gas mines'.

As for the 'backbencher' claim, Ms Elliot told The Echo, 'I was privileged to serve as Minister for Ageing in the first term of the Labor government, becoming Parliamentary Secretary for Trade after the 2010 election'.

'I resigned from the later appointment to devote all my time and energy to our community campaign to stop the Nationals' plan for harmful coal-seam gas mining on the North Coast a campaign we won'.

As for the claim of Labor approving '114 new coal and gas mines', Ms Elliot said, 'Ministers in governments approve mining projects, not the Parliament. Federal Labor has not been in government since 2013. This claim is a blatant lie'.

Deliberate lies

Ms Elliot added, 'Our elections are robust, and we have diverse views and candidates in our region, but Mandy Nolan's deliberate lies show that the Greens are as untrustworthy as Scott Morrison'.

Labor MP, Justine Elliot

'It is disappointing that Mandy Nolan is deliberately misrepresenting and attempting to erase another woman's achievements. Women have fought long and hard to achieve representation and a voice in Parliament'.

AAP FactCheck concluded that the Greens claim was 'mostly true' regarding 114 coal and gas projects in Australia's investment pipeline 'which, if completed, would produce emissions estimated to be more than double the current domestic carbon emissions of Australia'. AAP say, 'However, there is uncertainty in the calculation of the potential emissions and emissions from exported fossil fuels'.

In reply to Ms Elliot, Ms Nolan pointed to state and territory Labor governments

Greens candidate, Mandy Nolan

(and oppositions) who are supporting new coal and gas projects.

'I don't know what planet the member for Richmond is on', says Ms Nolan.

'It's like being on the backbench magically excuses her from the decisions of her party. I don't buy it, and the electorate doesn't either'.

'Our electorate is the second most at risk from climate change in the country. We've just experienced devastating flooding right across the electorate. You can't fight the climate crisis while you're pouring fuel on the fire. That's why we need people like me on the crossbench, to push Labor further and faster on climate. I can do that because I'm not beholden to coal and gas donors'.

Circus kids are back for Term Two

Spaghetti Circus has opened its doors for another term, thanks to the help from the community.

General manager, Alice Cadwell, says she is overwhelmed with gratitude for the support Spaghetti has received. Scholarships are available for families who were affected by the recent floods, and Service NSW vouchers can be used.

'The Brunswick Picture House generously hosted eight of their Cheeky Cabarets as a fundraiser for Spaghetti Circus, which raised a staggering $12,500'. For more info visit www.spaghetticircus.com.

Bruns Surf Life Saving says thanks with a snag

Brunswick Surf Life Saving Club (SLSC) hosted an informal thank you barbeque at the club on Saturday for the volunteers and emergency services who assisted in flood rescue efforts across New Brighton, South Golden Beach, Ocean Shores, Brunswick Heads and Mullumbimby on February 28.

Chris Ashton, from Brunswick SLSC, told The Echo surf life saving club members were invited from Lennox, Byron, Ballina, and Cudgen, as they 'all provided boats and crew to assist our club and our community'.

'Additionally, we invited emergency services from Marine Rescue, Brunswick Valley Rescue, the SES and local Tweed-Byron Police.

Hospital's new solar array to supply more than half energy needs

A 720 kilowatt solar system on the roof of the Byron Central Hospital will be the largest rooftop mounted PV installation on the north coast, 'and the first of its kind for a hospital in the region', says the local health authority.

Matt Long from Northern NSW Local Health District (NNSWLHD) said in a press release the system will 'provide more than half of the hospital's annual electricity usage'.
'We know renewable energy is better for the planet, but it's also a financially sustainable option, with the estimated electricity cost savings to our health district across the life of the system being more than $3m. The installation is expected to be completed during the final quarter of 2022, 'to take advantage of the increased daylight hours'.

E-con-oh-my

f there's one thing that the LNP lavs claim to, above all else, it is the assertion that they are the better managers of the economy. But what does this bold claim actually mean?

Are they talking about 'the economy' as a metaphor for society? Because if they aren't, then really, what is the point?

For all those undecided voters out there who are considering sticking with the devil they know, please think twice on this.

The nauseating mantra of 'Strong Economy. Stronger Future.' and 'We aren't Labor' are frankly a poor case for re-election.

But whatever, let's work with it and consider their central claim that they are good with money.

A 'strong economy' can be measured in many different ways, but the public discourse usually boils down to jobs and growth.

Such simple metrics of deficits and unemployment don't tell the full story of what is actually happening out here in the world. Our lives don't automatically improve when the stock market goes up. Company profits have a funny habit of just lining the pockets of the wealthy few.

The notion that growth is always good and a bigger GDP equals a more prosperous society flies in the face of reality. It ignores the well documented ever increasing divide between the haves and have-nots.

A striking outcome of the pandemic crisis of the last couple of years is the obscene amount of wealth hoarded by a few billionaires, while the less fortunate have been allowed to raid their superannuation to get through tough times - gee thanks for that, so

Perpetual economic growth is also the fundamental driving force behind the rampant destruction of our natural environment, and is hastening global heating. The devastating climate change consequences of the business-as-usual approach are now painfully clear to see. To just measure success in dollars while ignoring the true social and environmental costs is not good management at all.

Putting aside how few of us really benefit from all those undertaxed massive corporate profits, at least we should be happy to have a job, right?

If the government is claiming credit for the current low unemployment figures then they should also own the blame for stagnant wages.

Wages have been flat for so long while the cost of living has ballooned - that wages in real terms are going backwards.

The low number of jobseekers is also on the back of a ruthlessly punitive approach to welfare recipients that has led to many of them just

Not to mention that the pandemic forced a large chunk of the workforce to leave the country, and prompted many of us to rethink our own jobs.

That magical number of four per cent unemployed means less when so many of us are underemployed and underpaid, and whole industries are in a staffing crisis.

I'll give Morrison and co the benefit of the doubt that they are genuine in their belief that a flourishing free market creates wealth that benefits us all. But this simplistic radical ideology is flawed and dangerous.

It has failed dismally in terms of social equity, and the environmental consequences are writ large all around us.

This decade-old government has achieved little, made a mess of much, and smirked at us condescendingly all along the way.

It's high time to give someone, almost anyone else, a go.

So, what's likely to happen? It could be a Labor landslide, or we may end up with the proverbial 'hung' parliament.

We really can't be sure at this stage, despite the overwhelming swing to Labor and others, away from the Coalition.

We could have the Hillary Clinton effect – a last minute bombshell thrown at Anthony Albanese.

If Labor wins more seats than the Coalition, but not enough to form government without crossbench support, the Governor General will invite Anthony Albanese to form government.

This is where the argy bargy really begins.

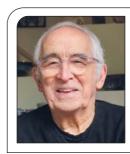

To be safe, the new prime minister would need several crossbench members to guarantee supply, not just the Greens.

They protest they won't do deals, but they will. They would have no choice.

I very much doubt if the new PM and his negotiating team will take on the entire agenda of any of those with whom they are negotiating, but just enough to ensure their own agenda is not hijacked and nothing that is electorally unpalatable.

They will have their eye on staying in government for at least two terms. There's no possibility Labor would agree to immediate closure of Australia's coal mines, needless to say. There's a strong possibility they'd agree to a thermal coal phase out, guaranteeing existing coal workers retraining or significant compensation, with major investments in renewables such as green hydrogen.

When I was in the NSW Legislative Council in the Bob Carr years, holding the balance of power,

The Liberal Party has been held to ransom for its entire nine years in office by the bunch of troglodytes now infesting the Nationals Party.'

- Richard Jones

(Greens MP) Ian Cohen and I, and other crossbench members, wanted the government to conserve substantial areas of the South East old growth forests.

There was an impasse.

Penny Wong, then advisor to Kim Yeadon, Minister for Forests, buttonholed me in the Fountain Court of Parliament House and asked whether I'd be amenable to raiding the environmental trust fund to compensate loggers.

