Rally too divisive
says ecologist

Luis Felio

The ecologist who conducted the environmental impact study for last year's controversial world rally said the event had split the community like nothing he'd seen before.

Tweed-based Dr Stephen Phillips told a special Tweed Shire Council briefing for councillors, senior staff and media on Tuesday that the rally had been marked by so much 'misinformation, mistrust, conjecture and speculation' and he personally found the backlash of his involvement with the event 'offensive'.

Dr Phillips cast doubt on whether he would take up such a task again, saying 'we took such a battering, I wouldn't put his workers through the experience again'.

He said he was 'ashamed' that some of the abuse and false claims came from his own community.

'Lot of mending to do'

'We now appear to be a community divided by the rally and its ideologies, there's a lot of mending to do, how I don't know,' he said.

Dr Phillips said he 'copped abuse all through this process from both sides', and felt personally let down by people he knew 'who turned on me because I was the sacrificial lamb to another cause'.

He said 'lots of people' including himself, were offended by the state government overriding threatened-species legislation with a special law to ensure the event went ahead, and he felt his work had been 'arguably nullified' as a result but was instructed by rally organisers to continue the study as normal.

He also said he 'knew it would end up in court' because the community would challenge the legislation to try and stop the rally.

Running the rally on national park roads proved to be 'most divisive' due to the potential impact on world heritage and biodiversity values which he 'shared' because he lived and worked in the Tweed.

The decision to accept the consulting ecologist job for the rally job had put him 'between rock and hard place' but 'ultimately I took a deep draught from the proverbial poisoned chalice'.

He gave a detailed outline of the research done by his firm Biolink Ecological Consultants of fauna and flora along the rally stages and praised Rally Australia for co-operating fully with all his recommendations.

Dr Phillips concluded that there was no evidence to indicate the event had significantly impacted on threatened species of fauna or flora, with around 12 animals killed during the three-day event, mostly reptiles and small birds as well as a small wallaby.

He said he was also 'disturbed' about a claim that the planting of 1,000 trees by rally organisers as a carbon offset for the event did not happen, as he had approached Landcare and other community groups with the offer from Rally Australia to fund the plantings but was rejected at the time.

He said he was disappointed because the company wanted to 'throw money' at it but 'doors were closed all the time'.

'I'm still unable to find sources in the community to apply for that money,' he said, so the claim was 'hypocrisy'.

Developer wins $1.8m concession

Ken Sapwell

One of the shire's biggest land-owners will avoid more than $1 million in charges after Tweed Council backed-down in a long-running stoush over fees being levied to develop a prime slice of beachfront land.

Under an agreement hammered out with Richtech Pty Ltd at court-ordered mediation sessions and given the thumbs up at last week's meeting, the council will waive its demand for a contribution for open space.

Richtech Pty Ltd won the concession after it challenged a range of council charges for developing up to 175 blocks of prime beachfront land within one of the shire's oldest and most controversy-prone subdivisions.

The council backdown clears the way for Richtech, a subsidiary of the Barclay Group, to develop 24 blocks on the Seaside City Estate, nearly 90 years after the council first gave the 32ha site bordering Cudgen Creek subdivision approval.

The company, which was embroiled in the inquiry which lead to the council's sacking in 2005, took the council to court to contest more than $9 million in section 94 payments for roads, open space and other council services.

Richtech claimed the charges had been negated by a 2007 agreement with the council when it first began drawing up plans to create roads and other infrastructure necessary to bring the long-stalled development to fruition.

But at a series of court-ordered mediation sessions Richtech offered to foot all payments except a $3,200-a-block charge for shirewide open space and recreation areas, which council planners say will deprive their coffers of $1.8 million over the life of the project.

Details of the behind-the-scenes deal to let Richtech off the hook were revealed in a report in last week's council agenda, coming at the same time as a plea from the Cabarita Surf Lifesaving Club for a reduction in their own section 94 charges.

The report reveals that councillors

Locals farewell Mt Burrell store owners

Tania Phillips

When Donna and Des Cecil took on the Mt Burrell General Store almost 12 years ago, they thought it was just another job but what they didn't realise was they were becoming an integral part of a close-knit community.

This Sunday, May 30, the community near Uki will say not goodbye but thank you, with music and food at the Sphinx Rock Cafe next to the store. The pair have sold the store that has been their life (seven days a week, sometimes 14 hours a day) but will stay in the area on one of their two farms.

'I'm looking forward to coming down for a coffee and not having to do the orders,' Donna quipped.

The couple say they've been very lucky as store owners of the community they have now become such a part of.

Donna and Des, who raised four kids (now aged 35-20), most of whom were teenagers when they started at the store, say they will miss the human company but not the long hours. Mind you, Donna joked that she would probably be kept busy keeping the workaholic Des in jobs and 'out from under my feet'.

Des, who grew up on a local dairy farm in the Tweed, and Sydney-born Donna became store owners almost by accident.

A former groundsman at the Murwillumbah Golf Club, Des went on to work in the hospitality industry at Seagulls before becoming the manager of Jet Club nightclub for seven years from 1978-85, when the club was at its height and attracting some of Australia's top bands.

'We were getting the likes of Midnight Oil, Cold Chisel and the Angels, they were probably my favourites! There were a few egos out there but most of the bands were really pleasant to work with.'

He said the owner of the club also owned a nursery out in the Mt Burrell area and he went on to manage that and from there the family became involved in growing small crops.

'We just decided to have a little fruit stall but that led to the general store. It has been amazing, we have met a lot of different people from all different walks of life.'

Sunday's festivities, which also serve as a welcome for new store owners Aaron Gooley and Brent Kasey, will start at midday and feature local music legends Murray Kyle and the Perch Creek Family Jug Band, which was recently featured on ABC TV's Spicks and Specks doing a cover of 'The Angels' hit 'Will I ever see your face again?'

Longer pub trading upsets residents

Ken Sapwell

The owners of Pottsville's only hotel have won a partial victory in their long battle for a two-hour extension to trading hours, despite protests from local residents.

Tweed Shire Council last week gave approval to Beachside Court Pty Ltd to trade until midnight on Friday and Saturday nights on a 12-month trial basis, but turned down a request for similar hours to apply during the rest of the week.

Residents had managed to head-off two previous attempts to extend trading hours because of the impact on their amenity.

They say many of them were there before the pub was built and have had to put up with noise and disruption from patrons, particularly at night.

But council planners have imposed a range of conditions, including noise amelioration measures and the appointment of a security guard which they say should reduce impacts to an acceptable level.

Meanwhile, council is seeking community feedback on concept plans for a proposed new community centre in Pottsville.

The not-for-profit Pottsville Beach Neighbourhood Centre provides social and community services from a council-owned building in Elizabeth Street which council wants to replace with a two-storey building incorporating offices and community rooms.

Members of the public can see several displays of artist's impressions and concept plans for buildings costing between $1 million and $2.5 million at the centre, with staff collecting comments on the proposal until June 9.

Rally divisive

He concluded his briefing by saying the dilemma facing the community now was 'how do we want to present ourselves to the outside world?'

All documents on the impact study will be posted on www.biolink.com.au early next month.

Meanwhile, No Rally Group (NRG) spokesperson Andrea Vickers said they were 'happy more animals weren't killed in the rally, but the body count is not the point'.

'How about the road toll on the human species? One hundred and seventy-five people die every year due to speeding in NSW. Events like the rally will add to this figure,' she said.

'The real question is, what is the Tweed about? Is it about ecotourism, a peaceful lifestyle and a safe community - or is it about hooning on public roads?'

decided to accept Richtech's offer at a recent closed-door council workshop and waive the open space contributions specified in a development control plan drawn up for the site in 2006.

The report says this was to avoid future litigation and the lure of other contributions which Richtech had finally agreed to pay in the negotiations.

The report cited in particular a 'structured' open space contribution worth $3,500 a block, which councillors 'considered imperative' to help with the costs of sports fields at Depot Road.

Richtech, which is part of the Barclay brothers' empire that included a strip of coastal land since sold to the developers of the Salt and Casuarina estates, has quietly acquired about 85 per cent of the Seaside City estate since it was subdivided into 205 titled lots in 1927.

But the company's plans to develop the land over the past five years have stalled because of a stand-off with council planners over section 94 charges, as well as rezoning and environmental issues.