I said I didn't mind if every logger became a millionaire, all we wanted was to save those ancient forests. So legislation was introduced to strip the fund of hundreds of millions of dollars to look after those affected by declaring large areas as national parks. It was a very worthwhile investment.

The new government absolutely won't be 'held to ransom', as Scott Morrison and his at-risk MPs constantly bleat.

It's an absurd allegation anyway – coming from Coalition members - when the Liberal Party has been held to ransom for its entire nine years in office by the bunch of troglodytes now infesting the Nationals Party. It used to be a real country party, looking after rural people. I dealt with some excellent Nationals Party ministers and members when I was in Parliament.

Nationals Party Minister, George Souris, did some great things. Nationals MP, Jenny Gardiner, was on the Parliamentary Committee I chaired. We got on well, and our reports were usually unanimous.

Sadly, the Nationals Party has lost its way, and represents mining interests more than country people. Just imagine the seat of Richmond going back to today's Nationals! It was a safe Nationals seat for decades held by Doug, and then Larry, Anthony. They are still fondly remembered by many.

Tell me, off the top of your head, can you name the Nationals Party candidate for Richmond?

It would have been easy once. It was either Larry or Doug.

To save you racking your brain, it's Kimberly Hone. She's a Pentecostal Christian who doesn't believe in climate change.

And she has declared she is standing for Jesus. Ms Hone made the following comments during a speech to a church meeting, which was subsequently posted on YouTube: 'The ultimate goal for me is ... I want to bring God's kingdom to the political arena. And I want God's kingdom to penetrate the political mountain.'

She's a most unusual choice of candidate, and has little chance of achieving her ambition, barring a genuine miracle.

It's possible no one else wanted to be a candidate for such a Sisyphean task.

Who will win the seat of Richmond? It will be between incumbent Labor's Justine Elliot and Greens' Mandy Nolan.

Personally, while I would be happy to see Justine as part of a winning team, I would absolutely love to see Mandy in the House.

She'd garner as much attention as Jacqui Lambie and fight like hell to get a better deal for the homeless, particularly getting help for those stricken by the floods.

Looking at the numbers, it's really unlikely Mandy's election would harm Labor's chances of forming government. Voters will decide.

Collaborative government

I have heard a number of people saying that we have to vote Labor first to get rid of Morrison as they are the only party who could 'form government'. Yet Labor voted to frack the Beetleloo Basin and NSW State Labor voted to criminalise environmental protest.

Yesterday I spoke with a New Zealander who said they have had a number of 'collaborative' governments made up of Labor, Independents and Greens that have worked really well. The politicians were forced to sit down and work together for the betterment of the country instead of the pathetic name-calling and childish back-stabbing that goes on in Canberra.

Let's bring in a government that has lots of new faces, people who really represent the Australia of today. By that I mean women, young people, people of different ethnic and religious backgrounds and people with a 'can do' approach to solving the major issues of today rather than working for their corporate donors.

mediocre successors as candidates to fill party slots. We, the Australian people, have no say in who these candidates will be. We need Independents and local community activists like Mandy Nolan who have the vision and the courage to fight for us, the Australian people, not the international corporate donors who are presently running the show. Julia Gillard's government was a collaborative government and she passed a lot of outstanding legislation. The best way to protect our democracy from encroaching authoritarianism is to bring in new blood who are beholden only to their constituents.

A doctor like no other

Sincere condolences to all the colleagues and patients of Dr Karel Hromek who sadly passed away in mid April.

April.

I'll never forget my first appointment with Karel. I sat opposite him and attempted, through the brain fog and fatigue, to explain the impossible maze that was chronic illness – the misdiagnoses, condescension and dismissiveness one experiences, and how powerless (and broke) one begins to feel.

When I'd finished my story, I looked up to see that he had tears in his eyes. For the first time in a two-year search that spanned three states I had found a doctor with a genuine capacity for empathy.

On behalf of all his patients I know you'll agree when I say that to this day I still can't believe how fortunate I was to walk into his practice.

To his long-term receptionist, Sandy, and most valued nurse extraordinaire, Lorelei, and to his sister Dominique and children: Daniele, Sian and Michael, my sincerest sympathies to you all. His generous heart and legacy of kindness will live with us all forevermore.

Mullum's drainage

We are one of many households in Mullum that lost their home and belongings in the February flood. Two months after the event we are still trying to get to grips with the way this has turned our lives upside down.

The impact of an event like this includes shock, the heartbreak of seeing one's home and sanctuary being taken, and the amount of energy and money it takes to rebuild. We could never have imagined the emotional stress something like this causes, and yet we know we are not alone and are thankful to be in such a united community.

I am aware the unprecedented rainfall and high tides caused this disaster, however, what didn't help was the appalling state of our drains in Mullum and the lack of Council upkeep of these over the years. My neighbours and I have regularly contacted Council to clear blocked drains, sending photos of overgrown areas that do not allow the rainfall to flow, and these were ignored. It is however interesting to see them attending to these after the flood!

The drains of the lanes behind our home in Argyle Street resemble something from medieval times and I am sure have not been updated in decades. If we pay similar rates to neighbouring towns then why are our drain systems left in such disrepair? I know this didn't cause the flood but it certainly would have added to the issue. Surely it's time for Council to address such matters and create systems equal to the other areas of the Shire.

Wardell Hall CORE

They always say that emergencies such as bushfires and floods bring out the best in people, but do they?

The War Memorial Hall at Wardell, Northern NSW, is currently occupied by Wardell CORE Inc, which is a community group helping flood victims (CORE stands for Community Organised Resilience Effort). Inside the hall is a stall with fruit, vegetables, and eggs. It also has clothing, food, cutlery, crockery, and kitchen utensils. It has a place to sit down and have a friendly cup of tea and a chat. All this is available for FREE to help people who have lost their home, car, etc in the floods. The village of Wardell does not have any shops, so this free service is of the utmost importance.

Thanks to CORE the hall has become a very important part of community life in the Wardell, Broadwater, Empire Vale, and Patches Beach areas. It is the heart of the community. Normally the hall, under its lessee, is shut up for 99 per cent of the year, being used occasionally by the Red Cross, Knit 'n Knat, or the lessee itself one evening a month. The rest of the time it is empty.

The hall belongs to Ballina Council (ie, the people) and is leased to Wardell Progress Association whose president is Pat Carney.

Recently the NSW premier visited Wardell CORE, and the president of the Progress Association told the premier he wanted the hall back. In other words he wants to kick CORE out.

At the recent Wardell Progress Association meeting, CORE was told it must vacate the hall by 18 May to accommodate the Australian Electoral Commission for federal voting, and then it would be worked on by tradesmen for a couple of months to clean it up after the floods under a Council insurance claim. Here I would ask the question: Who said it was growing mould inside, and needed all this work done urgently? Was it the same person who told the Council it must build timber beds around the fig trees in Richmond Street?

Say you make a donation at a fundraiser for the floods - where does the money go? Part of it goes to the wholesalers who keep CORE supplied with fruit and veg at Wardell Hall. Your donation has really hit the spot!

If you ask the Progress Association why CORE has to vacate by 18 May they will say it is a Council decision, and if you ask the Council the same question they say it is a Progress Association decision. If no-one knows who has jurisdiction, then CORE should stay put!

Many of the houses in the flood-affected areas have asbestos inside and this necessitates a lengthy restoration process. The Wardell Hall refurbishment can wait.

Keep CORE in the Hall and keep up the good work, and thank you, Bank of Queensland, for your kind donation of Easter eggs to this cause.

Vale Dr Karel Hromek

Karel Oldrich Hromek was born to French and Czech parents, Christiane Brossier and Oldrich Hromek, on 17 March 1952 in Sydney. With no money Christiane and Oldrich made an epic journey hitchhiking across Europe, the Middle East and Asia to Vietnam where they were evacuated from the war, ending up in Carnarvon, WA. From there they hitchhiked to Perth across the Nullabor Plain, which was just a dirt track through the desert. They arrived in Sydney and shortly after Karel was born. They left Paris dreaming they could get rich by picking up the gold that was obviously lying around in Australia and then the USA, but Karel's birth forever spoiled their onward travel plans, something he and all the family have been grateful for.

Karel's younger sister, Dominique, joined them and they were a tight unit by virtue of being from 'somewhere else'. Twenty years later Karel found his soul place at Boogarem, the farm with the waterfall, in the hills of Mullumbimby. He brought with him his new wife, Robyn, whom he met at the UNSW while studying microbiology, and daughter Daniele. The family soon expanded with Siâan and then Michael joining them. Karel discovered the challenges of banana farming, and so went back to university to study medicine in Newcastle.

After his studies, Karel returned to the Far North Coast and established general practice clinics in Byron Bay, then Mullumbimby and Ocean Shores, practising medicine for 35 years. During this period Karel became involved in integrative approaches to health, wellbeing and nutrition. Karel taught, lectured and authored three books, creating the foundations for this knowledge in Australia, Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore and India. In 2010 Karel married Ann Mary and was very devoted to her.

Karel was both a deep thinker and a dad jokester with a huge heart. He was arguably The Beatles' greatest fan and loved playing and singing music. Karel also loved soccer, both watching, playing and coaching, and was a life member of Byron Bay FC.

Sadly Karel's enormous heart had no beats left and on 14 April 2022 he left this plane for the next. Karel is always in the hearts of his sister Dominique, his children Danièle, Siân and Michael, many treasured friends, and his beloved furry companion, Bentley.

Council have been contacted and I only hope they will be able to track you and your crazed, dangerous dog

If you are unable or unwilling to train your dog or keep it on a lead you are not welcome to walk it unleashed in our community.

The poor defenceless wallaby will certainly have died from its painful brutal injuries or shock. For certain, native animals attacked in this way do not live.

You made little attempt to restrain your dog and obviously you cannot keep it under 'effective control' – it is not entitled to walk off-leash, even in a dog beach area. That is the law.

Your insistence that you could do what you want on a 'dog beach' area, and I was to 'get f*d', was both offensive and dangerous.

I would suggest you urgently report this attack to Council - as I have done - so proper due process can occur to have this dangerous dog removed from our area.

Your attitude to the attack, and your young family's disregard for wild animals was appalling. Please, do not bring your vicious, untrained, unleashed dog to South Golden Beach again.

You have created a risk that we will all have our access to dog walking areas removed, and your dog is a very real danger to wildlife, people and other well-caredfor and trained pets.

Homelessness

Having lived for 80 years on Argyle Street with a history of family living from number 1 to number 57 over four generations I can state none of these homes have ever flooded. The town infrastructure was constructed to service much smaller numbers of houses and people. Even with some growth and less maintenance happening, and with a moratorium on development while the sewage treatment plant was being upgraded, town managed - no flooding.

Then came the development - Tallowood plus the second residence in every backyard, six units on a house block on Argyle Street, similar on Stuart Street etc. No extra infrastructure. Drains overgrown and blocked. Then came the M1 motorway creating a levee to keep water in Mullumbimby, Woodburn and all towns along the way.

In 2011 the Honourable Bill Shorten commissioned an inquiry into flood insurance and related matters, the 'Natural Disaster Insurance Review'. This stated that the distinction between storm damage and flood damage is seen as arcane and artificial. It also recommended that all insurance policies have flood included. Many other interesting recommendations were made.

Following the 2017 flood, Hans Lovejoy published an article quoting hydrologist, Duncan Dey, stating that many gutters were blocked, uncared for, and ignored. Also quoted was Council's Flood and Drainage Engineer, James Flockton, saying drainage structures built by NSW councils are only designed to withstand five to ten year rainfall events at best. He also advised that if Saltwater Creek were cleared and improved, then water would bypass the town. There were many other recommendations.

So, with full knowledge of the dangers they were creating Council continued to pass DAs for excessive development without any improved infrastructure.

Both NSW State and federal governments are responsible for the disaster caused by the M1 motorway and should be held responsible for fixing it before future flooding of previously floodfree homes.

Instead of the media emphasis and community pressure being on rectifying these egregious situations, the plight of the homeless is uppermost. Council and community groups are pushing for building on top of carparks, building on all Council land, and building along the rail corridor on Prince Street (which didn't flood, although it might in the future if you fill it up with buildings), which will result in large numbers of people using inadequate infrastructure. Or yet more water will be diverted down Argyle, Queen, Crown, and Ann streets and New City Road this will create homelessness in these streets which have been flood free for 200 years!

People are using their money, time, and energy organising raising their homes, this is a Council and government responsibility. Put the pressure where it belongs. Please consider homelessness with more thought to those of us that are not yet homeless.

Health

I heard on the radio this morning (1 May) that a man spent 'a record 48 hours' in a hospital emergency department in Sydney.

But I spent three days in a Sydney hospital emergency department because they didn't have a bed or anvwhere else to put me. They sent me home prematurely because I was not sleeping. It was busy day and night. That was fifty-odd years ago.

They still don't have enough hospital beds. I recently spent a couple of days in Tweed Hospital's emergency department because they had nowhere else to put me.

Is it approaching the point at which we will have more multibillion dollar submarines than we have hospital

A Tweed nurse told me that they typically have 'up to 20 patients' in the emergency department because they have no spare beds elsewhere.

In recent history I attended Byron Bay Hospital in severe pain, gasping for breath with multiple broken ribs. They laid me out in the emergency department, and after a few minutes told me to get up and sit in the waiting room because they needed the bed for someone else!

Conclusion: we are short of hospital beds.

I also heard on radio this morning that a man died after waiting seven hours for an ambulance.

But I waited 12-and-a-half hours for an ambulance to take me from Murwillumbah Hospital to Tweed Hospital for an emergency kidney stone operation a few years ago. Conclusion: we are short of ambulances.

I recently applied for attention to a severe toothache at the Tweed Hospital's dental clinic. They put me on a waiting list and three months later told me that I can now attend the clinic to get a voucher to get the job done elsewhere! I complained to Health Minister Greg Hunt at the time. He never responded.

Who shall I vote for? Is there a politician capable of attending to these very obvious health problems?

Or must we spend every last dollar on defence against Butcher Putin's threat of nuclear World War III if he doesn't get his way in Ukraine?

Dog attack on wallaby South Golden Beach – joey rescued dog attacked a swamp wallaby on Tuesday, May 3 at South Golden Beach (SGB) seriously distressing witnesses, one of whom attempted to get the dog off the wallaby.

During the attack the wallaby's joey fell from its pouch and was rescued by people at the scene and WIRES was called to take care of the orphaned joey. The mother swamp wallaby got away but has not been located and most likely died of myopathy.

A local, who asked not to be named, who attempted to rescue the wallaby said that the dog owners showed little care about the fact that their off-lead dog was attacking a wallaby and told him that 'they could do what they wanted on a dog beach and I was to "get f*d". The owners said they lived nearby.

The dog is described as being a large black dog with white markings and was accompanied by a man and woman and their two teenage children.

Fight for nature

Speaking to Kathy Norley from the South Golden Beach Community Association she explained the effort the local community have put into fighting to retain green spaces, wildlife corridors and reserves from a Council and developers keen to build on all available space since the 1980s.

'It took years and many, many hours. In fact it became a full-time job for many people lobbying councillors and being on committees, speaking in Council etc.'

Fern Beach was a large development proposed by Bryan Ray who built the Casuarina development in Tweed Shire. It was a development that locals successfully had reduced in size and impact, again securing gains for the preservation of habitat and native species. Even so the development brought in 60,000 cubic meters of fill, and filled a natural lakethat used to be approximately five per cent of our flood storage and was home to goannas, wallabies and other native animals.