Planning delays spark council complaint to minister

Ken Sapwell

Tweed Shire Council has fired off a strongly worded complaint to NSW Planning Minister Tony Kelly objecting to the way his department is assessing major development projects in the shire.

The council endorsed a mayoral minute to write to Mr Kelly 'expressing its dissatisfaction' with the government's Part 3A process which has stripped local councils of their planning powers to approve major coastal developments.

The letter accuses the departmental bureaucrats of either ignoring the advice of council planners when assessing the projects or refusing to give them the time needed to make a submission.

'I believe it is time we made a stand,' said mayor Warren

Polglase, whose letter of protest won rare unanimous support at last week's council meeting.

'Tweed has more Part 3A applications in the pipeline than most other councils, there were 13 of them on the books when I last looked,' he said.

'It is essential that the council and our planners have a meaningful input if the process is to work satisfactorily.'

Widespread disquiet

The letter follows wide-spread disquiet about the department's handling of a string of Part 3A applications, including its removal of beachfront parking spaces at Casuarina and its refusal to grant a deadline extension for a submission critical of the Cobaki Lakes project.

The final straw came last week when the council considered a Part 3A matter for a 13-lot residential subdivision at Bogangar which was so devoid of detail that council planners were unable to assess whether it met engineering and infrastructure needs.

Chief planner Vince Connell said in a report that because of the 'limited time-frame' the department had given staff to make an assessment, he had asked the department for an extension but the request was rejected.

'While some of the planning and technical assessments were possible, there was insufficient time to conduct a detailed engineering assessment of the proposal,' he said of the partially completed submission which will be sent to the department.

Cr Polglase said the process was also imposing an enormous drain on council resources, with council staff forced to undertake 'unpaid work' assessing whether urban design, environmental and infrastructure standards were up to scratch.

The department has also come under fire over its new template for Local Environment Plans (LEPs) which greatly reduces the amount of land under environmental protection in the shire and opens the door for taller buildings in towns and villages.

The Tweed Heads Residents' Association has also written to the department objecting to its decision to scrap a community approved master plan for the town and attempt to replace it with a new LEP to allow the town to be book-ended by high-rise buildings.

The association says the draft plan was drawn up by bureaucrats in Sydney who failed to justify their new high-rise vision for the town and completely ignored the views of the wider community.

Council 'not bypassed'

A spokesperson for the minister denied the council's views were being bypassed, saying 'the Department of Planning endeavours to work closely and cooperatively with councils at various stages throughout the assessment process.'

'Where Tweed Shire Council has undertaken assessment work on large and more complex major projects such as Cobaki Lakes and Kings Forest, council has been remunerated on a one-off basis in recognition of time spent on carrying out this work.'

'Council's work in this regard is considered to be valuable to the assessment process, as it provides local expertise and knowledge to the assessment of larger scale major projects in its local area,' the spokesman said.

Dancing across generations

Tania Phillips

Kingscliff High School arts head teacher Robyn Ludeke remembers a time when there were just 60 students from 10 schools involved in the Far North Coast Dance Festival.

But that was 25 years ago. When the event is held on Monday and Tuesday at the Lismore Workers Club next week there will be more than 1,400 students from kindergarten to Year 12 from more than 30 schools.

While the original schools were a handful from the Lismore and Tweed regions, they now stretch from Evans Heads to the Queensland border. The performances take in everything from modern, ballet, tap and jazz.

Robyn, the festival director, has been involved in every one of those shows since the event's inception and is now overseeing the artistic endeavours of some of the children of those original dancers.

The original dancers aren't just parents, some have gone on to become teachers who are now seeing a whole new

This week Robyn caught up with some of the students of her former student Bianca Gardener at Kingscliff Primary School.

'Bianca came through the Kingscliff High group and except for going away to university to train as a dance teacher, she has probably been involved in most of the events since it started,' she said proudly as she watched the latest generation of youngsters go through their paces.

'This year she has been involved in choreographing the routines from both Pottsville and Kingscliff Primary schools.'

The event, hosted alternatively by Tweed and Lismore, will be held over four performances on Monday and Tuesday at 11.30am and 7pm (May 31 and June 1) at the Lismore Workers Club.

Tickets for the matinee are available at Kingscliff High while night event tickets are available at the workers club.

Mayor refuses to explain sacking

Ken Sapwell

Mystery still surrounds the shock sacking of Greens councillor Katie Milne from the council's Aboriginal Advisory Committee last week.

Mayor Warren Polglase has refused to explain the reasons behind the unprecedented move or comment directly on suggestions it is linked to planning advice she was entitled to give to the AAC.

'I'm not in a position to say anything,' said Cr Polglase after being asked this week if he had received any complaints about Cr Milne's role on the AAC as one of two council delegates.

AAC shocked

The 4-3 decision to terminate her appointment at the last council meeting has shocked AAC members who say they've valued her input since her appointment after the council was elected 21 months ago.

It followed a mayoral minute hatched after Cr Polglase called a closed-door meeting to discuss what he said was the AAC's failure to deliver on council's objectives to support the local Aborigines and Torres Strait Islanders.

But the minute did not attempt to explain how her removal would improve the AAC's performance, and two councillors who voted against the move complained that the reasons cited at the confidential meeting were 'very vague.'

Cr Milne said this week she was devastated by the decision, describing it as the worst time of her political life.

'I still haven't been told why I've been removed,' she said. 'I am still convinced it's because I've raised planning issues relevant to indigenous and cultural heritage matters which some people would prefer were ignored.'

These included plans to concrete over a waterway in the unformed Ozone Street at Chinderah which triggered a late submission from the AAC that was ruled out of order by council bosses.

Cr Milne said she had never passed on any confidential information and any suggestion she had been remiss in her role as a delegate were unfounded and part of an ongoing smear campaign.

Her sacking follows a stand-off between the AAC and its surviving council delegate, Dot Holdom, over secretive council attempts to impose new controls which came to a head at the AAC's last meeting.

The AAC gave a big thumbs down to the changes which Cr Holdom, whose vote was crucial in axing Cr Milne and appointing Joan van Lieshout as an alternative, tried to impose after winning narrow approval for their implementation at a closed-door council meeting in February.

She wanted members to provide a 'full written list of all executives and members of their organisations' as well as a 'full written report each month of any comments, amendments and general feedback' from the organisations and the creation of a master list to assist streamlining the committee.'

List opposed

Minutes of the last AAC meeting reveal that the AAC unanimously opposed the compilation of a list of names of members' contacts in the wider community for privacy reasons. Sources say they were seen as unnecessarily intrusive.

Cr Milne this week defended the AAC's refusal to co-operate, saying her colleagues should have discussed the matters with members first before pursuing them though a confidential notice of motion with council.

'The council convenes many committees but none of them are required to furnish the council with names of all their organisations' members, or for the committee members to provide written reports each meeting,' she said.

Cr Milne said she could not say whether her sacking was in anyway linked to the stand-off, but believed it more likely connected to the Ozone Street issue and others she raised with the AAC.

'This includes the $42 million Arkinstall Park sport centre proposal for which council seems to have forgotten to do a cultural heritage study which has obviously upset the mayor.'

Cr Holdom was also remaining tight-lipped, saying only that she didn't believe Cr Milne's sacking was related to the AAC's refusal to adopt the changes, but conceded it 'could possibly' be related to advice she gave the AAC.

Dragon boats for charity

This Sunday's second annual Tweed River Corporate Dragon Boat Festival at Condong will be a massive fundraiser for the local club and a solid final hit-out for three intrepid members of the group.

Helen McLean, Di Wilson and Robyn Sack are off to Canada next week as part of the Gold Coast Dragons Abreast crew. The trio, all members of the Mt Warning Dragon Boat Club which now boasts more than 50 members, will attend the world Dragons Abreast Championships in Petersburg, Canada. The event, for breast cancer survivors, attracts women from all over the world to get together and paddle, compete and celebrate life.

But first the trio will be out on the Tweed River from 9am on Sunday helping their local club raise money and awareness of the sport of dragon boating.

It is the second-time the Murwillumbah-based group has held a corporate event and numbers of crews have risen from 12 for last year's initial competition to 22 according to club president Chris Lonie.

Mrs Lonie said the event was one of the club's major fundraiser. And at the moment they were closing in on having enough money for a second boat. The first, the Lady Annette, was purchased last year thanks to community support and the sales of lots and lots of homemade pickles and jams.