'They had three 11 tonne compactors pounding the ground which caused

Wallabies will often die of myopathy following a dog attack

'Myopathy in Macropods (including wallabies, pademelons and kangaroos) happens when the animal is under extreme stress, as is the case when it is being attacked or chased by a dog,' says WIRES. 'The animal does not have to be injured directly to develop rhabdomyolysis, which is a disintegration of the muscle fibres. From within 24 hours, to up to a few weeks after the incident, the wallaby will show stiffness and paralysis mainly in the hindquarters, progressing to complete paralysis. It will also salivate excessively. Death will occur within 2-14 days after the stressful incident.'

damage to existing houses tiled roofs, cracked their walls and terrified the local wildlife. This was after we had taken the developer to the Land and Environment court, twice, and won a reduction in the size of the proposed development,' said Ms Norley.

'There were several reasons we fought this and other similar projects, and that was because we are on a floodplain and the more you fill and build here the more flooding you will have. The big thing was to keep the areas around SGB and New Brighton as intact as we could so that there were links between the coast, the Billinudgel Nature Reserve and the hinterland. This was to ensure that species could travel throughout the region. We even got special animal overpasses put in on the M1 to facilitate these connected wildlife corridors so that species could transit throughout the caldera and didn't become cut off and isolated.

'We were all very conscious when we moved here that it was about the environment, family and companion animals. Everyone understood, valued and cared about the wildlife. It was about recognising the unique value of this region, it was about the environment that could sustain a local community. That the local community would look after the environment and it in turn looks after us.'

Dogs and cats

Ms Norley said that having companion animals like cats and dogs is important for many people, but that they need to be managed, otherwise they damage the local wildlife.

'We have no problem with companion animals as long as they are managed to support our unique environment and spaces that we have fought so hard to preserve and which makes this area so wonderful to live in,' she told The Echo.

'Dogs must be on leads from your home to the end of the dog-walking path (the intertidal area) at the dog walking beach. If your dog rushes anything it can be classified a dangerous dog and it will have to do specialised training, be assessed, wear a muzzle when walked, and be housed in a confined space etc.'

Currently there are 12,619 dogs registered in Byron Shire, a figure that has been steadily increasing each year, for a population of 36,000 people. In 2021 there were 649 dog related complaints and 101 dog attack incidents, yet there were only 57 dog related Penalty Infringement Notices (PIN).

'That amounts to two dog attacks every week,' said Ms Norely. 'No wonder our wallabies are having a hard time.'

Joey has 'fighting chance'

The joey was collected by WIRES Northern Rivers (Wildlife Information, Rescue and Education Service) on Tuesday and they have reported that 'The little swamp wallaby, named Beach, did well overnight. He has been assessed as viable and has a fighting chance.

The joey is now in the care of an experienced wildlife carer near Lismore. The incident has been reported to the Byron Shire Council rangers.

Flooding – the pain, recovery and a vision of the future

■ As two Bendigoians, visiting Northern NSW over the past ten days, we quite expected to see flood damage in many parts of the region.

For weeks we had watched from afar the unfurling devastation of the floods from Lismore to Byron Bay and less well-known places. Places we know well - we feel exceedingly distressed for the many residents, friends and acquaintances who live in these areas.

On Sunday 1 May we attended an afternoon 'recovery-poetry' event at Lismore where I participated in the readings.

Arriving in Lismore and driving around we were deeply shocked by the devastation - my husband numbed by what he witnessed, and myself unable to control my tears.

Lismore was a war zone, but different, the enemy being nature itself, an enemy which has truly proved itself in this event, and may soon

Negotiations to avoid this disaster should have occurred long ago and been bipartisan, if the expression 'caring for all Australians' means anything.

For years we have known that, owing to global warming, the central north coast of NSW faced inundation, yet nothing has been done to prevent this, or to decrease the devastation.

Street after street of destroyed businesses, footpaths and recreational areas. Home after home, many constructed on stilts metres above ground - and some distance from the river - their owners believing they were secure forever, were destroyed.

Shop windows were covered with mud still to be cleaned, and many were completely wrecked. All the streets were disturbingly deserted.

The few poets and friends who attended the event were clearly traumatised. Many found the subject of today's reading 'resilience', although cathartic, most upsetting, it being far too close to the horror of what they had experienced. Yet, the word 'mud' controlled everyone's perceptions, mud being the first thing they are still, after several weeks, dealing with.

Mud layering the streets and footpaths despite all efforts to clean it away.

The Northern Rivers poetic scene is dynamic with many excellent and wellknown poets regularly performing. But today the works were profoundly different, revealing shattered human beings, their poetry written and performed in disbelief as to what had happened to their town and to their lives. Yet they were there and giving of themselves, wanting to move on.

But how, I ask, can they move on when they are so alone?

Kindly locals had established a makeshift café and were serving food, prepared, cooked, baked and delivered by less-affected residents, free of charge, by and for everyone.

Interesting, too, was the absence of major community groups that are the pride of our nation. The CWA, Red Cross, and Lions, their banners normally loudly and proudly displayed, sorely missed. Lismore residents are starkly alone. Their downheartedness and brave struggle to carry on was palpable. Remaining residents are exhausted from all they have been through, and have still to go through, to rebuild their lives.

Yet some caring souls cared to lighten spirits by providing 'mud-based' humour.

To 'stand in the shoes' of the people of Lismore for a split second is traumatic, to walk along streets without greeting a living soul is unbearable. Yet this is the life of Lismore residents.

Dear Prime Minister, please return to Lismore. You have only to 'stand in their shoes' for a split second to know how they are suffering. Please sit down with the community and listen to their stories and please move 'heaven and earth' to ensure that never again will their community endure such catastrophe.

■ The recent floods have left many people homeless. Trying to address this problem, local councils have waived some of the current building rules to allow people to erect temporary dwellings, which will be allowed to stay in place for two years. But what happens when the two years are up?

I think it's time for a more permanent change in councils' attitude to subdivisions to allow more land on higher ground to be made available for people to build permanent dwellings. The last time I read about the requirements, before a bush block like mine could be subdivided, a landowner had to have over 200 acres of land before they were able to apply for a subdivision.

Yes, it's possible to build a granny flat, or carer's accommodation without a subdivision, but banks won't lend money to build a house without a freehold title.

In these difficult times, when so many people have lost their homes and/or rentals owing to the floods, surely it's time for a rethink about subdivisions? Some of us are now of an age where we can't manage the land as well as we used to, and many of us are now aged pensioners, so paying for help with slashing etc is difficult to afford.

If councils allowed subdivisions on smaller blocks of land which can't be used for agriculture or grazing, it would benefit councils and the local population by providing more housing possibilities and extra revenue from rates

Most bush blocks are useless for growing crops or grazing, but if we have sufficient fire breaks, then areas of bushland could be allowed to grow to provide habitat for wildlife, and the trees and bushes will regenerate and add to better air quality.

Those of us who are growing older and want to help our adult children (many of whom were left homeless by the floods) aren't able to do so, owing to the oldfashioned laws regarding subdivisions. This latest crisis in the Northern Rivers, (with possibly more floods and fires to come) surely heralds a time for a more practical and compassionate change in the subdivision laws.

Diplomacy, or the lack of it, in late-stage capitalism ne of the tragedies of national politics in the last few decades has been a reduction, indeed a white-anting, of our involvement in our immediate region. Instead of diplomatic and foreign aid activity, we have seen a ballooning military budget. Instead of building trust, confidence and practical links with our neighbours, politicians have increasingly beat the drums of war. Instead of an active Foreign Affairs Department, our government relies on the 'fairy dust' of military hardware. Understandable, when so many past ministers take up positions in the militaryindustrial complex.

The debacle over the Solomon Islands is symptomatic of these trends. As their former US Ambassador, Catherine Ebert Gray stated recently: 'The members of [the Solomon Islands] Parliament want something tangible to give to their regions and neither Australia nor the US has done enough in this regard'.

Prior to the last federal election I put together a proposal for a major foreign aid initiative. It's been on hold, but maybe its time has come. I have recently sent copies to Penny Wong and Adam Bandt, to share with their respective parties.

The idea is to repurpose one of our naval vessels as a hospital and disaster response platform. A few years ago we bought two Helicopter Dock Vessels from Spain (now HMAS Canberra and HMAS Adelaide) at a price of $1.55 billion each.

These ships, displacing some 27,000 tonnes each, have two covered decks of 1,410m² and 1,880m². They are supposed to deploy troops, tanks, helicopters, landing craft and supplies onto hostile shores in a style reminiscent of Gallipoli or Guadalcanal. In a real future conflict, they would be sitting ducks. In 2016 Professor Hugh White judged the ships a 'terrible and heroic waste

Imagine one (or both) of these ships fitted out as a hospital and emergency response platform, available for deployment when flood, cyclone, earthquake, tsunami or volcanic eruption strikes. Between these missions, they could visit ports in South-East Asia or the South-West Pacific and provide medical care to the poorest and most disadvantaged of the local population. Although much of the region has a growing middle-class who can afford medical care, there are hundreds of millions who can't. With a top speed of 20 knots, they could reach nearly anywhere in the geopolitical region within a couple of days.

Many of those serving on the vessel, doctors, nurses, ancillary staff and crew, as well as trainees, could be rotated, giving them a special experience and honing their expertise. Not just medical expertise, but language skills and broader cultural awareness would expand in a fertile environment.

This is an opportunity to project soft power in a region with a population of over 400 million, whilst providing tangible help. It might just do more to boost our national security than yet more questionable military hardware.

Hundreds of Northern Rivers teachers joined the strike action

Aslan Shand

Hundreds of public school teachers from the Northern Rivers region joined the 15,000 strong Teachers Federation NSW strike on Tuesday calling for better conditions and pay.

Local teachers gathered at The Tweed River Jockey Club near Murwillumbah as part of the public strike.

The teachers taking strike action called on the Government to 'urgently act on the teacher shortage and its underlying causes: uncompetitive salaries and unsustainable workloads,' said the NSW Teachers Federation.

Principal of The Channon Public School, Steve Manser told the assembled teachers at the Murwillumbah strike that teachers needed more release from face- to-face (RFF), a reducedworkload and better pay.

'Two hours of preparation each week is not enough; so teachers end up doing a huge amount of work in their own time that they are not paid for,' said one teacher who attended the rally but asked not to be named.

I need help if I am going to survive the next 25 years of the pressures of a crippling workload,' Mr Manser told the assembled teachers.

Living and taxes

Why is there so much interest in stats and percentages? How does the average house price or rent translate to the person in the street? What does four per cent unemployed mean?

Cost of living, where we add together food, housing (rent or mortgage) and health, and get a figure in plain dollars per week is a more accurate way to measure how the nation is travelling.

The Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS) defines a person who is unemployed as one who, during a specified reference period, is not employed for one hour or more, is actively seeking work, and is currently available for work.

Our politicians dodge the bullet of how many people have their basic cost of living covered, not whether some have worked less than one hour. Many people struggle to get sufficient hours of work, with an adequate wage, to manage their basic living needs.

All governments rely heavily upon taxes to pay for our living standard, to protect our health, education, and provide vital infrastructure. As the world has become more complex, so has Australian tax law. We now have more than 14,000 pages of tax law dealing with countless specific scenarios.

This law is skewed, in many cases, to preserve wealth, creating many 'loopholes' to minimise and avoid paying tax; tax we all need for our standard of living.

Why should a young PAYG worker, who struggles to meet their cost of living, have minimal ways to lessen their tax, while a wealthier person can utilise family and discretionary trusts, negative gearing on investments and offshore accounts to slash their tax responsibility?

Why can't we simplify many tax laws by reducing some of these 'loopholes'? If wealthier people paid a more representative proportion of their income above basic needs we would have better services, roads, aged care, NDIS, health and transport.

Election 2022

As we edge closer to the federal election, Australia, like most advanced middle-ranking economies is facing some headwind challenges that require government intervention (RBA), in our case rising inflation. This, in turn, will mean raising interest rates.

For most people, these developments will have far reaching consequences, in deciding which political party or lindependent candidate to vote for.

There is a smorgasbord of electoral issues that are confronting voters. Without any doubt, the unravelling climate emergency should be front and centre in most enlightened people's minds.

It should be abundantly clear that the current LNP federal government has been an enthusiastic advocate for businesses to expand and prosper at the expense of working people, who don't share in the wealth that they've created, by legislating hostile anti-union laws, and penalties for unions taking certain types of nonsanctioned industrial action.

This is by design, is not some aberration of justice, and goes some way to explaining the widening gap in social/income inequalities, casualisation and underemployment.

This election will define our collective futures. To vote conservative is a vote against life and the planet.

New Private Native Forestry Code of Practice fails koalas

Aslan Shand

SW Farmers has welcomed the changes to the State government's changes to private native forestry codes (PNFC) that were announced last week. However, Nature Conservation Council, North East Forest Alliance (NEFA) and Independent MP, Justin Field, have all expressed serious misgivings over the reduction of protections to the habitat of endangered species, especially koalas.

NEFA considers that that the new Private Native Forestry Code of Practice is a step backwards, that will increase the extinction risk of our most imperilled species of plants and animals NEFA spokesperson, Dailan Pugh, said.

'In general they are allowing increased logging intensity, reduced retention of old hollow bearing trees essential for the survival of a plethora of hollow-dependent species, and reducing protections for most threatened species.

'Under this code most threatened species of plants and animals will get no real protection whatsoever. The only improvement is an increase in the exclusions around headwater streams, though at 10m this is still dramatically less than the 30m identified as necessary in numerous reviews.'

Phase out logging in public forests

Mr Fields said that changes to NSW private logging rules have locked in an uncertain future for NSW koalas, increasing the allowable intensity of logging across 750,000ha of private land in a major win for the National Party in the ongoing 'Koala Wars' that caused chaos last year within the NSW Coalition government. He has warned that NSW koalas will face yet more loss of critical habitat as a result of the rule changes, and restated calls for logging in the State's public native forests to be phased out to offset the potential losses on private land.

'At a time when there are warnings that the koala faces extinction in NSW in the next few decades, the Liberal Party has again caved to the Nationals on koala protections', Justin Field said.

'Let's be clear – these new rules are a backward

step for koalas in NSW.
Without taking logging out of significant areas of public native forests to offset the impacts of increased intensity on private land, koalas will face the ongoing loss of habitat and further declines in populations.

'The NSW Government is yet to respond to a report by the Natural Resources Commission into post fire logging which recognised substantial areas of NSW State Forests were at risk of serious and irreversible harm from the dual impacts of fire and logging

'These new private logging rules further increase the importance of public native forests for the future of the koala. If the government is going to expand the capacity of logging on private rural landholders, they must get logging out of the public forests, especially those areas on the north and mid-north coast that include high quality koala habitat.

'I want to see private native forestry work in NSW. It will be a critical part of an inevitable transition out of public native forestry, but this increase in intensity of private logging, without removing logging from areas of public native forests, means the health of our forests and the animals that rely on them, especially the koala will continue to suffer,' Mr Field said.

Nature Conservation Council Chief Executive Chris Gambian said, 'The Coalition in NSW has a record of putting the interests of sawmills and logging companies ahead of big old trees, koalas and other wildlife, so it is reasonable to be skeptical.'

'It doesn't matter how the government describes its codes – if they don't protect koalas on private land they will have failed.

'The government has let industry log and flog public native forests for decades, even after the Black Summer fires. Now the timber supply from public forests is drying up, the industry is turning to the almost nine million ha of private forests. The conservation movement has a very real concern that these new codes may accelerate the loss of some of the best forests we have left.'

Mr Pugh has said that 'hundreds of logging plans already approved in core koala habitat will be allowed to continue with no changes. For koalas they are maintaining the exclusion on logging of core koala habitat where already identified in a Council Koala Plan of Management, though this will not apply to core koala habitat identified in future plans.'

he one-in-a-hundredyear flood (that happens every five years) was somehow replaced by a one-in-500year flood in March 2022. While a deluge of conjecture washes through community conversations as to how this could have happened, one consistent theme that is buoyant and beautiful is the community spirit and torrent of togetherness that this adversity has floated in with it.