More than 400 people are expected for Sunday's competition which will start from 9am off McLeod Street, Condong. All races will be held over 200m and spectators are welcome (there will be plenty of pickles on sale).

Experts line up for environment day

An imposing array of environmental experts will attend the fourth annual World Environment Day celebrations in Murwillumbah's Knox Park next Sunday, June 6.

Two of the keynote speakers are architecture professor Janis Birkeland from Queensland

University of Technology, who wrote the book Positive Development, and palaeo-environmentalist Mary E. White, who wrote Earth Alive: from Microbes to a Living Planet.

Others include botanist and author Robert Kooyman, the first person to discover the Nightcap Oak, a Gondwanan rainforest tree new to science, and permaculture expert Robyn Francis.

The celebrations, the fourth put on by the Caldera Environment Centre, will run from 10am-3pm, with this year's theme being biodiversity.

Wildlife carer honoured by IFAW

Tania Phillips

After developing rheumatoid arthritis which left her living on a pension, former Save the Whales crusader Ilona Roberts could have rested on her laurels but it seems taking it easy is not in her vocabulary.

turned her attention from the global whaling problems to the plight of local Tweed birds and animals.

That was 12 years ago and since then Ilona has been a tireless worker for the Tweed Valley Wildlife Carers (TVWC). Last week her work was recognised by the International Fund for Animal Welfare (IFAW), becoming just one of five Australians honoured in the group's Action Awards as part of the 17th annual Animal Action Week.

'From grass owls and gulls, to flying foxes and waterbirds, Ilona is an expert in the rescue, rehabilitation and care of so many animals,' IFAW Asia Pacific Director Erica Martin said.

Ilona has long been involved in trying to help the wildlife of the world, working with the Save the Whales, Project Jonah, in the 1970s to help end Australian whaling. She represented PJ International at the 1978 IWC in London before travelling with the late David McTaggart (then head of Greenpeace in Europe) and helping to highlight an illegal whaling station in Spain.

But in the late 90s she was hit by rheumatoid arthritis and the former yoga teacher decided to move to the Tweed. Unable to work she went on a pension.

'But I felt like I needed to justify the money I was getting, I wanted to earn it, so I went along to a meeting of the Tweed Valley Wildlife Carers,' Ilona said.

Since then she has been involved in saving and rehabilitating a large number of animals and birds. She specialises in birds (although she admits to having a soft spot for the much-maligned fruit bats and often looks after adult possums and bandicoots).

She said while development increased in the Tweed, so would the need for carers, drivers and other TVWC supporters. For info call them on 02 6672 4789.

Terranora bridge link plans revived

Ken Sapwell

Tweed Council will dust off 12-year-old plans for a third bridge over the Terranora broadwater linking the suburbs of West and South Tweed Heads.

The council voted 6-1 at last week's meeting to endorse a notice of motion by Kevin Skinner asking planners to investigate the possibility of resurrecting the project which was shelved amid objections from residents.

Cr Skinner said he believed a bridge linking Lakes Drive near Seagulls Leagues Club with an extension to Kirkwood Drive at South Tweed Heads may be the best long-term solution to fixing worsening traffic congestion on Kennedy Drive.

He said with new developments in the pipeline, including Cobaki Lakes and The Rise at Terranora, it was time the bridge plan was re-examined.

'Widening Kennedy Drive will only be a band-aid solution. We should be looking at all options,' he said.

Cr Skinner said he owned a house in Lakes Drive when his neighbours mounted a campaign to force the council to cancel the $12 million project in 1998.

'I didn't join the protests but some were naturally upset because the road past our homes would have become very busy.'

'The bridge had cleared all the preliminary environmental hurdles and I thought then that it was a good solution to our traffic problems. It's obviously going to upset some residents but so will any other option we try.'

Only Greens councillor Katie Milne voted against the move.

Greens heavies to visit Tweed Heads

NSW Greens MP and federal Senate candidate Lee Rhiannon will join Greens Senator Rachel Siewert and Tweed Greens Cr Katie Milne at an aged-care community forum tomorrow, Friday (May 28) from 5pm-7pm at Twin Towns Services Club, Tweed Heads.

The Greens will also announce their federal candidate for the seat of Page.

Ms Rhiannon said she was looking forward to speaking to locals and hearing their views and to get feedback on the Greens' priorities for the federal election.

'The Greens are campaigning hard to ensure NSW again has a federal senator working to tackle climate change and give voice to local issues such as aged care and the closing of the abandoned Casino-Murwillumbah rail line,' she said.

Tabloids in the gutter

The latest 'debate' about media and privacy, triggered by last week's television exposé of NSW transport minister David Campbell leaving a gay club, is a sham conducted by people who are paid extremely well to legitimise something nasty and indefensible.

The reasons presented with faux-respectability by tabloid journalists, editors and owners for breaching personal privacy ('it's in the public interest', 'the public's right to know', 'tell the truth and let the cards fall where they may', etc) are no more a pretext for real motives they can never reveal in public: ratings, circulation, profits, generating publicity for your brand, career progression, beating the competition, pleasing the boss and boasting in the pub.

They know it and their colleagues know it. But they can never admit it in public and rarely even acknowledge it in private because even they understand it is often immoral behaviour, and who wants to admit to that, even in private? So it gets wrapped up and justified behind a serious-sounding facade that purports to be about 'the right to know' but is really about commercial self-interest and having fun at someone else's expense.

The editorial culture of the organisations that routinely invade personal privacy – tabloid TV, certain newspapers and weekly 'women's' magazines – is aggressively, deliberately and explicitly led from the top. It is a culture that is constructed, in part, to invade privacy. It is a practice that sits at the heart of their editorial DNA. It is one of the core tenets of the way they do their journalism, and the way their journalism is internally judged and rewarded.

There is only one clear and forcefully policed demarcation line in these organisations when it comes to even the mildest form of covering private lives, and that's when it comes to the private lives of the family and close associates of the owners and senior management of the media organisation itself.

Invading and breaching privacy is a centrepiece of tabloid journalism that will continue to grow iteratively. Whatever they get away with today will be the starting point for what they can get away with tomorrow, unless stronger privacy legislation or regulation is introduced by governments to curb this behaviour.

The big dilemma with the argument for tougher measures – and it's a dilemma that tabloid media exploits to the hilt – is that while there is a powerful argument to curb irresponsible abuse, there is also a powerful civil society argument to ensure that information that is truly in the public interest is not circumscribed by laws that have an entirely different intention.

Which is why the 'right to know' practitioners run the line that it's better to suffer some unfair invasion of personal privacy in order to protect publication of important information – laughing all the way to the bank and the pub as they say it.

Tony digs a deep hole with words

Richard Nixon declared certain of his statements inoperative. George Bush sometimes misspoke. John Howard had his core and non-core promises. And Winston Churchill admitted occasionally being guilty of a terminological inexactitude.

Now Tony Abbott has taken his rightful place in this pantheon of weasel-worded mendacity by confessing that some of his policy pronouncements are not entirely consistent. What he says in the heat of the moment should not always be taken with the same degree of assurance as what he reads from carefully scripted documents.

Or something like that. As his attempts to explain his position to an incredulous Kerry O'Brien continued, he became Jesuitical to the point of incomprehensibility. It was not, as he agreed later in a moment of indisputable candour, his finest interview.

And the real stupidity of it was that all he really had to do was to say that he had changed his mind; that the weight of evidence had persuaded him that the need for a comprehensive, firmly funded system of parental care was sufficiently urgent for him to abandon his earlier ritual pledge of no new taxes. Red Kezza would still have given him a working over, but at least he would not have been lumbered with Phoney Tony for the rest of his career, and he would not have been subject to the harassing he is going to get from government and media alike every time he says anything purportedly serious from now on.

And of course, he would not have had the embarrassment of Barnaby Joyce trying to help him out: 'What someone might say to their lover in the heat of passion should be entirely different to what you would say to the lady checking out your groceries at the supermarket.' Oh, I don't know: 'Do you take American Express?' would seem to cover both situations.

But moving on, it became instantly obvious that assessing Abbott's credibility on any given occasion was going to be even more difficult than he had suggested. Reading from his carefully scripted budget reply speech the previous week, he

And the anger set the tone for what serious coverage there was: Robb's list was derided as ill-informed and misleading, in that it consisted largely of axing proposals that were not even on the drawing board, yet alone actually costing money, like the proposed cuts in company tax, and in selling off capital assets such as Medicare Private. Even many of the current programs that would be axed, like the Building Education Revo-

the Labor lexicon of economic shadow ministers who cannot be taken seriously. It might be time to bring Malcolm Turnbull back into the fold; at least he knows something about money.

This is obviously one area of vulnerability for the coalition, but another is that they are rapidly painting themselves into a corner over what Abbott continues, gratingly, to call Rudd's great big new tax. The miners' public opposition is vigorous and unremitting, but behind the scenes a lot of negotiating is going on and the government is getting some high powered support from Ken Henry in Treasury, whose defence of the tax was comprehensive and passionate, and from Ross Garnaut, arguably the country's most respected economic planner, who described it as elegant, if badly sold and in need of the odd tweak. GetUp's supportive advertising campaign isn't hurting either.

Most of the hard heads accept that some sort of Resources Rent Tax is inevitable; the only question is how much ground is the government prepared to give. Almost certainly the answer is, not much; the political imperative is not to be seen to be backing down in the face of threats and bluster based on pure self interest. It is more likely than not that an agreement will emerge before the election, and that it will be one that can and will be portrayed as a win for the government; which will leave Abbott, yet again, without a central issue.

To be consistent, he should continue to oppose what will still be a great big new tax on mining industry, even if it ends up being in a form that the industry accepts. But as last week demonstrated conclusively, Abbott has never been obsessively concerned with consistency.

The real stupidity of it was that all Tony Abbott really had to do was to say that he had changed his mind.

by Mungo MacCallum

had stated – even promised – that the opposition's proposed spending cuts would be fully detailed by Joe Hockey at the Press Club.

Nothing heat-of-the-moment about it: this was a serious and considered commitment. Or so the prima donnas of the press gallery believed when they fronted on Wednesday, only to find that Hockey had flick-passed the commitment to Andrew Robb. He blandly announced a grand total of $46.7 billion and went on to give a talk on what he somewhat grandiosely described as his economic philosophy.

The hacks took this as a serious affront, and unanimously decided that Hockey's failure to deliver was the real story; what he actually had to say was no longer relevant. Robb did belatedly appear to hand out a list of proposed savings, and to answer a few questions, but the news coverage centred around Abbott and Hockey's unforgivable snubbing of the people who really run things in Canberra.

lution, would be replaced by others in the same field which could, as Robb proudly admitted, be even more expensive.

Independent economists estimated the total real savings as somewhere between $5 billion and $8 billion, which did not even cover the cost of new coalition promises already announced; even if Lindsay Tanner's estimate of $15.7 billion is an exaggeration, items like Abbott's direct action on climate change won't come cheap. The Australian, as always, tried to do its bit: under Hockey's headline figure of $46.7 billion it published a list of everything that could conceivably be regarded as a saving and quite a few things that couldn't. Even so, the total only came to $42.6 billion – but hey, what's a few billion between close friends?

Perhaps there are a few more candidates for Julia Gillard's NAPLAN numeracy tests. Or perhaps the list just wasn't very well scripted. It seems likely that Merry Andrew will join Phoney Tony and Sloppy Joe in

The real Kings Forest

The recent letter from John Fihelly displays how naive and ill-informed he is. He has obviously never been to Kings Forest or he would know that the estate contains an extensive area of native vegetation and recognised core koala habitat! True, the development could have been underway by now if the greedy developers had made provision for the endangered wildlife to traverse the estate, but like most developers they try to save money. It's not about being green, it's about preservation John, and speaking up only when you know the facts!

■ Re the recent letter in The Echo from John Fihelly: I have photos of a mother koala and baby taken in Kings Forest last year. Perhaps Mr Fihelly should have taken a walk instead of flying over. I think the elderly local people he has been speaking to should join him. Thank you, Christian Ellis, for your reply letter on April 22, I don't need to say more.

No surprise

Why would anyone be surprised at Katie Milne's dumping from the Aboriginal Advisory Council (AAC)? What the council wants is no opposition to anything they want to do. And let's face it, the majority of the councillors are not representing the people of the Tweed and don't appear to have any backbone. None of them care about the environment that they are destroying for future generations. We are caretakers of this land and they are ruining it.

I hope all Aborigines dump the council as they must realise council doesn't care about their opinions either. Mind you, it shows how worried they are about Katie Milne. It must be a thorn in their side that she has 99 per cent of the people behind her. It shows what one good caring councillor can do; we need six more like her, the rest need dumping. Sooner rather than later, before all our beautiful areas are concreted over like they want to do with Chinderah's natural waterway – just so a developer can line his pockets.

How we feel

Surely it must be a joke or is Cr Joan van Lieshout just putting feelers out to see if people in this area really care? Did many

Is it journalism or just PR?

I am taking the unusual step of forwarding to you a letter which the Daily News refused to print. I do so because it demonstrates how critically important The Echo is to the community:

I've read the Tweed Daily News for 16 years and hope your new layout wins you readers in the face of competition from free weeklies. However, there are those who buy the Daily News for just that, daily news, and we are being shortchanged.

I often have difficulty determining whether what I am reading is the work of a journalist or a developer's press release; and I am also appalled at the values promoted by such 'articles'. It would be unrealistic of me to expect investigative journalism comparable to Watergate, but I would appreciate some exercise of judgement.

On April 10-11 your front page trumpeted 'Penthouse Hits Sky-High $3.7 mil'. The article was spread over two pages, quoting the developer at length, but contained not one word of evaluative comment. On April 13 we read instead the words of a real estate agent, offering a '$7 million mansion, Casuarina's... largest'. Its owner had used it for holidays! And on April 21 we learnt '$23m estate releases last land'. The author was honest enough to fit quotation marks around most paragraphs but offered no comment.

As for the values proclaimed thereby, Peter Unger, in Living High & Letting Die, having been advised by UNICEF that the cost of guaranteeing the survival to age seven of a child in the 'Third World' was $400, declared that every time we spend $400 on something we do not actually need, we are sacrificing a child. If that be so, the purchaser of the penthouse I referred to has sacrificed 9,250 children, and anyone paying $7 million for the house at Casuarina will be condemning 17,500 children to a premature death! Such self-indulgence is surely obscene.

I emailed this letter on April 30 and two weeks later I phoned the editor to ask if it would in fact be published. Her first thought was that it must have gone astray, but after I had emailed it again she replied with great honesty: 'We will not be publishing it. We reserve the right to choose which letters we print, and as yours was mostly negative towards us, we will not be running it this time. Please feel free to write again on any other relevant topics or issues you feel strongly about. We value your feedback.'

So, you can see why we need The Echo, and why I among many would be happy to subscribe, even if we can't have it daily!

Rev Dr John Tyman

• If you see an injured animal stop and render assistance. If it's alive, call Tweed Valley Wildlife Carers (TVWC). If it's not check the pouch for live young.

• Remove dead wildlife from roads so other animals don't feast on them and end up the same, dead. (Keep disposable gloves in your car).

• Keep your dogs and cats in a run or on a leash at all times.

• Replace barbed wire fences with single wire to eliminate entanglement.

• Write to council and demand overpasses and underpasses in wildlife black-spot areas.

• Join TVWC. Even if you can't be a carer you can pay dues or help with transport, carpentry, phone duties.

• It's illegal to kill native animals without a permit. The law states that you must stop and render assistance to an injured animal hit by your car. Contact NPWS for more details.

• Plant trees and habitat for wildlife being lost to developments caused by human overpopulation.

Finally it's very important for all those who care about wildlife to speak up against the council's proposal to dam Byrrill Creek where there are 43 threatened species of fauna within five kilometres of the Creek.

Speak out against the Repco rally going through sensitive and biodiverse areas – in the breeding season especially. Speak out against Kings Forest/Cobaki Lakes which has 30 threatened and endangered species.

Speak out against all unsustainable developments. The biodiversity crisis is more important than climate change

FRIDAY 28

SATURDAY 29

WITH LILITH

This week welcomes the month of Gemini birthdays with planetary news flashes ranging from shocking to astonishing to historic to life changing...

ARIES: The worst way of meeting this week's challenges would be a classic Aries head-on battle stance. Far, far better to embrace the infinite flexibility principle as Uranus moves into your sign for a thrilling new seven year cycle, with Jupiter only another week off. . .