The recent news that our mighty NSW State Government are going to step into the Northern Rivers as a sort of Mary Poppins and overarch their solutions into an umbrella of several councils via the Northern Rivers Reconstruction Corporation (NRRC) was met with cheer and skepticism. The newly formed corporation will rely on a 'Flood Damage Inquiry', led by professor Mary O'Kane and Mick Fuller; the results will not be complete until the end of June and the recommendations not advised until the end of September. Fortunately, the NSW premier, as part of his election campaign, has pledged to fix obvious things immediately after the 100,000 tonnes of debris has finally been trucked away... which it almost has. Hooray.

Through the aforementioned tsunami of grief (and devastation) there has been some absolutely incredible people providing hope with their smiles, sweat, toil, drudgery, spare rooms, garages, sharing cars, food, shelter and most of all, love. Love has taken the obvious 'mask division' in our towns and brought out our true colours. Bright they did shine and long may those peaceful hues remind us all of the true spirit of this region.

While a State Government funded corporation solution to our flood recovery might end up looking like a stale concrete armageddon suburb all on its own, the bright minds and intuitive hearts in this region know that a community-led template is vital.

communal facilities and local construction/jobs need to stream into the planning process. It is these locally generated ideas/solutions that the State Government need to be spoon fed, by us. Their systems are regimented and often lack flexibility to actually be able to see beyond straight lines and the hinterland finesse we all know and love.

The State Government needs locals on the ground with ideas, concepts and ageweary generational feedback of the floodwaters. We have all those things, and more. www.surve,

Obvious suggestions to acquire elevated local farmland and re-zone it have already been floated into the chatter. Full blown concepts for world-class eco-villages have been mulled over, literally. Local employment and joyful conclusions have been pondered. To build the wireframing of these concepts, we need information from the people. There are passionate groups of locals who are volunteering their time to gather this information; who were affected by the floods. How did it compare to previous damage, is insurance possible, how much has the flooding cost them physically and emotionally, what solutions do they see to the problems in their local area?

We need you, our fellow Northern Rivers residents to cast your opinion via a very thorough communityled survey, please visit: www.surveymonkey.com/r/ NorthernRiversRecovery

The results and ideas/ concepts will be shared at SCU Lismore campus in May 2022 with a panel of locallybased professionals in renewable energy, recycling, civil engineering, town planning, hydrology, telecommunications and insurance. Survey participants will be invited to attend the forum via Zoom and vote on potential solutions. The final conclusions will indeed be presented to the State government.

The Good Life

Red hot Stoner experience

I was lucky enough to visit Stone & Wood recently to see the initial brew being made of the 2022 Stone Beer, the star attraction at the upcoming Festival of the Stone at Stone & Wood's Byron brewery site on Saturday 4 June. Well, the whole 'festival' is a big party night really, with live bands and food trucks and a party crowd as well as beer, but the excuse for the party is the unveiling of this year's Stone Beer - in some ways it's like going to a toddler's birthday party that just keeps going after the toddler's gone to sleep.

Having been on a number of tours of the brewery in the 11 years since they started over in Boronia Place in the Byron Arts and Industry Estate, I was surprised how much I learned in this tour. Either I'm a complete dumbass who can't absorb information, or there's a lot more to brewing beer than you'd think.

Something that struck me on this tour were the large number of malts (different types of malted barley in this case) that are combined to make the flavour profile of the Stone Beer, from the more common light malts right up to the dark chocolately malt. Having crunched my way through the whole range, it will be a challenge to see how many different notes I can taste at the unveiling.

A master brewer can have a pretty good guess at how different malts will combine to form a beer, something which saves a fair bit of time and money at Stone & Wood, where the smallest worthwhile pilot brew is about 600 litres. That might seem hard enough without the additional challenge posed by Stone Beer: having to extract red-hot rocks from a firepit blazing in the courtyard and hoist them up to the first floor, where they are added to the 'mash'. This process (traditionally called 'rousing the mash') adds another level of character to the beer as the ingredients caramelise around the hot rocks, and that flavour gradually dissipates into the finished product.

I have to say the actual extraction and transportation of the red-hot rocks, which seemed to me a pretty cavalier process involving beer drinking and the cracking of the concrete at Boronia Place, has become slightly more professional over the years, but not so much that you'd notice!

The blokes who ran Stone & Wood sold out to Lion Nathan about a year ago, which was a big surprise to everyone, but according to the staff I talked to, the staff fared pretty well, and a lot of them remain, which means there's still a feeling that you're dealing with many of the old local Stone & Wood 'family'. But, check out the vibe for yourself, either at the brewery for a tasting or at the 'Festival of the Stone' event, at which all profits raised will go to the Fletcher St Cottage, a recently re-established specialist homelessness centre in the heart of Byron.

A passion for oysters

It's been nearly four months since the familiar smiling face of Noel Baggaley has been seen at the Mullumbimby and New Brighton farmers markets. Noel farms the Sydney Rock Oyster, rated as the most flavorsome oysters in the world (the Irish are second and the French are Almost all our community have been affected by the floods in one way or another, but oyster farmers are particularly vulnerable to flooding. When you're an oyster farmer, the rain only has to reach 30mm in 24 hours before a 21-day closure period is put in place. Even then, the water testing has to meet the highest standards for ensuring freedom from pollutants before you are allowed to continue.

The rains started playing havoc with Noel in January, forcing closure. This was followed by the big floods, which saw him lose over 2,000 oyster baskets, with only a couple of hundred finding their way back to him. The force of the water lifted Noel's shed up off its footings as the water reached chest height, whereas previous flooding had only reached his ankles. This meant he also lost all his processing equipment, and the contents of his shed, and business infrastructure. This was not the first time he has had to start again.

Noel Baggaley smiling through the tough times.

After Noel lost 60 per cent of his stock three years ago he doubled his capacity to make himself more resilient, so this time he has the stock to rebuild his farm. Noel says when you look at it like that, he's only really lost ten per cent! Which is fortunate – as an oyster is handled 18 times and takes three years before it reaches the consumer.

When I asked him why he sticks with it, Noel let out one of his much-loved chuckles and said, 'INSANITY!'. But in all seriousness, he said he has been involved in seafood for over 40 years and used to have several fishing boats. That's a long time to be in the business, but over that time his interest in oysters grew to become a passion - it's just what he loves.

Mullumbimby Clayworkers Gallery is undeniably Mullumbimby's best kept secret. The Gallery is the showroom of the shared pottery studio next door where an eclectic group of ceramic artists and potters make and display their creations.

Clay in May is one of their annual events, where they invite the broader community to visit, check out their latest collection and join them for chai and cake under the fairy lights in the courtyard. This year it will be held on the auspicious Friday the 13th, 5–7pm.

There will be an exciting and eclectic array of pieces on show including functional-ware, large and small sculptures, slip cast porcelain, and jewellery. It is a collection that reflects both the diversity of ways that clay can be used as well as the diversity of the community itself.

Mullumbimby Clayworkers Gallery is situated in the Drill Hall Complex at 2 Jubilee Avenue, Mullumbimby. Exhibition starts this Friday 13th May with chai and cake between 5–7pm. Gallery is otherwise open every Thursday, Friday and Saturday 10am–2pm.

Weaving through Murwillumbah and surrounds, MAT offers the chance to see local artists at work, participate in art activities and purchase unique works direct from the artists.

This year the village of Tumbulgum joins the trail with an outdoor sculpture exhibition at Husk Distillery and an exhibition at The Belle Riverhouse on the banks of the Tweed River.

MAT culminates on Saturday night with a colourful soiree at the M|Arts Precinct 'Art After Dark', where artists open their studios to welcome visitors and sell their wares. Enjoy live music and street food to celebrate as creative communities of the Tweed come together.

OMAR MUSA PRESENTS KILLERNOVA, TUESDAY 24 MAY

Byron Writers Festival, in partnership with Byron School of Art, invites you to an evening with Bornean-Australian rapper, poet, artist and author, Omar Musa. Omar has released four poetry books, four hip-hop records, and received a standing ovation at TEDx Sydney at the Sydney Opera House.

'Omar's poetry slips between two worlds, between play and dread, the sacred and the mundane, with Houdini-like ease. He leans into the mystery, while bringing down the hammer. Like if Frank Ocean ghost-wrote Nostradamus.' – Hera Lindsay Bird

Come along to hear Omar perform a selection of poetry from his latest book, Killernova, against a backdrop of his stunning woodblock print artworks. Tuesday 24 May, 6pm at Byron School of Art, 112 Dalley Street Mullumbimby. Bookings essential via byronwritersfestival.com/whats-on

IT COULDN'T BE FUNNIER IF IT WAS IN BYRON... OH WAIT!

The Byron Comedy Fest is a carefully curated event for our community and it will be hitting the foreshore of Main Beach 9–12 June.

Laughter enhances your intake of oxygen-rich air, stimulates your heart, lungs and muscles, and increases the endorphins that are released by your brain. A good laugh reshapes the way we see the world and lightens everything up.

Who doesn't want that?

You don't have to be 'into' stand up comedy to enjoy everything that Byron Comedy Festival has to offer. Delivered early in June each year this festival really offers up a gorgeous boutique style experience from beachfront Byron Bay.

World class entertainment is not the only thing Mell Coppin and Zara Noruzi (the Festival directors) deliver. Locally sourced food and delicious cocktails are served in a vintage Scandanavian-style space with the waves of Main Beach lapping just metres away. And, as if you could want for more, the festival purchases carbon offsets, so it is carbon neutral.

Meet the Candidates for Richmond Live Broadcast

Ten candidates, one seat: who will win your vote for Richmond? BayFM and the Echo have joined forces to host a free event at the Byron Theatre on Monday 16 May at 6pm for you to meet the 10 candidates and answer questions from their community. This event will also be broadcast live on bayfm.org and 99.9FM.

Win Angus Stone's Rose Pink Cadillac

Subscribe to BayFM (including renewals) by 31 May 2022 and you'll get:

A free download of Dope Lemon's Rose Pink Cadillac album.

A chance to win a real 1960 Rose Pink Cadillac as part of a national promo.

bayfm.org Listen like a local. Being a regional town, Byron is not automatically on artists' touring list. So the primary motivation of the Festival is to get fabulous comics to Byron who wouldn't have ordinarily stopped by. From all accounts they've done an excellent job with performances from some of the greats of comedy; Glenn Robbins, Dave O'Neil, Denise Scott, Jean Kittson, Peter Rowsthorne, Joel Salom, Andy Saunders, Gerladine Hickey, Zoe Coombs Marr, Fiona O'Loughlin and the list goes on...

The diverse program is delivered over several days and has been carefully considered to ensure there is something for everyone; great family shows in the daytime and lots of adult fun as the winter sun settles down.

Comedy provides the space to talk about the most provocative current affairs in the most joyful way and this festival celebrates the connectedness between the artist and the audience. The Byron audience are nothing if not engaged, and this town thrives on provocative current affairs spun in clever and amusing ways.

The true Byron vibe is on display at this event and with 1kg of plastic removed from the oceans with every ticket purchased, thanks to The Hidden Sea Wines, it's an event worth weaving into your Byron Bay experience. www.byroncomedyfest.com

NORPA YOUTH AND SHAKESPEARE

The community are invited to the first public screening of NORPA Youth's short film project, Street Shakespeare.

As part of the project in 2021, participants explored selected works of William Shakespeare and developed professional techniques in the analysis and performance of classical text for the camera. The scenes and monologues were then professionally shot in urban locations across Lismore.

The resulting short films, directed by actor/teacher Scott Johnson, will now be presented in the Lecture Theatre at SAE Institute, Byron Bay, on Friday 27 May at 5.30pm.

Following the devastation of NORPA's home at Lismore City Hall owing to floods, we hope you can make the journey to celebrate our NORPA Youth!

Street Shakespeare short film, 28 May at 5.30pm. Please RSVP attendance and numbers, with subject 'Street Shakespeare 2021' to: boxoffice@norpa.org.au.

GREEN IS THE NEW BLACK IN BYRON

Green Is The New Black is a documentary created by Byron's internationally renowned metalcore band, In Hearts Wake, examining the music industry's relationship to the environment. While the film chronicles the making of In Hearts Wake's 100 per cent carbon offset 2020 album Kaliyuga and their journey to becoming the first band to be a certified Carbon Neutral Organisation, it is more than a film about one band and one album. As In Hearts Wake examine their processes and search for more environmentally sustainable options, inspiring new possibilities for an entire industry begin to emerge.

A special screening of Green Is The New Black, next Tuesday, will be followed by an in person audience Q&A with the driving forces behind the film; Jake Taylor, director and vocalist of In Hearts Wake; Nidala Barker, musician and First Nations educator and activist; and Jono Salfield, founder of Afends sustainable street and surf wear company, in conversation with Mandy Nolan, comedian, author and The Greens federal candidate

The proceeds from the screening will be donated to Rainforest 4, with one tree planted for every ticket sold. So gather your friends and get your tickets quick.

Proudly presented by In Hearts Wake and Rainforest 4. Byron Theatre, Tuesday 17 May, 6.30pm. byroncentre.com.au

MANDY NOLAN'S

ABORTING FREEDOM

Why are women still having to fight for bodily autonomy?

What's happening in the US right now could have more sinister implications for the reproductive rights of women all around the world. And let's be clear, data from the World Health Organisation shows that banning abortion has no effect on abortion rates throughout the world. It does however have an impact on women's safety and their mortality.

Banning abortion puts us at risk of dying from a botched procedure. Going after women's constitutional rights to an abortion really does feel like the far right is gunning for us. They intend to plant their flag deep in the wombs of the women of the world. Because, what happens in America echoes around the world. If women in the US lose their reproductive rights, we could be next.

Right now, in the US, the religious- and far-right are trying to overturn the 1973 landmark Roe v Wade ruling that recognised restrictive regulation of abortion is unconstitutional. Almost 50 years ago a US Supreme Court held that criminalising abortion in most instances violated a woman's constitutional right to privacy.

The Court attempted to balance the State's distinct compelling interests in the health of pregnant women and in the life of potential foetuses. This allowed the State to regulate abortion at approximately the end of the first trimester. But in May 2021 Texas adopted a law: that all abortions beyond when a foetal heartbeat can be detected, at around six weeks, are effectively banned. The ban shifted the responsibility to private citizens who would face a civil law suit if they performed an abortion, or even if they aided or abetted someone seeking an abortion. Like, if you drove your friend to a clinic, or stayed with them as support then you could face a fine of up to $10k, plus legal costs. Oh, and this law doesn't care if you've been raped or if the pregnancy is a result of incest.

This rising concern for women's rights has been triggered by a leaked draft of the US Supreme Court's deliberations in a related case that suggests the Court plans to overturn the Roe v Wade ruling which established a constitutional right to abortion. If it does overturn the ruling then abortion in the US could be banned in 22 states. Some states have the paperwork sitting there, ready to go.

According to one source, women who are denied an abortion are almost four times more likely to be living below the poverty level. Forcing someone to carry out a pregnancy or to seek an unsafe abortion is a complete violation of a person's human rights to privacy and bodily autonomy.

Why after 50 years are 'pro-lifers' and Republicans still wanting to destroy abortion rights? According to their own survey responses, anti-abortion voters are shown to be hostile to gender equality in practically every aspect. So, it's gender war; misogyny in action. As women reach for gender equity around the world, as we grow in power and privilege, this is patriarchy's latest effort to regain control of women's bodies. In a patriarchal culture where sexual violence is still commonplace, preventing women from accessing the basic tool to prevent pregnancy after rape – and then jailing them if they do is, simply, gendercide.