TAURUS: This intense week could reveal unresolved feelings you're holding on to from the past around love and money – flashbacks which keep unfolding until Friday's full moon in your astro-zone of shared values opens a more abundant new chapter in the Tauran life story.

GEMINI: Happy birthday Geminis! You mediagenics are even more in the spotlight than ever this week and it's important who you choose to associate with, so be discriminating.

Not to mention practising the fine art of telling unwelcome truths without getting others offside.

CANCER: This week's conditions are unpredictable and I can see you already reaching for the catastrophe-proof Crabshell. But Galactic Command hasn't really got it in for you and Friday's full moon presents some quite brilliant new ways to make changing circumstances work for you.

LEO: After some possibly punishing exchanges, Friday's outgoing full moon in a fellow fire sign will pay off if you engage with others on a level playing field – or become a date with drama if you don't. Steer clear of impulse spending on expensive unnecessarys.

VIRGO: With Friday's full moon in your domestic sector even if it's the last thing you feel like, lavishing love on your home zone and its occupants is a must. Don't cling to habitual ways of operating – insisting on how things ought to be will only cause extra stress.

LIBRA: As opposing needs exert a magnetic pull in different directions, this week intensifies your existential balancing act between optimism and realism, living the dream vs. paying the bills – but early week Libra moon helps you juggle diverse agendas into some kind of manageable package.

SCORPIO: This button-pushing week mixes a dynamic social cocktail which could agitate personal relationships. But midweek Scorpio moon can bring a profoundly transformational shakeup if you're open to it, so stay tuned to that sixth sense that always protects your best interests.

SAGITTARIUS: Is that you spitting sparks because someone's behaving like Barbara from Bankworld? Strategic planning works better than direct confrontation this week, so cool it till Friday's annual full moon in your sign – then nothing could stop you diving into the many-splendoured attractions on offer.

CAPRICORN: While it feels like everyone and everything's blocking your every move right now, it isn't and they aren't. It's more like if plan A bombs and falls over, plan B suddenly gets up. As one encounter dents your confidence, the next reboots it. Stay positive.

AQUARIUS: Inconsistency levels are high right now and decision making isn't particularly easy for anyone, but could the cosmos still be supporting radical adjustments to your career, relationships, finances and life path? It could, so convert the stumbling blocks this week presents into stepping stones.

PISCES: Pisceans are probably best equipped to deal with the current fluctuations, tribulations and relationship complications if they remember just this one thing: intentional acts of generosity to those who deserve it are more rewarding this week than random acts of kindness to strangers.

CHESS by Ian Rogers

Play at Seagulls Club, Thurs 6-10pm

Since the World Championship match ended last week, the two competitors have been revealing some secrets behind their preparation.

Defeated world title challenger Veselin Topalov has disclosed that he was granted access by the Prime Minister of Bulgaria to a huge 'cluster' supercomputer.

In contrast Anand, who successfully defended his title in Sofia, went for what he described as a 'human cluster': employing four Grandmaster seconds but also receiving advice from the mighty trio of Kasparov, Vladimir Kramnik and Magnus Carlsen.

Carlsen, the 19-year-old world number one from Norway, has been friends with Anand for some time and had helped the Indian with his previous world title match in 2008.

Given Carlsen's exalted new status, Anand was reluctant to approach the teenager this time, but Carlsen volunteered to help and the two played a series of training games in March to test Anand's plans for Topalov.

Kasparov – who had worked officially as Carlsen's trainer in 2009 – also approached Anand, who then sent a series of queries to the Russian ex-World Champion to check against his famed opening files.

Kramnik, accused by Topalov of cheating during their 2006 world title match, had more reason than most to hope that Anand defeated Topalov, but his help came almost by accident and only during the match.

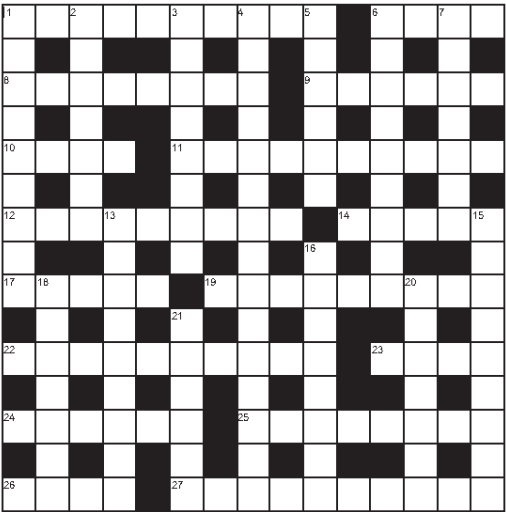

Kramnik was whinging about Anand's poor opening choices – mostly Kramnik's own openings! – to a friend of Anand's and the two were put in touch with each other. Anand later admitted 'Kramnik's help was actually priceless.'

Of course Anand could not afford to neglect the technical arms race, so when he learned during the match that Topalov had the IBM supercomputer, the Indian World Champion managed to obtain a 16 core computer for himself; far weaker than Topalov's machine but still exceptionally fast.

In the end, Anand plus his human team managed to outwit Topalov plus IBM by the smallest possible margin – principally because Anand's nerves were stronger than those of his (human) opponent.

Last week's solution

Better Hospitals – Better Health

More Doctors and Nurses

To deliver better hospitals and health care we need to address the national shortage of GPs and nurses.

The Rudd Government has already taken action to fund 1,000 new nurse university places every year and we are doubling the number of GP training places which will mean an extra 5,500 GPs trained over the next decade.

We will also increase the number of specialist doctor places, delivering an extra 680 specialist doctors.

These extra doctors and nurses will improve patient care and help take the pressure off our hospital emergency departments.

JUSTINE ELLIOT MP
FEDERAL MEMBER FOR RICHMOND

● HEALTH POLICY

Decisive action to build a better hospital system

The Rudd Government's Better Health – Better Hospitals reforms will:

- ✓ Establish local hospital networks which will be funded nationally but run locally
- ✓ Train 6,000 more doctors
- ✓ Cut hospital emergency department waiting times
- ✓ Give local doctors and nurses the authority to make decisions
- ✓ Deliver 1,300 new hospital beds
- ✓ Guarantee elective surgery waiting times
- ✓ Deliver an extra 2,500 aged care beds
- ✓ Provide 20,000 extra young people with access to mental health services
- ✓ Introduce tough new uniform national hospital standards

Nurses are backing these important reforms

“Nurses and other health staff have argued for the buck passing and blame shifting in health to stop and we believe this proposal will help to do that.”

Ged Kearney, Federal Secretary of the Australian Nursing Federation, 3 March 2010

Better Hospitals – Better Health

Cutting emergency waiting times

Sun Herald 11.04.2010

A new national 4 hour target for emergency department access in public hospitals will reduce the currently unacceptable waiting times in hospital emergency departments.

Under the new 4 hour target, to be rolled out progressively from next year, public hospitals will be expected to ensure that patients who present to an emergency department are within four hours either:

- Admitted to hospital;
- Referred for follow-up treatment; or
- Treated and discharged.

The Rudd Government will also invest in targeted hospital infrastructure to help public hospitals redesign emergency departments to treat patients more effectively.

● CANCER CARE

Investing in a world class cancer care system

The Rudd Government is building a world class cancer care system focusing on cutting edge research and improving services for patients in rural and regional Australia.

Significant investments include:

- ✓ Investing in new cancer research and treatment centres that will provide state-of-the-art cancer treatment and focus on research to treat rare cancers
- ✓ Building a network of regional cancer centres
- ✓ Investing in prostate cancer research centres

The Rudd Government is investing in new cancer research and treatment centres.

- ✓ 44 McGrath Foundation specialist breast cancer nurses employed and trained
- ✓ Replacing 205 mammogram machines with new state-of-the-art digital equipment
- ✓ Expanding the National Bowel Cancer Screening Program

Waiting times for elective surgery to be cut

The Rudd Government will guarantee elective surgery waiting times and set a national target that 95% of Australians receive elective surgery within clinically recommended times by 2015.

To help hospitals reach these goals, the Government will provide funding for the equivalent of around 90,000 extra elective surgeries across Australia.

The Rudd Government will also invest in elective surgery infrastructure including designated Elective Surgery Centres which will mean shorter waiting times for patients.

Better Hospitals – Better Health

1,300 new hospital beds

1,300 new hospital beds will be delivered under the Better Health – Better Hospitals reforms, providing more care for patients and reducing the pressure on public hospitals.

1,300 new hospital beds will be delivered.

Better mental health care

The Rudd Government will take full responsibility for primary mental health care such as services for anxiety and depression.

Our investments in mental health will provide 20,000 extra young people with access to mental health services, more mental health nurses and individual care packages for up to 25,000 people with severe mental illnesses.

● WORK UNDERWAY

Health initiatives already underway

- ✓ Increasing GP training places by over 100% to improve patient care and help take the pressure off our hospital emergency departments
- ✓ Funding over 1,000 new nurse university places every year to ensure patients get the care they deserve
- ✓ Upgrading the emergency departments of 37 hospitals around the country
- ✓ Delivering new elective surgery equipment and operating theatres for 125 hospitals and delivered more than 62,000 extra elective surgery procedures
- ✓ 36 GP SuperClinics to be built across Australia and 35 health infrastructure projects
- ✓ Providing incentives for doctors to work in rural and remote communities
- ✓ Increased aged care places by nearly 10,000
- ✓ Introduced a health check-up for every 4 year old
- ✓ Introduced a Medicare Teen Dental Plan, which provides around $150 to teenagers each year for a dental check

2,500 extra aged care beds

PM comes to rescue of elderly parked in hospitals

Mark Methorell

Sydney Morning Herald 12.04.2010

Too many older Australians end up in hospital because they can't get in to see a doctor. The Better Health – Better Hospitals reforms will provide our seniors with more doctors and extra investment in aged care including:

- ✓ Investment to improve GP and primary care services to aged care homes;
- ✓ Providing a much needed boost to community aged care services in rural and remote areas;
- ✓ Extra funding support for older Australians in hospitals who can't be cared for in appropriate aged care services; and
- ✓ Supporting an extra 2,500 aged care beds.

ALANNAH FOX AT CABARITA BEACH BAR FRIDAY

Andrea Soler

Andrea has been back in the country for a little while now, after performing at festivals throughout Europe. She plans to stay here for this year but will revisit OS next year. I asked her how Australian musicians compare to the OS scene. 'Australian music rocks!' she says. 'After all my travels I came home and found that the standard of players is just as high if not higher here than overseas. It's a very distinctive sound!' The life of a travelling troubadour can be a financial hardship due to the lack of monetary return, however Andrea sees it much more optimistically. 'In this job you have to be good with people,' she says. 'Not only an audience, but venues and the media. Communication is the key and it requires much more skill than just being a musician.' As for her inspiration, she is inspired by musicians that 'use their music for a positive message,

GLO Dance with Deya Dova and DJ Pulse

All on board for the next GLO Dance at Uki Hall, Uki from 8pm. The nights are always big, so if you wanna boogie or chill by the fire and sip some chai then here's the op. The night features Deya Dova and DJ Pulse.

The Nones

New Brisbane psychedelic rock band The Nones perform this Saturday at the Sheoak Shack, Fingal Head. Their influences include Radio Birdman, The Monks, Link Ray and

His Ray Men and Jefferson Handkerchief. Sheoak Shack, Fingal Head 7pm this Saturday.

Room Upstairs

'We have developed a set list of jazz/swing tunes based on classic standards and added our own style to them,' says Room Upstairs press. 'We have a set of instrumentals, swinging dance tunes and also some slower ballads. We recently had the privilege of sharing the stage with the Harry Lynn Trio, which we thoroughly enjoyed.' See them at the Luffley Cafe this Friday.

Dolphin Awards

Presented by the North Coast Entertainment Industry Association (NCEIA), the Dolphin Awards showcase what the Northern Rivers region's musicians have to offer. Entries for the 2010 Dolphin Awards are still open and close May 31. The NCEIA Dolphin Awards are open to all original recording artists, songwriters and composers, graphic artists and video producers, both amateur and professional. Visit www.nceia.org.au or contact Gary Pinkerton on 0412 046 227 for entry details.

Wendy Rule

'I'm excited to be returning at last to northern NSW,' says Wendy. 'This is a truly gorgeous and special venue.' Directions to the Castle: leave Uki towards Murwillumbah. After 3kms turn right into Braeside Drive, then right into Bonnydoon Rd. The Castle is 500 metres up on the right hand side. Please park in street. Her new CD will be on sale and refreshments and chai potion available from 7pm. Friday May 28, Castle on the Hill, Bonnydoon Rd, Uki. Cost is $20.

For bookings please email Sue Collins at sumaree@bigpond.com or visit www.wendyrule.com

Paul Greene

For the opening night of D'Alliance, The Soundlounge presents Paul Greene. Greene's three and a half octave voice, catchy melodies, witty lyrics and unique arrangements make him one of Australia's most exciting musical prospects. His music is a magnificent concoction of soul, folk, pop, roots and rock which he delivers all by his lonesome, with only a battery of well worn guitars, a stomp-box and a belt full of harmonicas for company. One of those rare artists whose songs are infectious and easily accessible, yet full of depth and complexity he is equally as well versed as a songwriter and an interpreter of other people's material. This will be a rare band show, the first time Greene has toured with a full band for a number of years. The new album Everywhere is Home will be released on April 19, 2010. May 28, Soundlounge.

VEGAN FOR LIFE

They say you are what you eat, so while I'm a flesh consuming 'pig', by applying the same cliché, that would make my vegetarian friends 'nuts'. Pigs and Nuts don't mix. I attended a BBQ at a friend's house in Nimbin recently (yes I know, BBQ in Nimbin is an oxymoron) and was bemused to find one of the other guests wearing what looked like an eight year old's t-shirt. It was a midriff. Exposing the snail trail is an unusual look on a 50 plus bloke, although he could get away with it, being Keith Richards thin. For a minute I thought he was an actor from Spinal Tap, or the host's attempt at a practical joke. How funny, Nick's got a real live 1970's hippy here! Let me guess, Grateful Dead? The shirt screamed in giant bold lettering: VEGAN FOR LIFE. That's a rather aggressive choice of moniker for a friendly backyard sausage sizzle. It felt like the micro shirt was no accident. It was his attempt to spread the word, one barbie at a time. VEGAN FOR LIFE isn't moderate. It's extreme. That's like going to church with a Nietzsche shirt blaring the good news to the congregation: 'GOD'S DEAD'. Or rocking up to work at a child care centre in a 'SUPPORT DENNIS FERGUSON' tee. I have to say, Mr VEGAN FOR LIFE was not the picture of health or happiness. He looked miserable and hungry. He was just a bloke with low zinc and a protein deficit in the presence of meat. Being vegan is a pretty major lifestyle choice. It means that unless you circulate with other vegans, chances are you are going to be the dude in the corner sulking into his lettuce leaf. It means that your meat eating friends are heartless killers, tearing into flesh sambos with carnivorous abandon. My attitude towards vegans is the same as my attitude towards Born Again Christians. You're weird. Go Away. That's a joke. (I have to explain that because both lifestyle choices demand the removal of the humour gland.) Now my furry fundamentalists, I respect your personal choice but all I ask is, don't shove your belief system down my throat. It's busy, there's an atheist sausage in there already. From a pure 'walking light on the planet let's consume chemical free food' I actually like the idea of being a Vegan. In reality, I couldn't do it. The best I could manage is a slogan that read 'VEGAN FOR A WEEK'. It's just so unsatisfying. I didn't fight my way to the top of the food chain to be eating tofu. I'm all for salad, but I'm just not ready to commit. Take the 'L' out of Salad and it's... SaaD! Vegans look depressed. Who could blame them, all they have to look forward to is lentils and macadamia cream. No wonder they're so angry. They stopped eating meat to save animals. Ironically, if you want to save an animal, then start eating it. By human design it's in our best interest to ensure that animals in the food chain flourish. Want to save the panda? Start eating them. Pretty soon there will be panda farms all over China. By now I can say pretty much what I like about Vegans because they're so low in protein and B12 they would have fallen asleep. They'll want to hit me, but they'll always be three beats behind. (If you've tried to get quick service at a health food store you'll know what I mean. There's a satellite delay from the brain to the mouth.) I can understand being a vegetarian, I once managed two years as one myself. But Vegan? A life without cheese? Sure, you might live longer, but what would be the point? You can't eat cheese! A friend lent me a book called 'Skinny Bitch'. I just thought it was a nice way of telling me I was fat. Turns out it was Vegan propaganda! I'd just been to see one of the best nutritionists in the country who told me I wasn't eating enough protein and I had to increase my meat intake. Next thing I read this book by two anorexic women from some American modelling agency who advocated being Vegan by basically not eating anything at all. They also claimed to be nutritionists. Now I'm confused. To Meat or not to Meat... that is the question. Even the Dalai Lama has started eating meat. Pretty soon he'll be in one of those posters you see at the butcher's holding a tray of eye fillet sharing his cooking tips: 'I just use a knob of butter, garlic and compassion... it's how I get it so, tender!' I'm printing my own shirt, it says 'CHEESE LIFE'.