Denying women the basic human right to make a decision about their body is unconstitutional and wrong.

The State needs to stay out of women's wombs. We are not your country to colonise.

IT CAN'T GET ANY STRANGER

Doctor Strange in the Multiverse of Madness is a 2022 American superhero film based on Marvel Comics, featuring the character Doctor Strange. The film was directed by Sam Raimi, written by Michael Waldron, and stars Benedict Cumberbatch (as Stephen Strange), alongside Elizabeth Olsen, Chiwetel Ejiofor, Benedict Wong, Xochitl Gomez, Michael Stuhlbarg, and Rachel McAdams.

The film swirls around Dr Strange, who protects America Chavez (Gomez), a teenager capable of travelling the multiverse, from Wanda Maximoff (Olsen). America Chavez, and a version of Dr Stephen Strange, are chased by a demon in the space between universes while searching for The Book of Vishanti. Strange is killed and Chavez accidentally creates a portal that transports herself and Strange's corpse to Earth-616, where that universe's version of Dr Strange rescues Chavez from an octopus demon with help from the Sorcerer Supreme, Wong. Chavez explains to Dr Strange that the demons are hunting her because she has the power to travel through the multiverse...

The excitement just builds from there. You can see this Marvel-ous film this week at the Ballina Fair Cinemas, visit: ballinafaircinemas.com.au for movie times and tickets.

A C Q U A I N T A N C E S

STARS BY LILITH

Mercury reverses this week, and Jupiter strides forward into the sign of fire, strife and inspiration...

ARIES: And it's here! The fabulous. flaming, once in a decade rebirth of Jupiter in Aries. As the planet of expansion restarts its journey through the zodiac, you'll enjoy its first exuberant surge into a brand new life cycle until October, then again from late December into next year.

TAURUS: Jupiter's genial boost introduces you to new directions in business, friendship and community groups. People coming into your life with tech and networking skills are likely to be fun, inspirational and supportive. Meanwhile, Mercury's retrograde makes it highly advisable to assume nothing, stay flexible and try not to do the stubborn thing.

GEMINI: Jupiter revving its engines in Aries is an enterprising astrocycle for new ventures, but it carries a heavy caution against impetuous leaping in without doing due diligence. And what was retro Mercury good for, again? Activities beginning with re: like revising, reviewing, researching, renovating and reconnecting.

CANCER: Eclipses often carry the X-factor, and this week's total lunar eclipse promises sultry behind-closed doors activities, along with a secret reveal, which may even unveil something you've been keeping from yourself. Other possible scenarios could be an emerging scandal, unexpected change of management or sudden transition.

LEO: This week's eclipse, auspiciously aligned with Mars, Neptune and Pluto could spark a creative breakthrough. And Jupiter's move to Aries encourages your bringing that creation into the world, inviting you to take the initiative in all areas of life. Keep in mind this is a long transit, more marathon than sprint.

VIRGO: Mercury retreating through the sign of the Twins delivers a double-dose of communication chaos, so expect some friction this week. Triple-check before posting, sending or signing, and hold off on purchasing anything with wheels till next month if possible. However, if you've got something unfinished that's worth revisiting, this is LIBRA: Though Librans love operating in pairs, Jupiter's move to your opposite sign on the zodiac wheel focuses the coming months firmly on selfdetermining decisions. And according to Libran philosopher Hannah Arendt, the manifestation of the wind of thought is not knowledge but the ability to tell right from wrong, beautiful from ugly.

SCORPIO: Eclipses tend to initiate change – which can be positive and beneficial. On 16 May the first full moon eclipse in your all-or-nothing sign since 2012 wants to know; 'Are you in or out?'. And what truly is your passion, your real reason for being here? This moon won't leave you without clues.

SAGITTARIUS: Some joyful news to make your spirit sing? Your boss planet, Jupiter, sizzling into a highly creative placement for Sagittarians until late October rockets you, the zodiac's enthusiasts, into a pyrotechnic, unstoppable mode. During this overactive cycle the wisest astrological advice could be practising patience with process and protocols.

CAPRICORN: As Jupiter moves through your home and family zone for the next six months, retrograde planet Pluto's takeovers, shakeups and breakups could realign your personal world. As Pluto overhauls long-term values, Jupiter affects our monetary system, and this week could restore cautious confidence to your economic and domestic landscape.

AQUARIUS: As Uranus, your mentor planet, continues Aquarian growth processes and existential education, what used to make you happy may lose its pull as you begin to feel the need for something different. An error, missed opportunity, mistake or misunderstanding could be the catalyst for something new and beautiful to emerge this week.

PISCES: Jupiter transits astrologically correspond with periods of growth and expansion, so with the largest planet heading into your zodiac zone of finance, valuables and self-worth till late October, you'll be tuned into the good fortune in your life, the increasing opportunities available to you, plus a whole heap of serendipitous synchronicities.

Local tennis players serve up success

Ross Kendall

Junior tennis players from Mullumbimby and Byron Bay have collected impressive results at the Tweed Heads Open and NSW State Championships this month.

Solomon Wolf was too good for all comers earning a win in the tier two U/17 Boys, so too Oscar Parker who won the tier one U/17s at the Tweed. Onyx Cheong rounded out the winning trio from the Mullumbimby Tennis Club when he took out the tier two open division.

Oliver Heanes from Byron Bay Public School was selected to represent the North Coast region at the 2022 PSSA State Tennis Championships held in Sydney last week.

It is the first time in ten years a kid from Byron Bay Public has been selected.

After strong results earlier this year the Mullumbimby-based Point Break Brazilian Jiu Jitsu (BJJ) team are ready for the autumn running of the Australian Open this Sunday at the Cavanbah Centre.

The team led by Rhys Dykes won 12 gold, nine silver and ten bronze medals across various age divisions and belt levels at the most recent running of the Open.

The club finished third out of the 50 teams in the competition, and are looking to improve on that this weekend.

Tweed sailors take on the Peel Island Marathon

Matt Andrews

Seven corsairs from the Tweed Valley Sailing Club made the journey to Moreton Bay to compete in the Cleveland Yacht Club's Peel Island Marathon.

After the start Monopoly had a small lead over None the Wiser on a very windy and wet afternoon. But both boats doused their own hopes as None the Wiser capsized and Monopoly headed to a wrong marker.

Cyanara was left to battle it out with the Gidget for the win.

Conditions were, by any standard, wild by this stage, and the sea state on the northeastern corner of Peel Island was not to be treated lightly.

Gidget made a small but costly navigational error that handed the Corsair class win to Cyanara. Local sailor, Greg Driver, on his corsair Moody Blue, came in third and Keenas surfed over the line for fourth in the class.

Local footballers make history in Mullumbimby

Albert Moses

Mullumbimby Brunswick Valley Football Club (MBVFC) returned to the top tier of men's football for the first time in 36 years, when they took on the Lismore Thistles in Football Far North Coast's premier league.

The MBVFC have never won this division and are attempting to build a team that can change this over the coming seasons.

The match up was part of an enthralling double header played at their home ground on Pine Avenue against seasoned veterans. The Lismore Thistles are the second most successful premiership team in the competition's history.

Game one saw the Valley's Championship team take to the pitch and concede an early goal in the first minutes of the game. The second half saw the Valleys turn the game around with two fine goals from talented youngsters Luke Darbyshire and Raen Santos.

Game two looked promising, with the men's premier league team playing a cagey first 15 minutes while they found their feet, followed by some quick combination play and the club's first ever goal in the top tier by Ethan Zikhron.

The second half saw the more experienced Thistles side taking advantage of some lapses in concentration from the newcomers, with a goal from a corner taken quickly and then a second mid-range shot of some quality taken while the Valleys paused to dispute a challenge off the ball.

Around 150 spectators came to see the show and provide plenty of support.

If you were confused or outraged by the eight page carefully worded anonymous pamphlet insert in The Echo last week, you were not alone.