COMEDY

Shut Your Goblet

Curumbin RSL kicks off D'Alliance Festival with El-liot Goblet, one of Australia's most original and best loved comedians. As the master of deadpan, his style has been described as 'mentally altered', 'offbeat but on target', 'slapstick in reverse' and 'realism coated with the ridiculous'. MC for the night is Joel Salom. An international comedian/circus performer, Joel has MC'd Spiegel tents in San Francisco and most recently pulled full houses at Portugal's Circus Festival. Dynamic, inventive and engaging, Joel Salom is one of the country's most awesome talents. Mandy Nolan will be support. www.tweedecho.com.au

Her passionate politically incorrect rants and her offhand self deprecatory confidence has her fast becoming a favourite on the coast. Book early – the shows have sold out the last couple of times. Tickets are $15/18 and are available at the Curumbin RSL. Doors open 6.30pm for a 7.30pm start time. For further information visit www.curumbinrsl.com.au or call the club on 07 5534 7999.

FESTIVALS

D'Alliance Festival

Throughout the daytime on May 29, the 2010 D'Alliance Fringe Festival will showcase local and national performers. On Saturday from 10am to 4pm the carnival includes circus acts, visual arts, comedy, film, theatre, street performance and an endless stream of musical talent. At 4pm the free entertainment concludes, and the event will then be ticketed from 6pm to 10pm.

Phoenix the Wanderer Evening Garden Spectacular

The night time garden show 'Phoenix the Wanderer' is a one hour multimedia spectacular which features a contemporary folk tale. This is a beautiful simple story with a positive environmental message told by a live storyteller accompanied by visual graphic art, animation, ambient lighting, sand sculpture, a pyrotechnics display and fire dancers. Interspersed throughout the story is a selection of the Gold Coast's finest musicians playing their own original music, composed specifically for the show and woven lyrically and musically into the storytelling itself. The 35 piece Gold Coast Youth Chamber Orchestra will be accompanying the storyteller with some timeless classical pieces, selected specifically for this performance by conductor Ben Singh. Some of the featured artists in this production include members of local acts Tijuana Cartel, Kwerkshoppe, A French Butler Called Smith, Igloo and Wunluv alongside other local talents Andrea Soler, Loustar, Mark Duckworth and more. The evening will also feature performances by Juzzie Smith, Mr Om and A French Butler Called Smith finishing up the night.

Closing the D'Alliance festival at the Palm Beach Parklands will be five short films created by our D'Alliance workshop attendees plus the 1971 feature film 'Willy Wonker and the Chocolate Factory'. So bring along a picnic blanket, the whole family and enjoy free cinema under the stars. Starts at 6.30pm. A single adult ticket is $23 and a family pass is $55, if you buy it online in advance and there is every chance this event could sell out so it's recommend getting tickets in advance to avoid disappointment. For more information and to buy tickets online visit Curumbin RSL's website www.curumbinrsl.com.au

THEATRE

Caravan

Murwillumbah Theatre Company (MTC) is taking their latest production Caravan, on tour, hitching up the caravan and taking it on the road. Written by Donald MacDonald, Caravan takes a light-hearted look at friendship, age and holidays that you should never have. The play hits home with the laughs, while it raises issues about fidelity and monogamy. It tells the story of three couples who spend their summer holiday together in one small caravan at a secluded camping spot somewhere on the northern NSW coast. The confined space of the caravan, a series of mishaps and sexual liaisons and a week of flooding rain, all combine to create a funny play that will take you to a place you fondly remember but would like to forget.

MTC will be setting up camp at the Cabarita Beach Sports Club on Friday June 18 and Saturday June 19, Cudgen Leagues Club on Friday June 25 and Saturday June 26 and finally at Greenhills on Tweed in Murwillumbah for two only dinner shows on Friday July 2 and Saturday July 3. All shows commence at 7.30pm. Tickets are $15 at the clubs (available from Cabarita 02 6676 1135 and Cudgen 02 6674 1816). Tickets are $37 at Greenhills on Tweed (including a two-course meal with bar facilities) and are available from Murwillumbah Music shop.

The wrap on Cabaret 360 2010

On May 21, Cabaret 360 at the Uki Hall sold out, with over 200 tickets three days before – they even had 60 people on their waiting list! Director Hamilton Barnett and the not-for-profit Ukitopia Arts Collective did not let the audience down; the guests were treated to a wide variety of over 35 performance artists from the region with some of the highlights of evening including Ivy Hekimian's burlesque comedy

LEAVES IN YOUR GUTTERS?

Protect your home from flooding and fire with Allclear Leafguard.

One of the ways home owners can be prepared is by ensuring their gutters are free of leaves and debris that could easily catch fire or cause flooding.

The Australian made Allclear Leafguard made from colorbond steel can save you all the hassles of blocked gutters and cleaning as the wind blows the leaves off the leafguard.

The product developer, Ron Lienert says, 'I saw a need for an effective leafguard. Its unique design stops leaves laying flat and also circulates air to blow the leaves away, eliminating cleaning problems and reducing fire hazards.

'When the leafguard is in place it cannot be seen from the ground, so it does not ruin the appearance of your roof. Allclear Leafguard is recognised as the superior leafguard on the market.'

THINGS WE LOVE

Searching for that special something for your home, the perfect fashion accessory or gift? 'Things We Love' in Coolangatta offers an all embracing retail experience with a difference. The response from both locals and holiday makers alike has been overwhelmingly positive, the general consensus being 'it's just what Cooly needed!' Owner Alexandra named the store after her personal buying philosophy – if you look for 'things you love' others are bound to enjoy them too, and it is proving to be a highly successful strategy. The range includes home decor, lighting, kitchenware, glassware, handbags, jewellery, accessories, sleepwear, baby gifts and due to Alexandra's never ending quest to source individual and unusual pieces, changes on a regular basis.

TAS surf and turf inductees

On the weekend, 16 new athletes were inducted into the Tweed Academy of Sport in the sports of Tennis and Surfing.

This was made possible due to the great support from the community. Rainbow Bay Realty, who recently held a successful fund-raising golf day involving many local businesses were able to contribute $14,000. The Academy also received $5000 each from South Coast Mazda and Twin Towns.

On Saturday, at the Casuarina Rec Club, eight tennis athletes were inducted: Hannah McDonald, Amber Mollay, Reid Feehan, Blake Keblewhite, Aaron Westerlund, Trafford McCory, Grace Hyde and Aaron Toynnton.

The Tennis Squad's head coach will be Rhys McDougall who has 17 years tennis coaching experience. He is an accredited Advanced Coach in Australia (TCA) and is currently coaching a Davis Cup professional player.

On Sunday, at the Sandbar Convention Room, eight surfing athletes were inducted: Skye Campbell, Thomas Halloran, Connor Hayes, Jarrod James, Taylor Telling, Max Tobin, Sam Vande Wakker and Ryan Zietlow.

The Surfing Squad's head coach will be Gary Cruikshank from Surfing Australia's High Performance Centre who is a Level II accredited coach and brings to the program eight years of coaching experience. He has had three years surfing with the Australian Pro Surfing Association and three years on the Association of Surfing Professionals.

The program will operate for approximately twelve months. The squad will meet monthly from May 2010 to March 2011. During the intense part of the program, sessions will increase to twice weekly for an eight week period and will involve fitness testing and programing, fitness sessions, goal-setting, time-management, nutrition, injury management, psychology, community service and public speaking.

'It is very exciting for the Academy to have the opportunity to develop the junior surfing and tennis talent of the region,' says executive director of the Tweed Academy of Sport Margie Coleman. 'The Tweed Region is perfect for the Academy of Sport. It has some great talent, superior training facilities, ideal climate and access to expert personnel for athlete education.'

'The Academy would like to launch a future stars group which would be a combined group of athletes who may have a smaller number of junior elite athletes in their sport. Netball and Rugby League may also be launched around September, but is restricted by funding.'

Coleman also goes on to say 'The Academy is also seeking financial support from Government departments. A lot of money is being contributed to upgrade or construct superior facilities in the region. Financial supporters to the Tweed Academy of Sport programs and athletes would complement these new facilities.'

As the Academy is a not for profit organisation, it relies heavily on community or government support to finance the programs. Local businesses interested in supporting a new sport can contact Margie on 0413 622 950.

Tournament honours Curtis Finn

A touch football carnival to be held in Currumbin Eagles Rugby League Club on June 13, will bring together the Indigenous community in the name of suicide prevention.

The inaugural Curtis Finn Celebration Touch Tournament is being held in memory of the Indigenous 23 year old whose life was tragically cut short by suicide.

The event will commemorate the anniversary of Curtis Finn's passing and highlight awareness of suicide and depression among young people.

Mr Finn's sister, Tamra Forde, dreamed up the event named in her brother's honour and is busy organising the footy competition. 'Touch football was something he loved and it always brings a lot of people together, so it was a natural progression to use this type of sporting event to commemorate his memory and a support charity,' said Mrs Forde. 'This event is important to us because we want to be able to raise awareness for other families, so they don't go through what we did.

Tamra said that funds can be raised to implement more programs and information so that young people know they have someone to talk to, even if this saves just one family, it will be worth it. 'My brother was a real outgoing, caring and free spirit who always wanted to help others out and was always the life of the party. His sporting ability was second to none, and he was involved in professional NRL teams and top Gold Coast football teams. He was a natural athlete that loved any sport.

Mrs Forde said that her brother's death made her realise how much we really love our brothers and sisters, saying he was one of her best mates and was always the first one she would call when she had something good happen to her or when she wanted to talk footy. 'He has made me a stronger person today and I'm grateful for every little thing that happens to me and for everyday I have to impact others lives.'

The Touch Day will raise money for the Inspire foundation, an organisation which combines technology with the direct involvement of young people to deliver innovative and practical online programs that prevent youth suicide and improve young people's mental health and wellbeing. 'Inspire is the charity to which we have decided to donate the money we raise. They are involved in young adults issues like mental health, social health and overall well being,' said Mrs Forde.

'It has been hard to get to this point and now Curtis' anniversary is coming around we really want to do something to celebrate his life and what he stood for.

'So many people have come forward to help out and it is amazing how many people it has affected and want to be part of something bigger,' she said.

Donations to Inspire foundation can be made to www.everydayhero.com.au/curtis\_finn

Killer Whales nip Gents in the butt

A slightly understrength team of Gentlemen were narrowly defeated by Evans River who were playing in front of an extremely vocal home crowd.

The first half began with a terrific performance by the Gents forward pack who completely dominated the set scrums and were punishing in open play, resulting with them taking an early lead.

The Gents were guilty of some lazy tackling towards the end of the half, allowing Evans River in for two tries.

At the break for oranges The Gents coach, Peter Crittle, was clearly annoyed that some basics of the game of Rugby were forgotten by his charges.

The second half began as the first half did with the Gents forwards again dominating, unfortunately the Killer Whales ran out of props resulting with scrums being uncontested for much of the half, thus denying The Gents much needed possession

An amazing try was scored by Nigel after some great forward play and a try to Chris reduced the deficit to three points, 14-17 being the final score.

Next Saturday the Gents are at home at Murwillumbah Leagues Club (Banana Park), at 2.20pm, to Yamba the runaway leaders of the competition – a tough one.

The first TGMRU Ladies Day for the home game v Yamba is on May 29. Upon the Plantain Deck overlooking Banana Park there will be a fine selection of local seafood and other delicacies from the mysterious hills of Uki, plus refreshments from the Cavenish Bar and lucky door prizes. Cost is only $15 in total. Please RSVP philipbrown@optsunet.com.au by Friday May 28.

Colourful adult restaurant operator Warren Armstrong delighted councillors when he announced a few months back he was selling up his iBar in Tweed Heads, claiming he'd been driven out by wowsers even though he had removed lap dancers from his menu. It now seems Mr Armstrong has rethought his exit strategy and decided to bring back some raunchy entertainment with a new sign spruiking 'exotic caged dancers'. It infuriated mayor Warren Polglase, who ordered council staff to see whether it was possible to have the cage dancing stopped and the sign removed and is awaiting a report. Councillors believe the activities in the bar, which was once the venue for the council's tourist bureau, is a blight on the multi-million facelift for the Jack Evans Boat Harbour which is proceeding apace only metres from Mr Armstrong's 24-hour operation.

Echo editor Luis Feliu and Cr Phil Youngblutt became embroiled in a heated exchange at a council meeting room on Tuesday afternoon at the end of a presentation by ecologist Steve Phillips on last year's world rally. It came when the editor asked why rally organisers were quick to remove certain roads before the event due to concerns over wildlife impacts and other unspecified issues yet went ahead running a stage through the well-populated Byrrill Creek Road which was bound to upset the locals. Luis was put off his train of thought by a rude interruption by the councillor, who jumped in to provide a smart-arse answer along the lines that 'they're all growing marijuana up there'. Luis replied the councillor was slating a whole community as criminals and the altercation was becoming a little spiteful before a timely intervention from council's PR woman. Our editor's report of the incident afterwards was restrained, but Backburner wouldn't hesitate to Caldera Regional Arts Committee project manager Andy Reimanis after the launch on Tuesday of the Caldera Art 2010 art prize at the Tweed River Art Gallery in Murwillumbah. The art prize, sponsored by Tweed Shire Council, aims to raise awareness of biodiversity issues in the Tweed. Entries for the award close on August 20. say that having an ignorant buffoon as a councillor does Tweed Shire no service either in reputation or performance.

In last week's report about what some media outlets have dubbed a super brothel, the quote 'To refuse this on moral grounds will see us ending up in court and we will get belted and the brothel will go ahead anyway,' should have been attributed to Cr Kevin Skinner rather than Cr Dot Holdom. Backburner thought it the most sensible thing said all night, but we're happy to put the record straight.

What Dot actually did say fired up newspaper editors on the lookout for the oddball viewpoint in Brisbane, Sydney and Melbourne. After walking the streets and staking the area out in her car armed with a camera, she concluded it was a facility where 'fathers and mothers of physically limited adult children' could take their charges, and was not prepared to pass a moral judgement. She told AAP: 'And we talk in terms of "super brothels" but what makes a super brothel? Is it the amount of people that work there, or is it the amount of people that go there, or do they have a big sign that says "Hi everybody, I'm a Super Brothel"? I'm sorry, I don't mean to be rude and I'm not even trying to be funny, but good grief what do they do, dress up in character costumes - I'm Superman, you're Batman, I'm Spiderman?' Backburner will allow the mayor, aka Teflon Man, to put the record straight: 'The application had about 50 employees involved in a two-storey building, operating 24 hours a day, seven days a week.'

Uki's annual cultural show Cabaret 360 at Uki Hall last Friday night was again sold out three days before the event with 60 people on a waiting list. Organisers, the Ukitopia Arts Collective declared this year's event 'far sexier' than last year's with 'four beautiful burlesque ladies' greeting the guests at door. Guests were treated to a wide variety of over 35 performance artists from the region. For those who missed out, pre-orders for a DVD of the colourful show are being taken on ukitopia@gmail.com.

Are the fat cats on the payroll of Events NSW having a laugh? They've saddled the Tweed Valley with an economically dubious car rally which few people want, then last week they announced the removal of the popular Wintersun festival which injects an estimated $25 million into the Tweed and Coolangatta business community. Arts Minister Virginia Judge made the announcement via press release rather than in person, presumably to avoid the wrath of locals incensed by the stab in the back. She failed to say how much Events NSW are putting up to relocate the long-running home-grown festival, which will go to Port Macquarie next year. Typical of the Sydney-centric polities with an embarrassing lack of local knowledge, Ms Judge was triumphant about stealing the festival, which she thought had been 'held in Queensland since 1978'. The notion that an event straddling the border might benefit two states is apparently too complex for Macquarie Street.
